The weather has been too vigorous of late to keep many tramps in the Northwestern banana belt when tlement made by one Sekheuren, in the they can get to the Sunny South simply by walking it. It is a curious thing about the tramps. Their wandering movements about the country are just as fixed and certain as those of the migratory birds. The cold weather finds a vast army drifting toward the South, and with the approach of spring the flood rolls northward again. Along toward harvest time they pour into the Western harvest fields in thousandsmany are attracted by the high wages prevalent at that season, but many are undoubtedly attracted thither by the fact that every one is busy and there is an open field for the exercise of their maranding propensities. Last spring and summer there was a universal movement toward the Pacific coast and the overland tracks were black with a continual procession of tramps west ward. ## Hot Water and Dyspepsia

Another hydriatic method, which acts by removing the cause of disturbance, is the sipping of hot water an hour before meals, in dyspepsia. The hot-water craze, which now has taken a firm hold upon the lay public, is but the legitimate outcome of a valuable therapeutio application of water, whose simplicity commends it at once to the judgment of the intelligent physician. Brought into prominence by Dr. Salisbury, who committed the error of most enthusiasts of regarding it as a panacea for most diseases, it has now been adopted by the profession as a most valuable agent in many gastric troubles.
