What Industrial Education Is. Booker T. Washington of Tuskegee Industrial school gives in Public Opinion some explanation of the reasons which have induced him to devote himself particularly to making skilled working people out of young colored men and women. He is sure such education is the demand of their race and age.

The following sentences apply quite ; water.

Industrial education, so far from teaching an individual how to work, teaches him how not to work; teaches him how to make the forces of nature work for him; how to lift labor up out of toil and drudgery into the atmosphere where labor is ennobled, beautified and glorified. Industrial education is meant much corn as by the old process and with less labor. Without industrial education, when safe to say that 90 per cent of the colored peolife. Since this is true it seems to me that it is the part of wisdom to give much attention to fitting these masses to do an ordinary task in an extraordinary way.
