FRIDAY, JULY 24, 1891.
Entered as second class matter at the post office at Newberg, Oregon.

The people up at Blaine, Wash., are very indignant because of the employment of Chinese in the salmon canneries, to the exclusion of white laborers.

With the Oregonian and the Capital Journal both after his scalp, it would seem as if Senator Dalph would find that it is a rocky road that leads to re-election.

The Oregonian is of the opinion that a city that can't be run without robbing honest industry by means of an occupation tax is hard up. Right you are.

Isn't there a law which says that a report of the proceedings of the county court and commissioners shall be published in a paper of the county in which such transactions take place. Let's see the report.

BROTHER WESTERFIELD, of the Ledger, has shot off the very fatiguing controversy that has for some time been going on through the columns of his paper between two factions of the Evangelical church. Correct.

The Oregon Board of Immigration is fitting up at a big expense two cars of Oregon products to advertise the state throughout the east. The display will consist of agricultural, horticultural and mineral products.

If the Albina Courier would look to over-done Washington which is unloading her tide of fessed suckers onto Oregon, for a reason for the cause of business stagnation, instead of to consolidation, it would perhaps come nearer hitting the real cause.

There are a good many who are advocating the passage of a law exempting the home from foreclosure sale. This might be some help in this direction, but a law making it a punishable offense to mortgage the home would be more to the point.

The free bridges promised to the people of the east side if they would vote for consolidation, don't appear to materialize very fast. It would seem that a city which takes as much apparent pride in its greatness as Portland does, could at least afford free bridges across the river.

We are now enabled to tell what kind of weather we are to have last May, having received the report from the office of the Weather Bureau this week. It seems to us that here is a big lot of tomfoolery and expense that is doing no one any good. If there is any good reason for it we should like to know just where it is supposed to come in.

It is said that the law of the United States requires that bridges over navigable streams be built under the sanction of the War department, and that the law is to be more strictly enforced in future. If it takes as long to get a sanction for such improvements as it does to get some other kinds of recognition of the needs of the people, ferry boats will be in big demand for some time to come.

We see the statement made that Salem is making big preparations for the State fair. It seems to us that it would be more in order if it is a state fair, for all Oregon to be making big preparations. A Salem exposition is one thing, a state fair is another. The exposition would work more to the interests of interested individuals while the state fair, properly conducted, is a benefit to every man within our borders.

A very learned Oregon biologist says that the only difference between the green aphid and the hop louse is that the aphid has black eyes and the hop louse has red eyes. The question now is whether upon a careful examination a man finds a hop louse when gunning for aphids. He had best leave him to the tender mercies of the hop raiser or kill him on suspicion, on the ground that like some men he may be indulging in red-eye which will be likely to terminate in an optic of a more sombre hue.

Some people are terribly scared because the English sparrow has struck Oregon. If a flock of vultures had settled down among us with the apparent intention of staying, no bigger fuss would be made. Now why all this tirade against the English sparrow? It is a waste of breath. In the first place, he never settles down to stay but he stays. Like Carlton's "Mortgage" he never goes away, and the indignity of man has so far failed to prevent his very rapid increase. Aside from his staying qualities he is not a very bad fellow after all. He pays his way handsomely in the number of worms and other insects he destroys. We have watched him carefully farther east for a number of years, and have reached the conclusion that he is not as great a pest, especially to the gardener and fruit grower, as a number of native birds that are protected by the laws of this state. We do not write this altogether out of sympathy for the sparrow—he doesn't need it, being abundantly able to take care of himself—but because there are lots of things worse than he is, any number of which would be a great deal more gotten rid of.

The U. P. company christened its new steamer Victorian on the 10th. Water is considered a very essential thing in christening ceremonies generally, but if reports are true this was a departure from the common. If a lot of loafers or even workmen on a fall, they are mulcted to the tune of $10 in the police court, but a lot of hightoned dudes who never earned an honest penny in their lives may get drunk, and the big papers seem proud of the honor of being able to mention it. This is America as she is.

THERE is now room for some reasonable hope that Oregon will have an exhibit at the world's fair. The initial step was taken in Newberg at the meeting of the horticultural society last week. If Gov. Penney will follow out the suggestions of that association and make the necessary appointments, it will give the matter a little more business-like appearance. Oregon must have an exhibit of some kind, and one managed by regularly appointed commissioners, who shall be recognized representatives of the state, is far preferable to any other plan.

A WOMAN, a nurse in a San Francisco hospital, allowed the surgeons to take from her body forty square inches of skin to transplant on a man who had been terribly burned. She was a widow with a little child dependent upon her for support. For her sacrifice she received $100, and the knowledge that she had saved a human life. Now subscription funds are being raised in various parts of the west for her relief. How ready we are to recognize and reward sacrifices of this kind made by others. Yet how much better would it be if we would be more self-sacrificing at times ourselves.

The Oregonian says, in commenting on the protest by the St. Paul, Minn., churches against a brutal prize fight, that it is not entirely a religious question, but a question of decency and citizenship. It further states that the community that leaves such matters alone to its churches has made remarkable progress in bestial indifference itself. Progress from what? There never was a time when it was otherwise. Can the Oregonian cite any but isolated cases where a protest has been made against this or any other evil that the churches are not left to take the initiative? It surely could not be claimed that the big daily is a leader in this direction, when a good share of one page is daily given over to details of these brutal exhibitions, and so-called news concerning prospective "meetings" of the thick-necked gentry that participate in them. That there are decent people outside the church we are glad to admit, but that their influence for a higher state of morality almost invariably ends with themselves, is just as easily proven. Talk as we may, the church and nothing else is the educator of public opinion in lines like this, and it shows either a deplorable lack of observation or a morbid desire to misrepresent facts on the part of the writer of that article.

ten until after lighting my lamp last evening, and as I have seen that the apple orchards are being neglected I thought I would speak for the apple and let others better informed write of other fruits at this time. In these few suggestions which I have made I have been led to state too much at length perhaps my own experience in dealing with the apple which I would much rather have omitted but could not well do so and do justice to the subject in question. Now my fellow orchardists allow me to say in closing and in all earnestness, plant orchards, plant them well with young trees then take care of them. Cultivate them, yes love them, having full faith that the great Horticulturist who planted the trees in the first garden, and who delights in the opening flower and the ripening fruit will send the sunshine and the rain and temper the wind so as to secure to your labor its full reward.
