

A LOVE LETTER TO JAMES.

"Let Us Love One Another," For "In Union There Is Strength."

Bend, Oregon Sept. 30, '03.
Harmony Row.

Dear Jeems:—It has probably been so long since you received a friendly letter, Jeems, that this love letter which I write you will undoubtedly bring joy. I note with more sorrow than concern that you have found a little flaw in makeup. Well Jeems, you may be ultra-suspicious and inclined to be an artist in the construction of unwholesome ideas. You probably know that everything appears unclear to an unclear mind, and Jeems, though I love you dearly, I think your mind would be better if it had a complete sewerage system. Just to illustrate this need of your mind I will remind you of the Fourth of July. A gathering of neighbors desired to celebrate the nation's great birthday in good old-fashioned, loyal American style. Deschutes was the scene of the speaking and games, Bend furnished fireworks and balls, while Lytle furnished a ball-game and participants in the other events. There was not an inharmonious note, but Jeems, just before that occasion you wrote down to the sheriff and demanded that three deputy sheriffs be present to keep in control the unlawful tendencies of your fellow citizens.

Of course, Jeems, we were all desperadoes in this region before you came to town. Everybody is so glad you came. It gives them a chance to reform and make men of themselves. I also notice that you take a fling at the coroner. Jeems, you ought to have your editorial snarl copyrighted, the dogs around town might take to using them without license and have to be killed. One thing about you, Jeems, which no one can fail to admire is your excessive modesty. Although you occupy such high political and business offices you are too diffident to inform the public that you are a U. S. commissioner, a notary public, a school clerk and an insurance agent. Roosevelt, himself, must envy you all these exalted offices. He certainly must have heard of you or he is unworthy of the office of president.

Some men, appointed to such an office as U. S. commissioner, would have got the big-head and would have printed for themselves penalty envelopes instead of relying upon the government printing office for supplies. They might also have used those same envelopes for private uses and got mixed up with a federal grand jury, but you would not, Jeems. On the whole, you are a model man of supernatural wisdom and a regular guardian angel to this most undeserving community. Providence must have decreed that you should come to this decadent community and make the unregenerate hump. You ought to put your hat on a pole in front of your office and make the populace take off their sunbonnets as they pass underneath it, as a tribute to your superhuman wisdom. You should also be a captain of industry. If you should get some pigs, the leading families about town would undoubtedly give you their swill; and if you should quarter the pigs where you now live in Harmony Row and should move to some other part of town you wouldn't be missed so much. On the whole, Jeems, you are wise, discreet, and a GREAT POET. These qualities account for the love I bear you. Live and rule forever, my own Jeems.

Lovingly,
CYNTHIA.
