FRIDAY, JANUARY 15, 1892.

Entered as second class matter at the post office at Newberg, Oregon.

The Central (Wash.) News is on its feet again, better than ever.

Buck, of the Roseburg Plaindealer, has been appointed to a consularship. Bro. Buck is undoubtedly a gainer in the change.

Portland is beginning to reap the harvest from seed sown by unscrupulous advertising agents, there being hundreds of idle workmen on her streets attracted by the glowing reports of her prosperity.

With what grace the democrats can claim to be the poor man's friend! At a banquet in Portland last week the layout cost $5.00 a plate. There were a whole lot of poor fellows there we imagine.

The Capital Journal's twenty-four page boom edition is a credit to the publishers and the town. It is brimful of information, and ought to turn the attention of many eastern people to this land of fruits and flowers.

The reports regarding the reduction of the national debt sink into insignificance compared to the reports of the monthly reduction of Kansas mortgages. One thing is certain, neither can be reduced too fast to please those most interested.

AL SNYDER retires from the staff of the Polk county Observer and C. C. Doughty assumes entire control, he having been connected with Polk county Journalism for a number of years. The Observer has our best wishes for continued success.

INDIAN fanaticism does not seem to be easily quelled. On the contrary, the Messiah craze is spreading to all the Indian tribes throughout the country, if reports are true, and grave fears are entertained that they will again attempt an outbreak in the spring.

The people of Aberdeen, Washington, are wrestling with the school site question, the Herald being the medium through which the pros and cons side up the proposed sites. Such discussions are healthful as long as the interested parties keep in a good humor.

REPRESENTATIVE HERMANN has introduced in the house a bill providing for the permanent improvement of the Willamette river between Portland and Eugene, and the Yamhill river to McMinnville. Mr. Hermann apparently recognizes the needs of his constituency in this valley.

The board of capital commissioners are considering plans for improving the acoustic properties of the hall of representatives at Salem. The new hall has always been considered a failure in this respect and it is to be hoped satisfactory improvements may be made. The cost will probably be about $9000.

PARTIES who are inclined to disregard the law and shoot pheasants and grouse out of season had better look a little out. Portland parties offer a reward of $25 for information leading to the conviction of such persons and a detective in their employ is visiting different points in the valley looking for victims.

A PARTY named Walling plead guilty to the charge of gambling in Justice Shurtleff's court and paid his fine one day last week.—Reporter

Well now we always had a good opinion of Shurtleff and never had supposed that he would allow gambling in his court.

PROF. E. R. LAKE, editor of Fruits and Flowers and secretary of the Oregon State Horticultural Society has accepted a professorship in the Washington State Agricultural College. Prof. Lake while a young man is well educated in his profession and is full of zeal in anything he undertakes. We are sorry that Oregon is to lose him but congratulate our sister state in securing his valuable services.

REV. ANNA SHAW, Mrs. Livermore and Eleanor Kirk all favor opening the Columbian exposition buildings on Sunday. It is to be noted that of those who have spoken their minds on the subject more well known women than men are in favor of Sunday opening.

The above statement taken from an eastern exchange, is one, the truthfulness of which we very much doubt and we hope we will not be compelled to believe that the women named have taken a stand in favor of the Sunday opening of the Columbian exposition.

BROTHER JONES, of the Tillamook Headlight sides up "common drinks" in about the right style, when he says: "The man who was once proud and honest will beg, lie and even steal, to satisfy his longings for drink. His manhood is gone." "God pity him." But is there no hope for him, or at least his son, born with his appetite? No man falls unless tempted. Remove the temptation of the saloon and you have effected a cure. We may differ as to the manner in which this is to be done, but no man has done his whole duty unless he has studied this question thoroughly, and after satisfying himself as to the best policy to pursue, worked honestly and persistently for the abolition of the saloon.

Prosecutions have been recently instituted in Chicago against men that were slaughtering horses and selling their flesh for beef. One conviction has resulted, and the butcher acknowledged making $76 out of two old horses for which he had paid only $2. The modus operandi is to buy up all the horses that break their legs or are rendered useless by any other accident, take them out onto the prairie and slaughter them. The meat is then sold to cheap restaurants and lunch counters for beef, and the hides and bones bring the profits up to between $30 and $40. It is found that multitudes of people have been eating this horse-flesh under the delusion that it was beef.—Farmers' Review.

INTEREST in the czar-killing business appears to be on the increase. Those who have for years had only abuse for the nihilists of Russia, are beginning to see somewhat of the other side of the question. The whole world knows that the Russian peasants are in distress, yet the czar refuses to accept money to buy food for his starving subjects. At the same time all his energies coupled with the expenditure of millions of money, are being expended by this nineteenth century, Nero to extend his borders and increase his power. If a nihilist bomb should accidentally blow to atoms this monarchial fiend and some of the officials who appear glad to execute his unholy will, who could say that the world was not well rid of a monster of greed and an enemy of his people?

THE Aberdeen (Wash.) Herald in pleading for more united action on the part of the citizens of Aberdeen during the coming year, says some things that will apply equally well to some towns in Oregon that we know of. The editor says: We do not mean to be rough or uncharitable, but do say that the old fossils who have hung onto the skirts of the city like excrescences on a limb and have fattened off of the enterprise and public spirit of the few of their less able fellow citizens should be subject to public censure, directly and pointedly expressed. And, if they cannot be awakened, we must all wait until they have been "gathered to their fathers," hoping and praying that their property may fall into the hands of a more public spirited posterity.

THE APPLE AND ITS CULTURE.
BY E. H. SKINNER.

Allow me to say in the outset that being more of a practical man than a scholar, I shall give the practical view of the subject, combining with it largely my own experience.

