Death of the Pope.

On Monday afternoon, July 20th, occurred the death of Pope Leo the XIII who for twenty-five years had been supreme head of the Roman Catholic Church. Born March 2nd, 1810 at Carpineto, Italy, Joachim Pecci, through his family associations which were of a high character, early evinced a devotion to religious life. This, coupled with the death of his mother, a saintly woman, when he was only fourteen years of age, caused him to outline a course and pursue it with the constancy and ability which finally raised him to the papal chair at the death of Pope Pius IX in 1878. That Pope Leo's reign of a quarter century has been one of historical significance in the world's affairs and one of power unapproached by contemporary rulers of nations must be admitted. The passing of no man in our time could be more universally mourned.

Newspaper Men Visit Us.

E. A. Paterbaugh and Paul DeLaney, who have been touring Central Oregon in the interests of the Oregon Daily Journal, spent Sunday and Monday at this place. These gentlemen traveled in a special conveyance with the name of their paper prominently displayed and have had a very successful trip. In traveling over twelve hundred miles Mr. DeLaney has gathered valuable data for the Journal's special Central Oregon edition which will appear about Sept. 1st. Mr. Paterbaugh, the Journal's business representative, is a former St. Paul man, and was for many years connected with the Pioneer Press of that city.

Young Folks Make Merry.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Brock entertained a party of young folks at their home in Lytle last Saturday evening. Games of various kinds and a flower guessing contest were indulged in and refreshments consisting of ice cream and cake served late in the evening. In the guessing contest Miss Marion Weist captured first prize and Mr. Foster the booby prize. Those present were the Misses Keever, Brock, Cox, Weist, Dano and West and Messrs Richardson, Steffe, Kennedy, Brocker, Foster, Brock and Reed.

As Others View Our Country.

F. W. Jacobs and T. T. Jones, of Portland, spent several days at this place the first of the week. Mr. Jacobs had interests in the Bridal Veil country before the fire of a year ago, when he removed to Portland, and he is now looking over the Deschutes country with a view of investing and probably locating here. He has great faith in this region along the line of timber manufacturing and says that Deschutes river timber is the subject of much discussion among Eastern lumbermen who frequently visit Portland. Mr. Jones is an instructor at the Bishop Scott Academy and the trip is in the nature of an outing for him. They continued their journey up the river Wednesday and will look over Lake and Klamath counties and also visit Crater lake before returning to Portland. Both are former Wisconsin gentlemen and are permanently located in Oregon. Mr. Jacobs will return to our city in about a month.

Presbyterian Church Organized.

At the meeting in the school house over which Rev. W. S. Holt presided Monday night, a church organization was effected to be known as the First Presbyterian Church of Bend. A start was made with ten charter members and, as others had previously signified their intention of coming in, it is likely that this number will be materially increased before long. An elder, board of trustees and clerk were elected and installed, and the trustees given the work of circulating the subscription list. The amount subscribed at this time is nearly five hundred dollars. With such a start in membership and subscribed funds it should be no trouble to have a church building at this place within a very short time.

An Endless Fight.

Kentucky, for the past several months, has been furnishing the country not only with whiskey and race-horses but with sensational news. Breathitt county has been very useful to the newspapers. Here has existed for some years a feud, known as the Hargis-Cockrill feud. In sparring for advantage the feudists have thus far killed twenty-seven persons. The Hargis faction are in control of the county offices and a suit was brought to oust them from office by opposing claimants, one J. B. Marcum acting as attorney for the contestants. Marcum was killed and a man named Ewen saw the deed committed. On his testimony two men named White and Jett were arrested and tried for murder. One juror saved White and Jett from the death penalty by causing a disagreement of the jury. He was evidently a Hargis man. Later this juror went to his reward as the result of a gunshot wound. Ewen, the state's witness, did not have an enjoyable time during the trial. The Hargis faction offered him $5,000 to keep silent but he refused; then they burned a hotel which he kept. As a result two incendiaries are awaiting trial. County Judge Hargis, head of the Hargis faction, defended Jett and White desperately. The Hargis people fear that these men, who seem to be only hired assassins, will tell all they know when the death-sentence is pronounced on them, as is likely. This week the grand jury meets in that county under the kindly protection of the militia. The Republican party has nominated Belknap for governor. His platform charges the present governor with pardoning Democratic murderers of the federal type. The sea-grass is probably growing for the necks of a few Kentucky outlaws.
