HIATT & HOBSON, Editors and Prop's.

SATURDAY, MARCH 23, 1890.

COLONEL Fred D. Grant, the oldest son of General Grant, has been appointed Minister to Austria by President Harrison.

EX-PRESIDENT Cleveland and party are in Florida on their way to Cuba. Mr. Cleveland is taking a well earned vacation.

MRS. GLASS, of the Yamhill Reporter, is getting up a mammoth edition to advertise McMinnville and Yamhill county in general.

MISS PAULINA FULLER, daughter of Chief Justice Fuller, distinguished herself this week, by eloping with and marrying Mr. J. W. Aubrey, of Chicago.

THE California legislature which adjourned last Sunday morning and then attended a prize fight was composed of a set of hoodlums that would have been a shame and disgrace to a heathen nation.

THE CRISIS, last and only third party paper in Los Angeles, Cal., has turned up its heels. It ought to have died before it was born. There never was a demand for such a paper. If the New York Voice would do the same thing the cause of prohibition would be advanced. Its whole stock in trade is to misrepresent good temperance workers and indirectly give aid and comfort to the enemies of prohibition. The third party will never succeed while represented by such an organ.

WHAT has become of the ferry? There has been talk of putting in a ferry across the Willamette at the foot of River St. for several months, but the scheme don't seem to materialize. It is time to stop talking and begin to act. A ferry would increase the country tributary to Newberg at least twenty-five per cent, and increase the business of the town in a like proportion. Our merchants could then successfully compete with the towns on the east side of the river for the trade of the farmers. That is a fine farming country and we can not afford to neglect this opportunity. We must wake up.

THE Germania Fruit Co., of Los Angeles closed the contract with the Rancho and Los Nietos walnut growers Association on the 7th instant for the entire crop of English walnuts for the coming season, at the following prices: 7 1/2 cents per pound for hard shell and 8 for soft shell. The Germania Co. here executed a $10,000 bond for the fulfillment of their contract.—Downey, (Cal.) Champion.

THE above is only an average return for English walnuts, and there is a fortune for the man who succeeds in raising them in Oregon. The more hardy varieties will surely grow here if proper care is taken. Walnuts return more clear profit to the grower than almost any other crop raised in California. We have known a single tree to bear as much as forty dollars worth of walnuts but of course this was an exception. The average net profit from an acre is about $200 per year and if they can be raised here they will be an exceedingly profitable investment.

NEWBERG is growing faster than any town of its size in Oregon. Dwellings and business houses are being built as fast as lumber can be secured. Carpenters are busy and the sound of the hammer can be heard on all sides. Immigrants are arriving every day and the real estate market is brisk. Trade is lively in all branches, and everybody seems prosperous and contented. The town has more than doubled in population in the past year, and the indications are that the coming year will witness still greater growth. We are becoming better known and men with capital are beginning to recognize that this is a good place to invest not only in real estate, but in all kinds of business enterprises. Better farming, fruit or stock land cannot be found in the state of Oregon, than right here in the Chehalis valley. The large farms are being divided up and can be secured at exceedingly low prices. To those who are looking to the Pacific Northwest for homes, we would say don't purchase until you have seen Newberg and the Chehalis valley. Then if you are not perfectly satisfied, go somewhere else, for there are many other thriving towns and beautiful valleys in Oregon. Newberg will risk getting its share of immigrants to locate here if they will only come and look at the country without prejudice.

Forty Years a Consul.

The oldest consul in the service, who has been able to retain his position after year in spite of civil wars, administrative changes and factional politics, is Horatio J. Sprague. He was born in Massachusetts and appointed from that state. He has been stationed at his post on the rack which controls the entrance to the Mediterranean sea since 1848. He is another who is reported to look upon the place as one in which the dignity of the country should be upheld at any cost. His salary is $1500, and naval officers who have stopped at Gibraltar assure me that they have accepted invitations to dinner at his house, which dinner must have cost him half his salary at a clip. He does not seem to care whether he makes a cent or not, and this being the case his office is to him simply a means of making himself decidedly agreeable to all Americans who visit him with the proper credentials. In this he is eminently successful, and it will surprise everyone who knows anything about the case if Sprague is asked for his resignation.—Troy Press Correspondence.

While a guest was registering at a Southern hotel, a bag of the best variety, slowly crawled over the seat and stopped when it came to his pen. Looking at it a moment he called the clerk: "Give me my baggage," said he. "I've seen and felt them in every clime, but this is the first hotel I ever stopped at where they examine the register to find the number of a fellow's room."—Hotel Advertiser.

