In this issue will be found an announcement stating that Miss Ellis, the invalid lady intends to keep a stock of notions for sale and invites the patronage of the public. After mature deliberation (knowing it is saying a good deal,) we assert that the car we rode in to Portland one day this week was the dirtiest we have ever seen on the road. The company would receive the thanks of a suffering public if they would see that the cars receive a cleaning at least once each trip. The seats of the car we refer to were absolutely unfit for a lady wearing a respectable dress to sit in.

We acknowledge the receipt of an invitation to attend the wedding of Dan. J. Gilbert and Miss Linnie Hadley at the residence of Miss Hadleys parents near Mooresville Indiana February 4th. The young people will however have our best wishes for a successful voyage on the journey through life together.

Preliminary action has been taken by the Baptists of Newberg and vicinity for organizing a church in Newberg. Wed. the 28th. of this month at 2 p. m. is the time appointed for consummating the organization. Special christian services will be held both in the afternoon and evening. Ministers from a distance will be present and participate in all the exercises of the day. The public is cordially invited to attend these services at the Presbyterian church.

A young man whose sur-name was a familiar one in the ante bellum days, in the land where "Beards Hatter Shop" turned out a class of beavers that gained a national reputation, had to borrow a hat of a neighbor a few days ago in order to avoid passing through town on his way home, bareheaded. The aforesaid y. m. has heretofore carved his winter's wood from scrubby water elms that grow along the streams of "sunny Kansas," and consequently is excusable for his surprise at being unable to find his hat, which was buried out of sight by the evergreen foliage from a filling fr tree, a veritable monarch of the forest.

DIED.

HANNETT:—In Newberg, Or., Jan. 19, 1891, of typhoid fever, Florence, youngest daughter of James and Maria Hannett, aged 12 years, 3 months and 13 days.

Death's knell is heard in every family circle; its sound has become familiar to all, yet welcome to none. Earth's happiest homes are draped in mourning, and its cherriest cheeks are drenched with tears. And thus to-day the light of a household has gone out, and while a short time ago they were blessed by her bright cheery presence, to-day there is naught remaining to them but a remembrance of the days that were. She possessed a warm, loving disposition, a thoughtfulness and consideration of others, a voice of wondrous sweetness and beauty which drew all hearts to her, and none knew her but to love her. For several days her sufferings were great, and a few days before the end came she offered a prayer to the throne of Grace for a release from pain, and soon the answer came, "Come up higher." She then ceased her murmuring and sang in a peculiarly sweet and pathetic manner, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," and soon her spirit winged its flight to the Celestial City.

She leaves a father and mother, sisters and brothers, and a vast number of friends to mourn her departure, but their loss is her eternal gain, and the songs of Heaven are made sweeter by the melody of her childish voice.

"I saw a fond father and mother who leaned
On the arms of a dear gifted one,
And the star in the future grew bright to their gaze,
As they saw the proud place she had won.
And the fast coming evening of life promised fair,
And its pathway grew smooth to their feet,
And the starlight of love glimmered bright at the end,
And the whispers of fancy were sweet.
But I saw them again bending low o'er the grave,
Where their hearts' fondest hope had been laid;
Their star had gone down in the darkness of night
And the joy from their bosoms had fled.
But the Healer was there. His arms were around.
He watched them with tenderest care;
He showed them a star in that bright upper world—
'Twas their star shining brilliantly there.
They had each heard a voice, 'twas the voice of their God:
'I love thee, I love thee; pass under the rod.'"

An exchange says: A section of a tree is being cut down in Tulare county, which is 106 feet in circumference. It will be taken to the World's Fair and used as a dancing platform. Thirty-two couples can readily dance on it. One of the giant trees of the Calaveras Grove will go bodily to the World's Fair. This tree stands 320 feet high. It is 100 feet in circumference at a point 10 feet above the ground. It will be taken down in sections. Scaffolding will be built about it. The section, when disconnected, will be let down by machinery, so as to remain unbroken. The heavier limbs will be treated in the same way. It will be removed thus by sections clear to the roots, and be taken in sections to Chicago, and erected and held back in its original grandeur by steel and iron bars and bolts. The cost of the work will be $30,000.

It Is a Mistake

To save clover by keeping the hogs in pens.

To save blacksmith bills by letting the plows go unsharpened.

To sell off all the hogs because the prices are low.

To use cheap breeding stock when better can be had.

To keep an animal of any kind that costs more than it brings in.

To try to save the axle grease by letting the wagon go unoiled.

To cut down the milk flow of the cows to save the cost of a ton of bran.

To raise a small, cheap horse in order to save $5 or $10 stallion fees.

To make 10-cent butter in order to save the cost of good dairy utensils.

To crowd the work horses to their utmost every day and drive them for pleasure Sunday.

To let the stock eat the pasture too close to save the labor of cutting up a few acres of corn fodder.

To put an ill-fitting harness on a horse, expecting he will do as well with it as with a well-fitting one.

To keep hogs in filthy pens when there are good pastures at hand where they will feel better at less expense.

To keep a cow that produces only enough butter to pay for her feed to save the money that a profitable cow would cost.

To shrink the milk of the cows $10 a month by letting a boy run them from the pasture in order to save $2 worth of hired man's time.

To expect boys to enjoy farm life if they are made to work every day and all day without recreation and no means of enjoyment within reach.

To use a plow that compels one to wait till the land is neither too wet nor too dry, too hard or too soft, before plowing in order to save the cost of a first-class plow. —Ex.

