The most promising mines in Siskiyou at the present time are the ones owned and operated by Billups, Quiglev & Humphrey, on Barkhouse crcek. Klamath river. These mines will doubtless prove to be the biggest bonanza in the mining industry that Siskiyou has experienced for a number of years, and will prove to be the richest quartz mines ever developed in the county. There are seven different ledges leading into one large ledge and the ore prospects from $6.50 to $40 a ton. They have just purchased a 10-stamp mill, with which they will be enabled to crush a much larger quantity of ore than with the twin arastra which they have at the Commadore mine. They have been realizing $100 a day from rock crushed in their arastra. Dr. E. G. McConnel came to Yreka this week for the purpose of leasing the Quinne & McConnell claim at mouth of Humbug creek to the China Company which has worked it in years past. The Chinamen will commence operations immediately to work the claim this season. This claim has been one of the best on the river in years past, and under the right management will doubtless do kiac. as well in the future. Songer run the Pacific mine last year, which is this side of the McConnell claim, but it did not result successfully.

A protest against the opening of the Cascade range forest reserve in Oregon is made in the following resolutions adopted by the executive committee of the American Forestry Association, which has been in session here:

"Whereas, We hear with regret and apprehension that an effort is now being made to secure the restoration to the public domain for entry and disposal of three-fourth of the lands comprising the Cascade range forest reserve in Oregon, which was created only two years ago by proclamation of the President after due and careful consideration and upon the recommendation of the secretary of the

The most singular situation in French politics since the founding of the third republic has been presented during the recent winter. The constitution of the state declares that a cabinet shall resign when a vote of parliament is pronounced against it. The quarrels of a French cabinet have heretofore been with the lower house, the chamber of deputies, never until now with the senate. The house, being the larger and more influential, has always had its own way in deposing an objectionable ministry. This time, however, the tables were turned The Bourgeois ministry was supported by a majority of the chamber of deputies. The senate was unalterably op- were many who favored putting the posed to its policy and the senate mean- various other demands in the backtime claimed the same right as the house to down a ministry opposed to it. The fact that the crisis has been generally regarded with a feeling bordering on indifference by the public shows that under republican government the excitable French people are learning nobly to keep their heads on and remain cool when tempests arise in the political teapot.

A foolish and antiquated custom still prevails in some parts of making jurors and witnesses kiss a Bible when taking oath to do the right thing in the matte in court. It is a relic of superstition as sewer, but the State pays for it. This was the work of the late reform legislature that the Republican state platform waxed so innocent. "Calamity Howlers Hooted Off the Stage" While Starvation Is Perpetuated. [Special Correspondence.]

One of the New York dailies says, editorially, on Feb. 8: It is time to consider how the great bond sale may affect the prospects of parties. The silver mountain and forest lands which are unfit for agriculture by reason of their uggedness and altitude, would benefit stage, etc.," give any clew? Here in America, as in every other civilized ountry, the authorities offer a pecuniary reward for the finding and the recovery of a drowned person, a corpse being, therefore, of greater financial value to boatmen than a resne. The French government has now inaugurated a scheme of providing monetary rewards for the saving of people from drowning, and the innovation is one which merits the consideration of our authorities here, since to a man who has a starving family at home the temptation to allow a person to drown for the sake of securing the reward granted for the finding of a corpse is so great that it may prove in some cases beyond the power of re-

This wise, respectable New York daily paper hoots calamity howlers because we are able to run ourselves in debt $100,000,000, with interest for 30 years, and on the same page coolly in- itable. He kept this up for some time, but of course, as he had to pay interest, it could not go on always. Another man took the business, got it on to a cash basis and made a good living out of it. The successful note writer died in miserable poverty.

Cash is so much better than credit. If bond business means, a howl of calamity would rend the air such as was heard in Egypt when all the firstborn were slain. The Quality That Tells. Two young people, each equally well qualified intellectually and physically for their work start, out to make a career for themselves. At the end of a year it is easy to see which will be successful. One may be thoroughly correct in his work, doing all that is necessary mechanically and conscientiously. That mysterious quality of warm interest in whatever he undertakes creeps out from him to his task and envelops as an atmosphere all about him. He loves his work, he likes to please his employers, and best of all he likes to please himself by bringing out of his task all there is in it. He has enthusiasm. He suggests new plans, he finds opportunities for improvement, he sympathizes with the aims of his employers

The True Labor Question. Labor Commissioner Carroll D. Wright has ideas of his own on the present so cial strife. He considers this strife inev-question is something more than the adjust ment of any process, method or condition. The All this newspaper jubilation over labor question is simply the everlasting and 'the great bond sale' reminds me of a undying unrest that, born in the human breast man I knew many years ago. He was carried the Aryans far from their home in the east, almost around the globe, until they seek again their starting point. They have been fighting with obstacles from the beginning, overcoming them and meeting with new ones. In strife they have populated the earth and brought us civilization, and we today have in our veins the lifeblood that ran in the veins of hose Aryan ancestors of ours. We have inher ited all the unrest and all the push and drive that have made them powerful everywhere. Strife has been necessary to all progress; but while of old the conflict was one of arms, it is now one of ideas and views. There has been a change from militarism to industry; hence we have economics. Society is now struggling with the so called unrest. The labor question the people only understood all that this is the everlasting struggle to reach a higher place, to secure something better than human

> The only real remedy for existing evils is to be got not by abolishing but by softening the inevitable strife. The true remedy of present evils consiste in the practical application of the highest ethical principles, and these are perhaps best found in the Christian religion. There is coming a revival in which we shall have a religion that shall include the whole church, industry, com merce and the whole social fabric. The house did right to strike out from the Indian appropriation bill all sums for the education of Indian children at sectarian contract schools. Experience has shown that it was impossible for zealous sectarians to keep from sowing in the fallow Indian mind the doctrines of their particular faith. The temptation was too great to be resisted. The equally zealous follower of an opposing creed did the same when he got hold of the despair than all the wars in which the pupil, and the result was, on the whole not satisfactory. The untutored Indian intellect could not tell whether the Presbyterian, the Baptist or the Catholic was the infallible belief. When the red child of nature has disposed of his breechclout and thrown aside his tomahawk and feathers and learned to read, write and work for his living, it will be time to put before him the merits of some of the differing theological beliefs