An Enterprising Town.

A movement is on foot in the enterprising town of Newberg to increase the school facilities, urgently demanded by the rapidly increasing population. It is proposed to build a school house enough larger than the present inadequate one to accommodate the increased growth of the town for a number of years. It is especially noticeable that the most progressive citizens favor the thorough grading of the school and the establishment of a high school department. As the seat of the Friends' Pacific Academy, Newberg is already one of the important educational points of the northwest. The Academy, which is rapidly achieving an enviable reputation among our educational institutions, will no doubt develop into a college in a few years. The liberal enterprise exhibited by the citizens of Newberg in educational matters is but an indication of the way they manage the affairs of the town generally. A more moral, intelligent, progressive community can not be found in Oregon. Additions to the population in the form of new comers who have been attracted by the fertile acres of the Chehalis valley and the opportunities offered there for the industrious man of moderate means, are being made daily. The location there of this most desirable class of people is chiefly due to the exertions of the Chehalis Valley Board of Immigration, of Newberg, which has acquired large tracts of valuable land near the city, as well as residence property in the city itself, which it holds at reasonable figures for the benefit of immigrants. It is the policy of the board to divide up the surrounding farms into tracts of from five to thirty acres, and hold them for sale to individuals who will improve them and become actual residents and producers. Any one desiring to plant for himself a fruit orchard in one of the most lovely and fertile valleys of Oregon should see what this board has to offer.—West Shore.

The Forty-Niners.

C. W. Haskins of 776 Eleventh street Oakland Cal. is making a list of immigrants who came to the Pacific coast in 1849, who are estimated to have numbered 60,000, and requests any forty-niner whose name is not recorded in the books of any pioneer association to send him a postal card containing the name, time of arrival and route traveled, with the name of the vessel if by water.

A Coming Politician.

A man who would have his son enter, profession he would have his son enter, put him in a room with a bible, an apple and a dollar bill. If he found him when he returned reading the bible, he would make a clergyman of him; if eating the apple, a farmer, and if interested in the dollar bill, a banker. When he returned he found the boy sitting on the bible, with the dollar bill in his pocket, and the apple almost devoured. He made a politician of him.—Ex.

Simon Cameron.

Speaking of himself Simon Cameron said: "The man who makes no enemies is never positive fierce. I began life with a determination to succeed. With what success I leave the story for others to tell. From my youth up it has been a rule with me to be kind to everyone. Still I have made enemies because I have had opinions and the courage to assert and defend them. I am an old, old man now who has lived in the most wonderful days in our history, and when I am gone, all I ask is that people may say that I did the best I could and was never untrue to a friend. There is a virtue in that which lives forever, for true friendship is the quint essence of Godliness.—Ex.

Republicanism and Temperance.

We have at divers times asserted that temperance measures find their supporters in the republican party, both as to party action and influence of the republican men and women. These facts are patent to all who are not blinded with partisan prejudices. In proof of this we refer to all our party platforms and the example of leading republicans. Mr. and Mrs. Hayes threw their influence on the side of temperance by discarding wine from their table in the White House, and now Mrs. Harrison gives us another exhibition of temperance by example. She rejects the wine cup from her table. What Democratic president or his wife has done likewise? Echo answers; what one.—Herald.

The Road to a Man's Heart.

A girl in this town married a very particular and exacting young man six months ago. Her girl friends predicted at the same time that she would fall to satisfy him, and that consequently they would not live together six months. That period having elapsed and there being no evident signs of separation between the happy pair, the girl friends felt called upon to visit the young wife and ask her how she managed to please the man who had never been known to be pleased before. Mustering all their ingenuity they called in a body and asked her for her secret. "What is the recipe?" they asked. "We may need it." "Well, I'll tell you," she replied, "if you'll never tell—feed the brute."—Ex.

Better to be alone than in bad company. True; but unfortunately many persons are never in so bad company as when they are alone.—Ex.

There is one custom which will probably be observed in the White House for perhaps the first and only time, and that is family prayers in the morning. Mr. Harrison ever since his marriage never failed, except when confined to his bed, to hold family worship just before breakfast. The hour for the matutinal meal has usually been eight o'clock, and at 7:30 the family has always collected in the library where the general read aloud a chapter in the bible, and after a few words in comment or explanation he and his whole family have knelt and joined in saying the Lord's Prayer, after which he made a special petition, either impromptu or from a book of prayers. And it is said that neither the president or his wife have any intention of permitting this observance in the executive mansion.—New York Sun.

