W. C. T. U. COLUMN.

"For God and Home and Native Land."

Mrs. F. A. MORRIS, County Superintendent of Press Work.
 At the Missouri W. C. T. U. convention a salary of $1200 a year was offered to Mrs. Clara Hoffman, president of the state union, in appreciation of her most efficient service. This offer Mrs. Hoffman most emphatically declined, saying that her services would be free, as in the past.

W. C. T. U. work among the colored women of Missouri are making rapid strides. The Harpers union, of St. Louis, paying membership forty-three, during last year raised more than $1300, of which about $1100 was used for the home for colored orphans. These women regularly visit the jails, workhouses and hospitals, caring for those of their own race found there. They have distributed 50,000 pages of literature and are prosecuting many other lines of work.

No more terrible item concerning the Johnstown calamity has appeared, than the following, telegraphed from Pittsburg June 5, and quoted in the Philanthropist: "The astounding discovery was made today that at several stations between this city and Johnstown processes had boarded trains and sought the acquaintance of the younger female passengers. To these unfortunates the unwomanly women offered comfortable homes in their families."

Bishop Hurst, in the current Century, shows that under the 'Out Still' system in India the revenue has increased nearly twenty per cent during the last five years; a financial triumph more than counterbalanced by the amazing increase in the output and consumption of the same, amounting in Bengal to 135, and in some districts 180 percent. He says: "The proof is overwhelming that the temperate Hindoos are becoming a nation of drunkards. Road-side grog-shops are multiplying. In one district in Bengal the government distillery used to turn out five hundred gallons a day. Now, under the new Out Still system, the average is fifteen hundred gallons a day, or three times the former amount. * * * The object of the government has been to grind money out of vice and not to pulverize the vice."

A great deal is said by anti prohibition papers about the failure of prohibition in Portland, Maine. Rev. John R. Crosser, pastor of the Presbyterian church in that place, says there are no saloons there, in the common acceptance of the term; that liquor can be obtained only 'in dirty mean garrets and cellars, kept almost entirely by foreigners, and that a stranger, unless acquainted with the dark and dangerous ways of the devil,' would hardly be able to get any liquor in the city. In the rural districts prohibition is entirely effective.

The New York Star in a recent issue gave an appalling account of women's drinking places in New York city. How many Christian women would be utterly shocked to read of the 'ladies' bar' at Millard's, of six tables full of women ordering drinks, 'absinthe cocktail,' a 'pony of brandy,' champagne and sherry; or to hear of the women's brie-a-brac store where young girls and matrons indulge in all sorts of liquor from beer and milk punch to whiskey and brandy. Yet the Star has not a word of censure for these practices but describes the disgraceful scene with apparent relish.

The Broadaxe, of Manistee, Mich., discovers the following suggestive instance of 'automatic moral reform.' During the progress of a lawsuit in that city the fact came out that Albion college, of the same state, an institution for 'making preachers, almost wholly supported by leading Christian temperance men, had loaned a large sum of money to Andrew Johnson, a Manistee saloon keeper, to be used in the business of making drunkards, the interest to return of course to this Christian college. As the editor tersely puts it: 'Preachers by collecting funds for the college, make drunkards by loaning money to saloon keepers, and drunkards make preachers by paying dividends to the college.' The editor concludes that on second thought this condition of things is not so strange—that it quite accords with our social customs; that the government, for instance, by carrying on the liquor business, makes drunkards and then appoints officers to arrest them; that it makes cities like Chicago through a bad land system and then, after breeding anarchists, turns around and hangs its own off-spring; and that it makes brothels, hell holes of gambling and murder pits and then tries to suppress them. Has not the Broadaxe struck near the truth?

A half loaf is better than none. But is it better if poison is in it?
 Twenty saloons are better than thirty. Are twenty murders better than thirty, if in lessening the number by ten the government must issue its formal license to commit the twenty?

The Anna M. Kellog Memorial hall, at Chataqua is completed and the room for the W. C. T. U. will be furnished by June 1.

A loyal temperance legion at South Framingham Mass., four months old, has a pledged membership of 220 and an excellent plan for holding the interest of the children. The names of all members are to be placed in a bank vault and left there undisturbed for ten years. They will then be brought forth to commend or condemn their pledged owners.
