Louse Creek district, a few miles north of Grants Pass, a new broperty purchased and equipped a short time ago by Eastern people, is making an excellent showing. The mill is kept steadily pounding night and day, crushing rock that is averaging $25 per ton in sulphurets and free gold. The Klondike mine, of this district, is also running steadily and meeting with excellent success, it being another property recently equipped and launched out for basiness. The success of these mines has stimulated a number of other undeveloped properties in the district, and a number of slamp mills are to be erected during the coming year.
