THE LATE BLOCKADE.

Supr. Fields Reports the Severe Snow Blockade in History of His Division.

Portland Oregonian, Jan. 11. The Southern Pacific had more difficulty in the Siskiyou mountains yesterday. A snowslide struck a freight train in a cut 1/4 mile north of Siskiyou station and blocked the track so that following passenger train, due in Portland at 6:30 last night, was delayed until 4 o'clock or later.

The other side of the Siskiyou another freight train was blocked and delayed the passenger train that is due in Portland this morning at 7:45, so that it will not reach its destination until about 11 a. m. No injury was done except to delay the trains.

The weather was bad in the mountains today, rest day on record for the Siskiyou mountains. Superintendent Fields has returned from the scene of the recent snow blockade, which he says was the worst ever experienced on the line.

The trouble in the winter of 1890, when the entire coast suffered from the severity of the snow and floods, continued longer, but the snow blockade was a comparatively small affair in it. The track was then destroyed by the elements of the Siskiyou Creek, a distance of 40 miles, and for 45 days that distance was covered by stage, and there was no through travel.

The recent trouble was caused exclusively by snow, and a good deal of it was due to the fact that the wires were down and it was impossible to work in trains to advantage. Part of the time the only means of communication between Superintendent Fields, of the Oregon lines, who was at the southern end of his jurisdiction at Dunsmuir, and the superintendent of the Sacramento division, was over Postal Telegraph.

My wife's good advice saved my life. I was once in a very bad way, for I had a cold that would not clear up. I had tried everything, but nothing seemed to do any good. I was getting weaker and weaker, and I was afraid to go on.

It is his wife's advice that I followed, and I am now well and happy. I had a cold that would not clear up, and I was getting weaker and weaker, and I was afraid to go on.