Very little of the early history of the apple is known; at the present time even the origin is unknown. Mention being made of it in the Bible, it is supposed to be a native of Palestine, yet in Canaan and surrounding countries it is worthless as a fruit at the present day. Egypt and Palestine import their apples from Damascus. Pliny speaks of the crab as a "wildling," having had many a foul cure given it on account of its sourness. It is therefore supposed that the apple of Scripture times must have been fruit different from ours, as it is spoken of in connection with other choice fruits, and must have possessed good qualities of itself. The parent of all our apples is probably the wild crab of Europe. There can be but little doubt that all our good varieties had their origin in the apples of the mother country; at least our first mother, if history be true, seems to have had too much to do with them. Pliny states that twenty-two varieties were known to the Romans. We are blessed with a very much larger number. The American crab apple is a sweet-scented fruit, about an inch in diameter, translucent, fragrant, and of a yellowish green color. Its blossoms, appearing early in May, are large and rose colored. The tree is about twenty feet high, and is a native from Western New York to Wisconsin and in a southerly direction. Other varieties of the crab are natural to the Middle states, but our valuable kinds do not spring from these.

The apple tree is a hardy, slow growing tree; has an irregular head, rigid branches, roughish bark, broad, strong green leaves of firm texture, and a close, hard, fine grained wood. The tree is long lived, there being fine specimens of it in this country now bearing fruit at 150 to 200 years old. I visited a tree near Castleton, New York, which bore over 100 bushels of apples in one season, and the tree was over 100 years old at the time. Downing speaks of this tree in his Fruits of America. I went hundreds of miles to see it, and was astonished at the sight. The apple tree thrives best in limestone soils and deep loams, especially where such soils are found on ridges or upon high table lands. It succeeds well on all soils not wet, except those of a peaty or purely sandy nature. The apple is more universally grown, and I may say more generally known, than any other fruit. It is carried to a higher perfection in our own country than in any other. The fruit in this country is so superior that it is said that in Covent Garden market, London, it commands almost fabulous prices. How highly it is appreciated in this country may be seen from the orchard products of the United States, which are almost astounding in their magnitude. It being granted that the apple is the most important fruit, and the importance of its culture unsurpassed, it will be my object to give some hints for its more successful cultivation in this great Northwest. We have been through the times of youthful experimenting in fruit growing and learned by many a sad loss that there are varieties that do not pay to grow. Nearly all plant too many varieties. Do not set more than three, and large blocks of each variety, so that you can fill a car at a shipment of each kind in its season. Plant young trees, never over two years old. I prefer good, strong trees of one year's growth. Don't plant poor trees because they come cheap; they are dear at any price. Cut back to three feet at time of planting.

All persons therefore, having any claims against said estate, are hereby notified to present them to me, daily verified, on or before six months from this 15th day of January, 1892. SAMUEL MICHEN, Executor. J. E. Magers, Atty for said estate. 1-15-92

Guardian's Notice. Notice is hereby given that the undersigned has been, by the County Court for Yamhill County Oregon, duly appointed guardian of the estate of Edward B. Swenson, deceased. All persons therefore, having any claims against said estate, are hereby notified to present them to me, daily verified, on or before six months from this 15th day of January, 1892. SAMUEL MICHEN, Guardian of said estate. J. E. Magers, Atty for said estate. 1-15-92

Allow but three side branches to form the first season besides a central leader. The second season shorten the leader or central shoot back one-third of its growth, and the three laterals or side branches to one foot; this will cause them to branch, which is better than to have too many limbs come out of the body or trunk of the tree. The limbs will be stronger and better able to bear up under their load of fruit. The third season cut out all branches as they appear nearer than one foot above the first set of limbs and shorten again the laterals about one-third. After this you will have but little trouble, as you have learned what method to follow to keep your tree in good form. DON'T PLANT ONE TREE MORE THAN YOU WILL TAKE GOOD CARE OF. NEVER SOW TO GRAIN OR GRASS. Cultivate every year until first of August, then stop to allow your trees to harden up for winter. Now you can look over your long rows of beautiful trees with pleasure, and with the assurance of ample returns. I have emphasized the care and cultivation; there is so great need of reform in this respect. Horticulture ought to be reduced to a science, and not be a mere series of uncertain and blundering experiments. What is the duty of those who see the defects? It is plainly to show those engaged in this employment what his higher success demands.

FRUITS AND FLOWERS has a great future. I would like to have every young man in the land read it. The longer I live and the more experience I have in this business, the more I am impressed with the absolute necessity for a portion of our young men to learn the trade of cultivating fruit for their occupation. I would not say that no one ought to try to raise fruit until he has learned the trade, for every farmer should raise his own fruit of all kinds, though he cannot succeed as well as the professional fruit grower; but I do say, many more could be profitably employed in raising good fruit.

Our Eastern fruit growers are exporting apples to England, and we can substitute our own fruit for the large quantity now imported in various forms. Besides, our own markets are not half supplied. The consumption of fruit will increase as the supply is increased. More fruit will be better for our health. Dispense with whisky, beer, and tobacco and use fruit instead. It will be a great national blessing. And then there is a good moral influence in bringing up a family of children on a fruit farm, which is a better legacy for the sons and daughters than all other property. I plead for a higher education of farmers. I have not only the greatest personal respect for their calling, but a strong personal attraction to it. I was brought up on a farm; have always had farmers for my neighbors and friends; am fully half a farmer, myself, by right of both birth and experience. I know the hard facts of a farmer's life, and I equally know its pleasant possibilities. And now where in America have we greater hope for success than here in this beautiful North Pacific coast; no hard winters to kill our trees; no spring frosts to destroy the young fruit; in fact, every variety is inclined to overproductiveness. I would like to give some of the advantages of thinning, but I will leave it for another time, as I have already exhausted your patience. Fruits and Flowers.
