Now is the time for ladies, both young and old, who are handy with the needle, to prepare for a display in this kind of work at the fair. Nothing is more attractive in a pavilion than a good display of needlework.

A good audience was out to the concert given by Jas. G. Clark the ballad singer Saturday night, and all were delighted with the singing. It was without doubt the best musical entertainment ever given in Newberg.

While you are putting up your canned fruits and jellies for next winter's use remember to put aside a few fine selections of each variety to help make a display at the fair. It will add very much toward the success of the fair and will be time well spent.

Marshal Woods drove over to the country seat Wednesday, with a lot of personal effects belonging to McCullough that were picked up at different places, to turn over to the sheriff. A. M. Hoskins went along on business connected with his brick building.

O. H. Irvine, the attorney for the prosecution in the preliminary trial Monday, is a new attorney in Yamhill county having located at McMinnville a short time ago. He formerly practiced law at Albany this state. He is evidently a shrewd lawyer.

A large force of hands were at work at the fair grounds last week, and since the cleaning up, the grounds make a fine appearance. The scattered large fire with their long extended branches make a fine shade and for a pleasant place the location is all that could be asked.

J. A. Dummett the traveling secretary for the Y. M. C. A. of Oregon, will be here and meet the members on Saturday evening next and will have charge of the regular four o'clock meeting on Sunday afternoon. He desires a mass meeting on Sunday night. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

Read our few words to the public. We want to sell out as near every article in our store before moving as we possibly can, and to do this we are willing for the next three weeks to sell all goods, except staple groceries, at cost, and many of them below cost. We mean just this, and nothing more.
MORRIS, MILES & CO.

Dr. J. B. Moore informs us that he will move to Portland in a short time and will practice there this winter and perhaps longer, while Mrs. Moore will attend lectures, she having been reading for the past two years. They have a host of friends who will be sorry to have them leave Newberg, but will wish them success in their new home.

Judge Ramsey who defended McCullough Monday, is a son of uncle Dave Ramsey of this place. He was county judge for this county several years ago, hence his title. He dropped the remark while here that Newberg was making more rapid strides in the way of improvements than all the other towns in the county put together. Just what they all tell us.

Dressmaking done at Mrs. Lamb's residence corner Fifth and Meridian St's., four blocks south of Bank building.

The wife and daughter of the proprietor of the "old reliable" store, were having considerable fun at his expense Wednesday evening. A customer called for a shirt and the proprietor asked if he wanted a ready made shirt. If he keeps any other kind the ladies are anxious to see them.

Bird Robertson, representing the Multnomah Box Co., of Portland, and incidentally doing a little advertising for other Portland houses, was a pleasant caller at this office Monday. He travels on a bicycle, and while he doesn't cut quite such a dash as the long-haired what-is-it that was in town last week, we presume that he will do just as much business for his employers.

There have been a couple of recruiting officers about town the past few days, trying to drum up men for the regular army. They found it rather poor picking, as most of the boys around here have higher aspirations than the blacking of some big-headed post commandant's boots. The men who were here would have looked better between the handles of a plow, or as an ornament to the under side of a brick hod, than running around the country with a blue suit and a foreign accent trying to induce hardworking farmers to "soger" for the purpose of being gazed at by the thousands of people who of late years make army posts their summer resorts.

The Dayton Herald says that in an interview with Judge Galloway a few days ago, he stated that there would be no fair held at McMinnville this year, as the fair has never been self sustaining. This ought to be satisfactory proof that the plan on which our fair has always been run is the most satisfactory and consequently the most successful. Every year we hear a few people advocating the plan of paying premiums and charging admission to the grounds and at the same time citizens of McMinnville who attend our yearly gatherings are free to tell us that we have much the best fair. Newberg fair has been running for ten years, and the association is entirely clear of debt; and all who have contributed to the success of the annual meetings have the satisfaction of knowing that our locality has been successfully advertised as a thriving growing section and our people have earned a reputation for hospitality and sociability that causes Newberg to be well spoken of. Just so long as a fair is run for the benefit of a town and the country surrounding it, it will be appreciated and patronized by the people in general, but let the people once get the idea that it is being run for the purpose of putting money into the pockets of a few individuals, or to afford gamblers and blacklegs an opportunity to get in their work, and they will wisely withhold their patronage. Let us profit by the example of McMinnville fair and let well enough alone.

THE MURDER CASE.

G. M. McCullough held to Answer before the Grand Jury.

The murder of the unknown man and the burning of the Luke McKern house to cover the crime has been the talk of the town for the past ten days. The coroners jury met on last Thursday, and after examining a number of witnesses, decided that it was a case of murder. It was the opinion of those who were looking the case up that coroner Evenden was inclined to give too little weight to the evidence pointing toward the guilt of G. M. McCullough and it did look, that way to one who heard what he said at the examination. Our people were not satisfied to let the matter drop and on Friday, Dell Cox swore out a warrant before Justice J. M. Wright, charging McCullough with the crime. In the evening, marshal Joe Woods, Dell Cox and Fred McKern started over the mountain to where he had been seen in the morning, but he was found at Hillsboro where the arrest was made. On Monday afternoon a large crowd gathered in Armory Hall to witness the preliminary trial before Justice J. M. Wright. Judge Ramsey appeared for the defendant and O. H.

