J. T. Smith paid the Italians to give the Academy students an exhibition with the bears, Wednesday. The students enjoyed the performances so much, that they expressed their gratitude to Mr. Smith for his kindness, by a vote of thanks from each room.

J. B. Mount has rented the large store room in the bank building, and will occupy it in about a month with his stock of stoves, hardware and tinware. This is one of the best store rooms in town, and Mr. Mount may congratulate himself on having secured it.

Notice to Tax Payers.

Tax payers will take notice that the taxes for 1890 are now due and the Sheriff, or his deputy, will be at West Chehalem on Monday Feb. 2nd, at Newberg Tuesday and Wednesday, Feb. 3rd and 4th and at Dundee Thursday Feb. 5th. One and all are requested to be present and settle their taxes without delay.

W. L. WARREN,
Sheriff.

A liveryman over from North Yamhill Wednesday said the snow was twenty inches deep on the Tillamook road over the mountains. Several teams have gone over since the snow fell. The snow in the mountains up to the present time has been unusually light.

J. V. Montague a real estate man of Portland was in town last Friday. He said he was out looking for a tract of fruit land for a friend of his at Rockford Ill. He found a piece that he said he would recommend to his friend. Newberg is the place that can furnish just tracts.

We believe in giving every one a fair show to get some of the choice bargains we have, and would invite the readers of this to see our Bankrupt Stock of Goods in the New Bank Building. This is entirely separate from our main store.

MOLMIS, MILES & Co.

G. W. Mitchell, Dr. A Mills and Cyrus Hoskins went to Portland Tuesday to take in the State Horticultural meeting. Mitchell and Hoskins were both on the program and we expect to hear a favorable report from their part in the exercises.

A petition is out which is being variously signed, asking a steamboat company on the lower river to put a daily passenger boat on the route between Newberg and Portland. A fast boat line that would make the trip in a day and give three hours in Portland would be liberally patronized by our people.

It is generally understood that we are to have a new time table in a few days. A passenger and mail train will probably pass here for Portland about 8 o'clock in the morning and return in the evening giving passengers five hours in Portland. This will be a great convenience to those of our people who have business to transact in the city.

A couple of itinerant Italians with a large three year old black bear, and an ordinary sized cinnamon bear, struck the town last Wednesday. The hat was passed around and a few nickles dropped in, after which the usual performances were gone through with, to the delight of the little folks and big folks.

John F. Heacock came up from Smockville Wednesday night to attend the revival services. He said they were ready to begin plastering the new Friends' church, and would dry it out with stoves, and get it ready for use as soon as possible. Rev. J. H. Douglas will dedicate the church as soon as it is finished, and a revival meeting will follow. The members at that place look forward to this meeting as a time when great good will be done, in the way of turning men from sinful paths. The prospects are favorable for a live church at Smockville.

The regular meeting of the horticultural society will be held tomorrow afternoon. The subject for discussion will be "The varieties of fruit to plant for profit," which will be opened by Cyrus Hoskins. Mr. Hoskins has had more experience with fruit and has made more money out of the business in the past five years than anyother man in the valley, and his experience given in opening this discussion will no doubt be worth hearing. We hope to see a good crowd out at this meeting as it is quite an important one, considering the subject under discussion.

Mrs. M. E. K. Edwards went to Dallas, the county seat of Polk county, on Thursday of last week, to lecture on temperance. Dallas is a town of 1,200 inhabitants, and is equally represented with churches and saloons, there being three of each. Mrs Edwards was greeted by a large audience, and at the close of her lecture two-thirds of those present stood up to pledge untiring vigilance against the saloon. Be it said to the credit of the Polk County Itemizer, published at Dallas, that it comes out flat footed against the saloon, and consequently deserves the support of every honest, thinking citizen of the place.

The Revival Meetings.

The series of meetings being held at Friends' church under the leadership of Rev. J. H. Douglas reached the three weeks limit Wednesday night and it was expected that the meetings would close that evening, but the interest was so great that everybody insisted on more services, consequently meetings were held yesterday and last night. Such an awakening Newberg has never had before and the enviable reputation our town has had for morality is being strengthened in a very marked degree. Our people appreciate the labors of brother Douglas and many prayers will follow him to other fields of labor.

His Misfortune is Your Golden Opportunity.

