That Has Seen Prevalent in Chius for Centuries-The Reformer. The nineteenth century craze for the mancipation of women has at last way into the darkness of China, and a reformation has been started of vastly more importance to than the bloomer question and other progressive sisters of the western This new departure calls for the aboall classes of Chinese women, from the poor oreatures slaving in the rice fields to the dainty belles whose fathers hold lucrative public offices. Everything moves with tremendous slowness in China, particularly innovaturies, and naturally it will be a diffiult matter to root out. The greatest problem to be overcome is the aversion of Chinese men to marry women whose feet are not squeezed into deformed objects bearing little or no resemblance to the natural human foot.

As the one ambition of the Chinese girl and of her parents is to marry they willingly undergo the tortures of footbinding to realize the matrimonial A woman whose foot is any where near the size nature intended is an outcast so far as matrimony is concerned. The men deem it a disgrace to marry her, and an unmarried woman is burden to herself and her relatives.

With these conditions to face the reformers are counting upon a hard time The binding process is the acme of torture, as the pain is incessant and extends over a period of many years. The little Chinese girl usually enjoys the full freedom of her feet until she is four or five years old. Strange as it may seem it is nevertheless true that three-fourths of them go to points west of Chicago. while the other one-fourth travels east-

The making of baskets is an important item. Many factories are employed. The price ranges from two to two and a half cents per basket; thus the grower who would find his business in any way profitable must in addition to the cost of the basket realize at least one cent per pound for his grapes, while to-day it is a common thing to find a ten-pound basket on the retail market slow sale at ten cents. Thus we find that the utmost care must taken in the management of a vineyard to make it profitable.—Robert Lew Seymour, in hautauquan.

The curious vernacular known as 'idgin English is a strange mixture of English, Chinese and Portuguese, and is used by most of the natives of Hong Kong and other Chinese ports in their ntercourse with foreigners. Its basis onsists in turning the consonants "r' into "i" and "v" into "b," adding a final "ee" to most words, and above all, the constant use of the word "pidgin," which means business in the nost extended sense of the word. Not long since a gentleman in Hong Kong was interrupted by his servant, a boy of 14, who rushed into the office in a excited manner to inform his master that his wife had presented him with daughter. He gracefully and delicately made the announcement in Pidgin English in these words: "Missy Smith hab got one piecee small cow chilo!"—Chicago Tribune.

The old-fashioned instrument, says a writer in Outing, consisted of an iron needle, one end of which was stuck into a piece of cork. The other end was well rubbed with a load-stone, and when the cork floated in an earthen ware bowl of water, the end so treated pointed to the magnetic north. In spite of the meager knowledge of those early navigators concerning variation and deviation, they generally managed to make a sufficiently good land-fall. It may not be generallly known that a sewing needle rubbed on a magnet and carefully propped into a vessel of water will float and point to the north.
