This company has to have the free use of water through authorized in June, 1935."

The Hammond-Carpenter Case. In the late Medford city election Oscar Carpenter accused Austin S. Hammond, a Medford attorney running for the office of mayor, of having bribed and swindled him outrageously. Besides circulating his story every day by word of mouth, Carpenter published his case against Hammond in an open letter under his own signature in the Record just previous to the campaign. If true, the statements therein showed Hammond up in such a damning light as to move him to cause Carpenter's arrest just before his campaign for mayor closed. Hammond was bound over to appear before the grand jury, Hammond was bound over to appear before the grand jury, Hammond was bound over to appear before the grand jury. The grand jury immediately returned "not a true bill" against Mr. Carpenter. This will not cause Mr. Hammond to pay back to Carpenter his money, but it does not do Mr. Hammond's reputation any particular harm. Some lawyers think their reputation is all right as long as they keep out of jail. Right after the grand jury practically decided that Carpenter was justified in seeing what he did about Attorney Hammond, District Attorney Benson appointed Hammond a deputy district attorney to attend the grand jury during Benson's absence. Just what the purposes of courts and taxes are is hard to understand.

Fire at Sisson-Man Perished. There was a big fire at Sisson last Saturday evening. It originated in the Berryville hotel, owned by De D Downing, and consumed the entire block known as Whisky Row. The 23 Monte Hotel, conducted by A. J. McCoy, was also burned, although all the furniture was saved. Rostov, who had a bar, shop and notion store, succeeded in getting a great deal of his stock out, carrying it across the street into a vacant lot. Nearly all the saloons in the block succeeded in getting their stock out but the fixtures and buildings are a total loss. These saloons were erected in a hurry, and were of an inflammable character, so when the fire once got hold of them, there was no chance of saving any of them. The fire started about a quarter before seven o'clock, and in an hour's time the block had been consumed.

On Sunday morning the charred remains of a man were found among the debris of the Berryville hotel, and the Coroner was immediately telegraphed for, and an absence justice of the peace, R. W. Howe, was called to Sisson for the purpose of holding an inquest. The evidence showed that the man's name was Wallace, and he was a well-known rider in the races at the Yreka track last fall. His age was 21 years. The young man had been noticed in Treabury's saloon about 9 o'clock in the afternoon and had gone to sleep in a chair. The bar-keeper asked him why he did not go to bed, when Wallace said he wanted to be there. He then gave him a quarter, and the man went to the Berryville hotel and secured a room, going to bed at 4 o'clock, while the fire did not break out until nearly 7 o'clock. It is supposed the fire started in the room adjoining the one occupied by the jockey. The room was so badly burned that there was no resemblance to a human being, only the arms and legs and portions of a face having been saved. It is supposed that the deceased has parents living in Ogden, Utah.

Contracts for lumber are being entered into, and it is thought that the block will soon be rebuilt, or at least the greater part of it. The loss is estimated to be $100,000 and $400,000, with no insurance.

Land Contest Decision. The following is the decision in the land contest against D. H. Yager of Jenny creek: General land office, Washington D. C. March 18, 1898. Register and Receiver, Roseburg, Oregon. The following is the decision in the land contest against D. H. Yager of Jenny creek: General land office, Washington D. C. March 18, 1898. Register and Receiver, Roseburg, Oregon. The following is the decision in the land contest against D. H. Yager of Jenny creek: General land office, Washington D. C. March 18, 1898. Register and Receiver, Roseburg, Oregon.

The evidence submitted on the issue raised by the contest makes quite a record, but there is no hearing whatever should have been had here. The question whether the land is chiefly valuable for timber is in connection with other facts, tending to show the best faith of claimant, unless it is made by a person who is not a settler.

There is no reason why a settler should enter a tract of land for a homestead that is chiefly valuable for its timber. In fact, it is not valuable for anything else, except as a source of timber.

It does not so appear, but there is some evidence tending to show that this contest was entered into for the purpose of securing timber lands. It is far preferable that valuable timber lands be held by bona fide homestead settlers, than by lumber syndicates or corporations.

Notify the parties heretofore and the contestant of his right or appeal. E. F. Best, Asst. Commissioner.