We are glad to announce to the public that we have purchased a stock of men's boots, and shoes for men, women and children, rubbers, slippers, rubber boots, long, short, big and little, etc., that belonged to a merchant doing business in Washington. He bought these goods new and fresh from the wholesale dealers in September last, and failed in business in October, since which time the stock has been in the sheriff's hands, pending a settlement. Not being able to make his payments, the goods were sold to the highest private bidder, and we were so fortunate as to secure them. We will sell them without reserve, at prices never before made on such goods. This stock is made up of strictly first-class goods, and many kinds are exact duplicates of what we have sold in our store for the past three years.

We respectfully invite you to come early and make such selections as you can use. To give an idea of the size of this stock we will state that it comprised over Sixteen Hundred Pairs when this sale began Wednesday and we were compelled to rent a room for the sale of this stock. We will be found for thirty days in the New Brick Bank Building.

Respectfully to do you good,
MORRIS, MILES & Co.

Christian Endeavor.

At the meeting held last Sunday evening at Friends church to complete the organization of the Christian Endeavor society, a large number of young people were in attendance who manifested a zeal that indicated great earnestness in the work being undertaken. A very large and prosperous society is going to be the result. The various committees named in the constitution were appointed to act for six months. One hundred and twenty-eight names were taken as charter members. A collection was taken among the older people at the close of the meeting to raise money to purchase the necessary supplies. Let every young person in the community, join the society and help on in the moral and spiritual development of the young. The following is a list of officers and committees appointed:

Elmer Armstrong, President.

A Monster Air Ship.

(From American Farmer.)

Below we present our readers with a picture of the Pennington air ship, a recent invention which is attracting much attention throughout the country. This ship is the invention of Mr. E. J. Pennington, a former citizen of Fort Wayne, but now of Mt. Carmel, Ill., and so perfect is its construction and simple the principle of operation that capitalists immediately became interested in it. In a remarkably short time a company, with a capital stock of $20,000,000, was organized for the erection of factories and machinery necessary to build the air ship. Limited space will admit only a brief description of this wonderful invention Almost the entire air ship is constructed of aluminum, a metal which combines in a high degree both lightness and strength. The principles that guided the inventors in the construction are five, namely; buoyancy, screw, vacum, aeroplane, and parachute. By buoyancy is meant the quality of floating. The screw principle is used on the ship to propel, the same as it is in water. The vacum is formed by a peculiar curvature of the blades on the screw, and it has a suction or attraction for any portable object that is in proximity to it. It is used on this air ship to attract it forward. The aeroplane principle is utilized the same way that a sail is used on water. The parachute is used to retard the velocity of the whole construction in its decent. The main part of the machine is the buoyancy chamber. This in shape is an oblated spheroid, being large at the center and tapering symmetrically to a point at either end, and looks like a huge cigar. On the inside of this chamber are two compartments. One is a receptacle for gas and the other is used as an engine room. The engine that occupies this room is a three cylinder rotary and propels the large wheel in front of the ship. The fuel that supplies this engine is gas and is fed direct. The main shaft on this engine is hollow, and the large propeller is keyed directly on to it. This shaft is made hollow to allow the air to pass through it in the cylinders to keep them cool. On the top of the buoyancy chamber is placed the sail. This extends its full length and can be manipulated so that the currents will act to propel the ship as it does a sailing vessel in water. Attached to this sail is the rudder that guides the ship either to the right or left, and underneath this rudder is the tail. This tail is patterned after a bird's tail, and is used to raise or lower the ship independent of the propeller wheels at the sides. On the sides of the chamber are placed the wings. These wings are so made that when the ship is decending they improvise themselves into para chutes, which makes the descent gradual On each of these wings are placed two propeller wheels for raising and lowering the ship.

NOTICE TO THE AFFLICTED.

I take this opportunity to inform the public that I have left my medicines, "The Japanese Oil", Dr. Swans Liver and Kidney Cure" and the "National Specific" for Malaria, with Mrs Mary S. Hobson on the north side of Firs, street opposite the Newberg house and Mrs Hardwick at the Bakery on Main street, Newberg. Those in the vicinity of Dundee may leave applications at Dundee post office for D. W. Martin.

GOOD SEEDS.

Truckload after truckload of seeds was noticed passing up the street Saturday, and on investigating it was found they were from D. M. Ferry & Co., of Detroit, Mich., for their northwestern agents, F. L. Posson & Son, 209 Second street, Portland, Or. Posson & Son have sold and delivered already this season over three carloads of vegetable seeds alone. These must be the very best of seeds, and they must have very low prices, or the firm never could have secured such an immense trade.

