Takes the Right View of It.

Several papers seem to advance the opinion that Mr. Moody is persecuted by his political enemies. They cannot by any means prove this, and the opinions are based entirely on nothing more than that Mr. Moody has political enemies. He also has business enemies, and they are not far away from home. Those enemies could have saved Mr. Moody's bank from failure had they wanted to, in 1897. They did not choose to, and the bank was closed. Mr. Moody was not in politics then, but he had business rivalry that for obvious reasons did not wish him well and let his bank fail while solvent. Of this we have nothing to say; such things happen every day in the business world and are forgotten almost immediately by all except the parties directly concerned. It is "cheap suspicion" again for Mr. Moody's friends to bring out such absurd thoughts. The federal grand jury does not indict on anything but information. Whoever gave the information is the party to suspect of persecution, and not the political enemies of the defendant.—Review.

Dynamite Explosion on Swalley Ditch

An accident occurred down on the Swalley ditch last Monday that nearly cost three men their lives. While thawing out several sticks of giant powder for blasting purposes, Jas. R. Benham, Frank Glass and Wm. McFarland approached the fire where the powder had been left to thaw, when the explosion occurred. Mr. McFarland was struck over the left eye by a piece of rock which made an ugly wound but it is thought that the sight of the eye will in no way be effected. Mr. Glass had the side of his face scratched by flying rock and dirt while Mr. Benham escaped with nothing more than a bad scare. Had they been very much nearer the powder when the explosion took place there might have been much more serious results.

A young lady having a proposal asked a week to consider. In a business like way she went to married ladies for information. The first one had been married six years, had three children, did all her own work, including the washing and ironing. Her husband had given her two dollars, and borrowed ten. The next one had quit teaching school to marry a handsome man, she was then supporting him. The third did not dare to say her soul was her own. The fourth was divorced. Summoning up the evidence and considering all the points she decided in favor of matrimony.—Dufur Dispatch.

Noah was the first man to advertise. He advertised the flood and it came all right. The fellows who laughed at the advertisement got drowned, and it served them right. Ever since Noah's time the advertiser has been prospering, while the other fellow is being swallowed up in the flood of disaster.—Chronicle.

Get in Debt, Boys.

Many a man can trace his success to his willingness to incur a debt for the purpose of making an investment where there was a chance of good results. Nearly all great money-making enterprises have been started with borrowed money. Many of them failed at first and brought financial ruin upon their promoters, but they have been wealth producers for the country. Nearly every railroad has been built with borrowed money. When a merchant enlarges his brick block, he usually does it in part with borrowed money. Neither the farmer, the merchant nor the railroad-builder goes blindly into the venture, but with judgment guided largely by experience in smaller operations, he foresees the justification for his investment. He may lose, but he believes in the old saying, "Nothing venture nothing have."—Oregonian.

A Possible Boom.

A mild form of mining excitement up on the Ochoco seems to have broken out this week. Several demands for location blanks were met at this office on Monday and a couple of hackloads of prospectors or locators left for the scene on that day. No particulars could be learned as to what has been discovered, but from certain slips let fall by one of the party just before starting out, the new find is cinnamon. There was a sparkle of eyes and an air of suppressed excitement about the men who took part in the expeditions that would lead one to believe another quicksilver proposition has been discovered. Every one of them scouted the idea that there was anything in it, worthy of publication, of course; but as the men have not yet returned, it is open to suspicion that there is "something doing."—Review.

The legislature of 1903 passed an act changing the time of making the annual tax levy from January to July and it was provided that the new act shall go into effect on January 1, 1904. An assessment has been made in every county in the state in contemplation of a levy in January. The supreme court holds that when the state board of appointment and the county courts hold their meetings in January they will be without any authority to make a tax levy at that time, for the new law has entirely swept away the old.—Oregonian.
