THE WEST END SCANDAL

Liable to Overthrow Monarchy and Establish a Republic.

LONDON, Dec. 15 .- It is asserted that 'the West End scandals," as they are called, may result in upsetting not only royalty in the kingdom, but also the rule of the privileged classes as well. In other words, that they will end in bringing about speedily a republic upon the ruins of the present monarchy and house of lords The fact that Prince Albert Victor, eldest son of the Prince of Wales, and therefore heir to the British throne, is connected with these scandals, either personally or criminally, as is freely charged, or as is officially admitted, by the connection with them of his inti-mate friends, of course make their political effect most momentous.

It is the opinion of practically every thoughtful man in the kingdom that when the scandals are fully inquired into by parliament and all the frightful de-tails become public property, either Prince Albert Victor will be deprived of succession, a proceeding almost impossi-ble of conjecture, or that Queen Victoria "Handsome Harry" Carlton was hung will be officially declared the last monarch of Great Britain, and that a republic will immediately succeed upon her death sack. The less the better, of course The art is not to put in as much as you can, but to leave out as much as you can for, after you have been walking for six hours every ounce tells its tale. Say you can get at your portmanteau once a week, your knapsack ought not to con tain more than a night-shirt, a flannel shirt, three or four collars, six pocket handkerchiefs, two pairs of worsted socks, a pair of slippers, a couple of pairs of boot laces, sponge, toothbrush, somb and hairbrush, soap, a small book, your tobacco, and a pair of light trousers Those gentlemen who shave must decid for themselves whether they will carry their own razor, etc., or be shaved by the village barber; I should recommend the latter. But recollecting that you start dressed, the articles above mentioned ought to serve your needs for six or eight days. The knapsack, when packed, ought not to weigh twelve pounds if it is to be carried by one person for any length of time. I was once advised on no account to go without quinine, as a most valuable medicine, and which would also act as a "pick-meup" in case of fatigue. Arnica, too, was suggested. Somebody else advised sticking plaster, (not a bad thing, either, to have with one, but scissors are then necessary, and there are at once two more things to look after.) "I suppose you never travel without a brandy flask?" was Rye flour. another question. "Always," was my answer. I took one with me once a long time and one of my friends broke it twenty-four hours after we had left London. I believe now that he broke it on purpose, but had not the courage to say so, and that was his way of teaching me to do without it. I never want brandy in the mountains and why should I burden myself with the extra weight of a flask? If the pedestrian wants to carry a medicine chest on his back he should have strong shoulders. I have omitted any mention of a mackintosh; they are unpleasant to walk in and I should think the straps of the knapsack would tear them. I have always preferred to trust to Providence for finweather, and, with a few exceptions, I have been well treated. I do take with me an extra pair of trousers— which I feel to be an infliction—and have some three or four times asked the landlord to lend me a coat. I prefer this to carrying a mackintosh on my knapsack. Some men like to take a stout umbrella in place of a walking LUMBER-ROUGH stick. This will keep off wet partially