MRS. F. A. MORRIS.

To-morrow at 2 o'clock p. m. is the time for the regular meeting of the W. C. T. U. All are requested to be present. Superintendents of departments would do well to look after their work a little as there will be only two more meetings before the Annual meeting which is held the third Saturday in March, at which time every superintendent is required to give a written report of all work done in the past year.

Condition of Working Women in American and European Cities.

"Help must come from Women."

We have reached the day of hope for women. Traditions and the chains of custom cease to bind. All avenues are open and women are beginning to find their places. These closing years of the nineteenth century are the brightest of the world's history. The spirit of the age is the power that works for righteousness But even though the way is so bright there is a dark side to the picture, as one may see after spending awhile in the three representative cities of the world, New York, London, and Paris There are 200-000 women workers in New York employed in 200 trades. There is little skilled labor, for the majority of these workers are too ignorant to reckon or too dull to learn. This latter class are employed in sewing, an occupation open to receive all. There are four difficulties in the way; the incompetency of the workers, the starvation prices which the employers pay, the work that comes from prisons at a low rate, and also from the country where money will buy much more than in a large city. Strange as it may seem, women as well as men, are the enemies of women. They advertise for women and girls to learn to trade, and promise good pay. Many come and work day after day in the hope of money, but none ever comes. This army of haggared, tired workers, with pinched faces and sunken eyes, is a most pitiful sight. They are too tired to accomplish any good, and we must answer how they, living in our Chritian land, are no better off than the heathen, to whom we send missionaries. London presents the same sad spectacle. Our own condition is inherited from them, for the Puritans brought with them the incredible love for the almighty dollar. There are acts which limit the hours of workers, but there are disregarded by the avaricious manufacturer who takes every matter into his own hands and follows his own selfish desires. Inspectors are refused admittance and visitors generally are looked upon as intruders. In London the day is often twelve or fourteen hours with an hour for dinner. Often the girls work till eleven o'clock at night and receive either nothing or from four to eight cents an hour for extra time. London has the very poorest quarters for her workers. There is no light, no blue sky, only mist, and fog and coal gas to breathe. London does not even have the alleviation that New York finds in the breeze from the sea.

Paris is deceptive. One would suppose that there could not be any such degredation and want where there are broad streets and an air of leisure. But the suffering is there all the same. The little seamstress has her room on the sixth floor, lives on bread mostly, with now and then a bit of cheese or wine, or a four cent dinner at the restaurant. She never has a fire, her hands are swollen with chill blains red and sore. Forty to fifty cents a day is the largest pay. In the Bon Marchi, one of the best firms in Paris, the hours are from eight a. m. to eight p. m. Other cities have done more to alleviate the suffering of working women than Paris. Lyons tried to improve the factory system, where it was found that family life was coming to be an unknown thing. Children were sent into the mills as early as possible, and all sorts of immorality follows. There are a quarter of a million lace makers in France who receive two cents an hour. In the face of all this misery we are led to inquire, what our part can be to help decrease these burdens of woe. Philanthropy and the church can not. It is we who have shared our blessings with others, it is we who must do the work. The instant demand is for skilled labor and for industrial schools that send out a better class of laborers. There is everywhere a mixture of hope and despair, but everywhere it is evident that help must come from women. And to this end our women must study political economy, for otherwise they cannot meet or in anyway solve so deep a problem. There must be a co-operative commonwealth where the spirit of brotherhood reigns.

In Northampton, Mass. a few ladies of leisure and culture have found a pleasant way to make the lives of others, less favored than their own, more happy. They have given a series of concerts, at which they themselves are the musicians, and to which they have invited people fond of music, but too poor to patronize high priced entertainments. These kind ladies have in this way made many hearts glad, while they have at the same time increased the spirit of the Master in their own hearts. There are many methods at hand to reach people and to bring them nearer the good. We need open eyes, kind hearts, more than opportunities or money

There is no man whom women honor so deeply and sincerely, as the man of chaste life; the man who breasts the buffetings of temptation's swelling waves, like some strong swimmer in his agony, and makes the post of perfect self-control. Women have a thousand guarantees and safeguards for their purity of life. "Abandon hope all ye who enter here," is written in letters of flame for them above the haunt of infamy, while men may come and go and are yet smilingly received in the most elegant homes. But in spite of all this latitude, how many men are pure and true!
