Which Did Not End With Wedding Chimes.

This is a modern love story, only possible in these times of broad education and high ideals. A young woman was left alone in the world by the death of her parents, both of whom were victims of consumption. She was amiable, beau-tiful and had many suitors, one of whom was the man she would have chosen above all others as her husband. But she brooded over the thought that she probably inherited from her parents the fatal disease—consumption. If she married she would, she reasoned, be perpetuating this disease in the children who might be given her, and so she resolved never to marry, turned away from the man she loved and disappeared from society to give herself up to nursing dread disease should claim her.

SPLENDID BUT NOT SCIENTIFIC.

The sacrifice was splendid, but the theory which prompted it was unscientific. Never, in the history of the disease has consumption been so carefully studied as to-day. Scientists in every country are directing their efforts to the eradication of the disease. In many minor things these scientists disagree, but they are unanimous on the one point-consumption is never inherited.

That one ghost which has frightened so many people is laid forever. Before the disease consumption can grow in there. These consumption germs are everywhere. It is doubtful if everyone does not receive them at some time or another. But in the great number of cases they are thrown off. Where they odge and develop disease it is because they find tissues prepared for them by weakness. There is the danger to the children of consumptive parents; they have a tendency to weakness of the ungs and other organs of respiration helps. It almost always cures. It took twelve bottles to cure Mr. Reed, but note how he got faith in the possibility of a cure by the use of "Golden Medical Discovery." The first bottle I took did me so much good that I had faith in it, and continued until I had taken twelve bottles." That's generally the way. One or two bottles of "Golden Medical Discovery" give an appreciable gain in health so that the sick person is encouraged to persevere until a perfect and per-manent cure is accomplished. Of course, some are slower than others in respond ing to the remedy. It must be expected that the smaller the spark of vitality the longer it will take to fan it into a flame. But for the comfort of everyone suffering from weak lungs or other diseases of the organs of respiration, it may be stated that no matter how bad the disease the record shows that in ninety-eight cases out of every hundred Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has effected a perfect and permanent cure. Give it a fair and faithful trial and it will cure you, too,