His Misfortune is Your Golden Opportunity.

We are glad to announce to the public that we have purchased a stock of men's boots, and shoes for men, women and children, rubbers, slippers, rubber boots, long, short, big and little, etc., that belonged to a merchant doing business in Washington. He bought these goods new and fresh from the wholesale dealers in September last, and failed in business in October, since which time the stock has been in the sheriff's hands, pending a settlement. Not being able to make his payments, the goods were sold to the highest private bidder, and we were so fortunate as to secure them. We will sell them without reserve, at prices never before made on such goods. This stock is made up of strictly first-class goods, and many kinds are exact duplicates of what we have sold in our store for the past three years.

We respectfully invite you to come early and make such selections as you can use. To give an idea of the size of this stock we will state that it comprised over Sixteen Hundred Pairs when this sale began Wednesday and we were compelled to rent a room for the sale of this stock. We will be found for thirty days in the New Brick Bank Building.

Respectfully to do you good,
MORRIS, MILES & CO.

L. Posson & Son, 209 Second street, Portland, Or. Posson & Son have sold and delivered already this season over three carloads of vegetable seeds alone. LADIES' COLUMN.

BY

MRS. F. A. MORRIS.

The W. C. T. U. of Newberg has purchased a large picture of Miss Frances E. Willard, which will be placed in the Academy building at present.

The W. C. T. U. met last Saturday at 2 o'clock with Mrs. A. M. Woodward president in chair. After short devotional exercises the Union proceeded to the regular order of business. The committee appointed at last meeting to confer with the Christmas tree committee for the Evangelical church report that they considered it best to abandon the idea of a Christmas tree under the auspices of the W. C. T. U Mrs. Laura Reece, superintendent of Health and Heredity, read some suggestions regarding dress, bathing, the ventilation of school houses and other public buildings, followed by discussion. A short article was read describing the Jennesse Miller system of dress, followed by an animated discussion. The president appointed Mrs. Cox to prepare a short address by way of opening the discussion on the subject of dress reform, for the next meeting. The large picture of Miss Willard recently purchased by the W. C. T. U. was ordered placed in the Academy building until such time as the Union may see fit to remove it to another place.

The names of the third and fourth division were read and by motion it was decided that they unite in giving an entertainment before the annual meeting in March.

I wonder what is the matter with some of the Newberg boys; the old boys as well as the young ones I mean. I always have thought it a very easy matter to tip the hat, and cannot understand why the custom does not prevail here. It may be that the young men not having the example set by their elders, look upon it as a matter of little importance, but let me tell you young man, that you have not a young lady friend on your list who does not appreciate this little act of courtesy, and who will not bestow upon you one of her sweetest smiles every time you lift your hat to her, and I am not so sure but the older ladies will do the same. I once had a friend, who, no matter how old or how shabby his hat, would always take it off and almost throw it on the ground on meeting a lady acquaintance. You need not wonder that I would gladly go a block or two out of the way to meet him so pleasant was his manner. I once was heard to say that I would not give very much for the man who did not lift his hat to me, and I may say so again. There is another reason why this custom should prevail. The study of Physiology teaches us that continued wearing of the hat produces baldness, from heating the head unduly: while if the hat be lifted frequently and air admitted to the head this calamity may be averted for years. I have wondered if the neglect of this is not the cause of so much baldness in our land. Boys take warning.

Did you ever attend an English tea? If you have, you can appreciate the fact that American customs, in many respects differ widely from those of the English Much as I had read concerning this, I felt that 'my ways were not their ways,' the first time in my life that it was my privilege to participate in a real English tea. Then it was that I realized as never before that "travel" is better than reading or study at home. For one thing I was grateful, viz; that I was sufficiently well acquainted with my hostess to ask a question when I did not know what was next expected of me, and found her ready and willing to relieve my embarrassment by making matters plain to me.

When tea is announced, the host leads the way to the tea table escorting the lady of honor, and is followed by the other guests in order, who have been previously instructed as to whom to escort. The hostess and gentleman of honor bring up the rear. If there is not a servant to wait at table the gentleman of honor who sits next to the hostess, does the honors of the house, such as bringing the tea from the stove, cutting bread etc. so that the hostess need not leave the table before the meal is over. One of the first things I noticed was the manner of using the fork, which must be kept in the left hand exclusively and not turned so as to form a spoon as we Americans do. The loaf of bread is placed on a plate on the table, and cut as it is wanted, the point of the bread knife stuck into it and handed to the guest who lays it on a plate provided for it, spreads with butter, cuts and turns one piece upon the other, I do not like the cutting of the bread, a custom not tolerated in America.

The English drink a great deal of tea and coco, but no coffee. They serve coco with crackers at 9 o'clock p. m. making five meals in all per day.

Brush Notes.

Before beginning to paint any study, sketch the prominent outlines with a soft lead or char coal pencil; then lay in the general effect with burnt sienna and black, thinned with a little turpentine, leaving the lights bare. When this is thoroughly dry you may proceed with the regular painting.

A background painted to represent an old stone wall is very effective for many floral subjects, and sometimes in animal pieces. Shadows thrown back of the objects represented enhance this effect yet more. A good palette for such a ground is composed of white, yellow orchie, a trifle permanent blue, ivory black, raw umber and burnt sienna. In painting shadows on the wall use less white and yellow orchue.

Many amateur paintings have a very hard look, caused in most instances by a habit of smothing down the paint too much. Too much smothing and blending is unions to good effect.
