A Peruvian Company Whose Object Is the Plundering of the Dead. A limited liability company has been formed at Mellendo, with a capital of $40,000. It is called the Compana Anonima Exploradora de Las Huscas del Inca, and its business is to be the searching of the old burial grounds of the Peruvian Incas, for buried treasure in money or other valuables. It has received a concession from the Peruvian authorities, and proposes to go at its work in a systematic, business-like fashion. The field of the company has been pretty well worked over already by the horde of hap-hazard plunder ers from all parts of the world, who have flocked to Peru from the times of Pizarro till the present day, but there are yet some very substantial legends of buried wealth that has not yet been discovered. Under the old Castle of Cuzco, for instance, Felipe de Pomanes tells that there is a vault containing figures of all the Incas wrought in fine gold, and that in his own day they had been seen by a certain Dona Maria de Esquevil. She, the story goes, was married to a descendant of the Incas, and reproached him with being too poor to support her properly. This, at last, so irritated him that he led her blindfolded through many winding passages into a room where she saw wealth such as no mortal ever dreamed of, and asked her what she thought of that for a poor man's nest-When Humboldt was exploring n the neighborhood of the Tempie of the Sun, at Cuzco, a pcor lad, a descendant of the ancient kings, told him the story, which is still current among the Indians, that the golden chair of the Incas was sunk in the baths at Pultamarac, and that there are gardens sheath was exposed to view, and every with artificial trees of the purest gold step of the operation was guided by beneath the temple. This same spirit seems to have animated all the descendants of the ancient race of Peru, ter claims that the new operation could and encourages people like those who be performed with certainty and withhave just put $40,000 into the Society Exploradora to hope that only a part of the ancient treasure has ever been discovered. It is alleged that the Indians can generally get gold when they actually need it, as at the time of the rebelion of Pumacaqua, in 1814, when, according to the story of an old woman of the Astete family, told to Mr. Markham some thirty years ago, her father having been a colleague of Pumacaqua and present at the time, Pumacaqua entered the council chambers laden with gold and dripping wet, from a journey he had made up the bed of the Huatanay to a cave filled with golden figures. It was always believed then, according to the historians, that the rebel chiefs had some such store to draw upon; and it is certain that after his final defeat a prominen blind citizen of Sowickley. Village Destroyed by Ice.

Advices from the fishing village of Kersehkaranza, in Kola, a peninsula on the White Sea, describe a wonderful phenomenon, new in Artic annals, which took place on January 5 last At four o'clock in the morning the inhabitants were awakened by a series of heavy, dull detonations, like heavy a tree or forest flashing with all the artillery. Shortly afterward a great ice wall to the northwest, several hundred feet high, was seen to be moving toward the village, doubt hese splendors of the autumn foliage | He was explaining to a companion the less in consequence of the pressure of are the sunshine which the trees have the ocean of ice outside. Dr. Dewecker, of Paris, sixteen or seventeen years ago, suggested that it was possible to open the that it was possible to open the optic-nerve sheath, and thus not only to relieve the nerve from pressure, but also to drain the brain cavity and relieve the brain pressure there. He made two experiments in this line upon two nearly hopeless cases, but he tried to feel his way to the nerve without the aid of sight, and to cut the sheath by means of an instrument carrying a concealed knife which was projected by means of a spring. Only one other attempt of this sort was made, and the results not being satisfactory, the experiments were dropped until last year. Dr. Brudenell Carter, of London, devised a

WAR CYCLORAMAS.

An Artist Explains How They Are Painted and Put Together.

The popular idea of how the war cycloramas, like the Battle of Gettysburg, Battle of Shiloh, Battle of Chickamauga, etc., are painted, appears very laughable to a person who knows how the work is accomplished. The Battle of Gettysburg and the Siege of Paris have been shown for several years on opposite sides of Hubbard court, in Chicago, and the stock paid large dividends. Each was advertised as the work of celebrated French artists, father and son, and the popular idea is that these gentlemen painted as a man's arm, and its length so great General Alexander Hays, whose heroic them. The fact is that, beyond a general outlining of the work, which was probably faithfully made after maps procured from authentic sources. and a general direction of the plan of the work, the artist-in-chief had very little to do with it. No man engaged in a battle sees it, and an accurate painting of two armies in combat his own orders by type-writer for coal is impossible.
