I fear what I have said about Upper Egypt looks too much as if I was seeing it through rose glasses Thirty six years ago, when Bayard Taylor and I traveled in the east together, I suffered terribly from fleas. The only pun I remember him to have made was anent the little tormentor. He said Homer wrote the "Iliad." Virgil the "Æneid," that if I ever wrote an epic it would be the "Flead " I had hoped we were about to escape this Egyptian plague, but yesterday after lunching in one of the old tombs of the kings we lay down for a napon the sands; but my donkey boy desiring to please the old man, whom he flatters by calling his "father." spread the blanket and saddle for me to have a nice siesta Ah! moment of mad forgetfulness I slept an hour, but the Nemesis came This particular tomb is now called the "lunch tomb" Hundreds have lunched in it this season, though it is where no living thing is seen, and ap-parently nothing can live, yet the sanded floor was full of my mortal enemies, brought to it by the many donkey boys, who in its shade rest while their employers are wandering among the mighty caves of the dead I have passed a good part of my time since then as a ben with one chick does in an empty chicken yard-scratching I am like certain officials not far from the old court house in Chicago-only more so They have itching palms. I am all palm I itch all over and am raw in patches. Ex Mayor Carter H Harrison's The base Letter of Chicago