Irvine for the defense.

The first witness called was Dr. G. W. McConnell who stated that he was called on Sunday after the fire to examine the remains which he did in the presence of the coroners jury. Found the head and limbs all burned away and the heart and liver exposed. Described position of body with reference to the building, stated that on a second examination he found evidence of a wound on the right side which he thought had been inflicted with a knife.

Luke McKern—The fire occurred at 3 o'clock in the morning July 18th. Found the body about 5 o'clock in the evening. Think there were no ashes under the body.

The carpet which was burned with the body was some 17 to 18 ft. away when last seen in the room. Was about the house on the evening before the fire and fastened the gate but found it open in the morning. Saw after the fire where straw and shavings had been carried to the house. The house was a story and a half and stood 2½ feet above ground.

Dell Cox—With others found where some parties had been camped 75 yards back of the barn. A fire had been made and potatoes cooked. A grain sack is produced which witness identifies as one picked up by Mr. Thompson at the deserted camp. Have taken an interest in the case in order to bring the guilty party to justice.

Mrs. McPoland—I live with my son-in-law Mr. Noble, in Newberg. The defendant came there on Thursday night before the fire. Said he wanted the blinds put down as he did not want anyone in town to see him. Asked for a sack which we gave him. Said he wanted it to carry grub in. The sack which was found at the deserted camp was produced which the witness identified as the one given to defendant.

R. L. Thompson—Was at the scene of the fire on Sunday—Found the sack near the spring, also rabbit and squirrel skins. Saw the body examined and am fully satisfied the man was murdered.

Fred L. McKern—Helped arrest the defendant. He told me he could get out of this all right but would have to give some one else away.

T. E. Jones—Live 1½ miles from Mr. McKern's place. Saw defendant pass my house on Thursday before the fire about dusk carrying a black cat-hol.

Nettie Jones—On Friday before the fire found a valise in Mr. Brutscher's pasture. Left it, but looked for next day and it was gone. The defendant's valise was produced, which the witness identified as the one found in the pasture.

Mrs. Clark and her daughter Mrs. Smith, testified to being at the McKern house on Monday and Wednesday before the fire and detected an offensive smell in the house.

Walter Woodward and Lora and Dema Reece being called testified that they saw the defendant on the railroad track east of town on Monday before the fire, in company with another man.

The counsel on both sides consumed but little time in reviewing the testimony and the case was submitted to the justice who briefly stated that he thought the evidence produced was sufficient to hold the defendant.

The decision was received with favor by the audience present as the cheers clearly indicated.

Justice Wright did the proper thing without question. R. L. Thompson and Dell Cox deserve the thanks of the community for the interest they have taken in this case and if justice is done they will be reimbursed by the citizens for the loss of time and the expense they have incurred in working up the case.

Attorney O. H. Irvine informed us at the close of the trial that he defended McCullough six years ago on a charge of assault with intent to kill and that he was sent up for a year.

This took place in Linn county and he still owes Irvine $100. for defending him.

The accused is so well known here that we deem it unnecessary to say but little about him. He has been about town more or less for nearly a year. Jan. 1st and paid two months rent but never occupied it. He has been regarded with suspicion for some time. It is generally believed that others beside him were connected with the murder.

care of a fire: how to make a fire, regulate, and care for it after it is made; the different woods and coals discussed, what to do with the ashes and cinders. The stove or range is thoroughly dissected; the pupils are made to understand the working and meaning of the different dampers; how to regulate the oven; the cleaning and polishing of the range; all of which you will agree with me are of vital importance. After this the different methods of cooking are each in turn taken up and thoroughly entered into: boiling, stewing, broiling, roasting, etc. Unless one has thoroughly studied these subjects it is surprising how much there is to be learned. Take boiling, for instance: the article usually selected to be experimented upon is the potato. The pupil is first told of the composition of the potato and the action of boiling water thereon: about the preparation before boiling and after, the why and wherefore throughout. So many people do not know how to cook a potato; some putting them to cook in cold water and allowing them to simmer and become soggy, or else keep boiling them at a galloping rate. Nor is the serving forgotten, for pupils are made to feel that the serving of the dishes is of almost as much importance as the cooking. The first course is entirely taken up with these elementary forms of cooking, including lessons on eggs and cereals. To bread is given an entire lesson. The pupils are obliged to mix and knead the bread, each taking a turn at the kneading, and it is curious to watch the wonderful methods exhibited. The second and third course are graded, one a very little more difficult than the other so that after having taken the entire three courses the pupil should be an excellent plain cook. The last course includes cake, pastry, cream, and ices. There is no really intricate or fancy cooking, yet everything necessary is taught. The pupils are also taught the different ways of using up remnants, the care of all food cooked and uncooked, the great importance of economy. She must know the name and use of the different cooking utensils, and how to take care of them; the different kinds and cuts of meat and the prices, what is best for her purpose. She is also taught as much as is practicable of marketing. There are in New York two well-known cooking schools. In the "College for the Training of Teachers," where cooking is taught as a branch, great attention is given to the chemistry of cooking. The lessons here are most charming and interesting. One is astonished that there is so much of interest in our daily food. There are numerous other cooking classes, I may even say "schools," connected with different associations and clubs, in all of which visitors are always welcome and cannot fail to be interested.—Chautauquan.