Biographies of members of Harrison's cabinet are now in order. Here is one: Harrison's Sec. of Agriculture, "Jerry" Rusk, is a good example of what a man can amount to. He used to drive mules on a canal, and had as a companion on the tow path another barefooted boy, James A. Garfield. Rusk afterward drove stage, then was sheriff, member of the legislature, volunteer in the army, congressman, governor of Wisconsin, and may be heard from yet.—Lebanon Express.

For fully three months our farmers have been almost constantly engaged in plowing and seeding their lands. No more favorable winter could have been cut out of any climate on earth for that purpose, and it is claimed that there is now plowed and sown to crops a greater portion of the valley than ever before known. The result will be that our grain elevators will be filled to overflowing and the railroads be taxed to their utmost capacity to carry the grain to market.—Corvallis Times.

The first American flag ever used was carried in the Harrison inauguration procession. It is the property of Mrs. Stanford, of Edgerton, Mass. The bullet holes have been patched up and the emblem is one of great value, having an eventful history. Mrs. Stanford took the flag to Washington herself for the inaugural occasion, last Monday. Her husband advised her to send it by express, but she would not do so for fear of its being lost, and she delivered it in person. She has been offered on several occasions over a thousand dollars for the flag.—Ex.

It is an interesting fact that as soon as the new states have been admitted it will become the duty of the state department to provide a new flag for each consulate, naval vessel and naval station abroad, and for every Federal building in the United States, the flag to contain four additional stars. We trust that the significance of these new stars will not be lost upon Prince Bismark. Forty-two United States will not submit to any tampering with their anthracite coal station at Pago-Pago nor to any interference with the freedom of the American press in its world-circling enterprise in news gathering.—N. Y. World.

It has been said that politeness is like an air cushion; though there is nothing in it, it eases the jolts of life wonderfully. That statement was made either for sake of argument, or because the speaker had no knowledge of the basic principles of true politeness. Mere impersonal civility is far from being good manners. The latter is born of a regard for the feelings of others; the former is a regard for one's personal convenience, combined with a knowledge of the benefits to be derived from the exercise of pleasant manners, even though they be assumed. Generosity, self-denial, sincerity: these are the qualities that characterize true politeness.—Ex.

The first waves of immigration from the east and south have already been felt. The Railroads are heading this way with the utmost haste, far-seeing capitalists foreseeing that for the future the Puget Sound country is the land of promise. The east has had its day, the great Mississippi valley already sees its glory perceptibly fading; it is the Pacific north-west upon which the sun of prosperity is to shine for the future. Certain parts of this region are already feeling the thrill of speculative demand, and other parts are enjoying a steady movement upward in values. The whole logic of the economic situation of the country to-day points to a prosperous future.—Tacoma News.

President Harrison favors the establishment of steamship lines to South America by Governmental aid. It is a notorious fact that England "protected" the great P. & C. S. S. line that gives regular transportation of mails, passengers and freight to all of the East Indies, China and Japan by paying it at one time $2,243,000 annually for conveying the mails. The Royal Mail Steamship Company to the West Indies and Brazil was "protected" to the amount of $1,350,000 annually, and the Cunard line was paid $800,000 annually for many years, at a time when the Collins line was begging of our government about $350,000 to continue its mail service to England, and was refused.—Ex.

"There is a secret in building towns, says the Rantee Range. Do you know what it is? If you don't, you can work out the problem in the following manner: take two townships; let one be in a beautiful location, with all natural advantages possible, and the other with none of these. Take five-hundred old fogies and misers, men who do not believe in giving capitalists anything for risking their money in their town—and put them on the good site. Take two-hundred good, live, energetic get-up sort of fellows who never let an opportunity pass to advertise themselves and their town, and set them on the poor township. Then watch those towns for the next five years, and you will readily catch on to the secret of town building."

It requires no great degree of sense to see that much good can be accomplished by united action. We should all work together, but there are always a few who are not in accord with the views of the majority. It is questionable which is preferable, a knife or stool, but neither is any advantage to a town; but still less should the actions of such a person be allowed to retard progress. Let us stick together more more than ever for we must have united action to insure success; and we should be content with nothing else. Do not let local dissensions arise and when anyone "blocks the wheels" from personal grounds they should be "frowned down." Revenge is sweet to those who imagine themselves to be wronged and some will pray for the downfall of another even though it should cause their own ruin. A spirit of this kind may result in a total disuniting of business unity. Let us lay aside personal prejudices and work together for a common end and our town will surely boom. "A house divided against itself must fall."—Corvallis Times.
