Can't Cook as Mother Did!

How many a young wife's heart has been saddened by hearing the above remark! And yet how often the words are true; especially when cake, pastry or biscuit are in question! The reason is plain, yet it is "like telling a secret."

Our mothers used and are using Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder. They cannot be misled into using any of the ammonia or alum powders. No dyspepsia no sallow complexions, when mother did the cooking.

The first symptoms of ammonia poisoning, says a New York paper, which appear among those who work in ammonia factories, is a discoloration of the nose and forehead. This gradually extends over the face until the complexion has a stained, blotched and unsightly appearance

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder is the only pure cream of tartar powder that contains the whites of eggs.

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder is reported by all authorities as free from Ammonia, Alum, or any other adulterant. In fact the purity of this ideal powder has never been questioned.

"German Syrup"

Martinsville, N.J., Methodist Parsonage. "My acquaintance with your remedy, Boschee's German Syrup, was made about fourteen years ago, when I contracted a Cold which resulted in a Hoarseness and a Cough which disabled me from filling my pulpit for a number of Sabbaths. After trying a Physician, without obtaining relief—I cannot say now what remedy he prescribed—I saw the advertisement of your remedy and obtained a bottle. I received such quick and permanent help from it that whenever we have had Throat or Bronchial troubles since in our family, Boschee's German Syrup has been our favorite remedy and always with favorable results. I have never hesitated to report my experience of its use to others when I have found them troubled in like manner." REV. W. H. HAGGARTY, of the Newark, New Jersey, M.E. Conference, April 25, '90.

MR. M'SWAT AS A PROTECTOR.

Life Is Nothing to Him When There Are Burglars in the House.

"Billiger! Hark!"

Mrs. McSwat sat straight up in bed and listened to a noise she seemed to hear down stairs.

"What is it, Lobelia?" inquired Mr. McSwat drowsily.

"It sounds like somebody talking. Listen!"

Mr. McSwat listened. He, too, thought he heard something.

"I will see what it is," he said, speaking very loudly and moving very leisurely. "Don't be alarmed, Lobelia. We are well armed. Beside these two revolvers," he continued, in a high pitched voice intended to terrify any unauthorized persons that might be in the house, "I have a heavy cane and a large glass paper weight. Be calm, Lobelia!"

He crawled out of bed, collected his arsenal, and the procession moved down stairs in the following order:

Mr. McSwat, with revolver in each hand, heavy cane under his arm, and paper weight in pocket of his embroidered robe de nuit.

Mrs. McSwat, ready to scream, with front hair in curl papers, lamp
in one hand, and bottle of camphor in the other.

At the landing half way down Mr. McSwat stopped.

"Lobelia," he observed, sternly, "it will be necessary for you to go in front. You have the lamp. I'll protect you."

Mrs. McSwat took her place in front as directed, and the procession moved on again. At the foot of the stairs Billiger stopped and took up a commanding position near the hall rack.

"Now, Lobelia, go ahead with the lamp into this room on the left. I will remain here to see if anybody rushes out. If anybody does rush out," he exclaimed, grinding his teeth in a manner horrible to hear, "I will put fourteen bullets through him, knock him down with this paper weight and break every bone in his body with this cane!"

Mrs. McSwat went into the room on the left and looked around.

"Do you see anything, Lobelia?" asked her husband in a voice of thunder.

"No, Billiger."

"Go through the other rooms!" he roared, bracing himself firmly against the wall.

While Billiger remained in the hall, armed to the teeth, pale with iron resolution and trembling with ungovernable ferocity, Lobelia explored all the rooms and came back.

"Did you see anything?" he demanded.

"Not a thing, Billiger."

"Give me the lamp!"

He handed his weapons to Lobelia, took the lamp, and with dauntless bravery went through the rooms himself.

"It wasn't anything, Lobelia," he said, with extreme disgust. "You didn't hear anything or anybody!"

The procession moved up the stairway on the return trip.

"You must try to overcome this timidity of yours, Lobelia," said Mr. McSwat, as he put down the lamp and relieved his wife of her load of deadly weapons. "If I hadn't been here to protect you," he grumbled, crawling back into bed, "you would have frightened yourself to death."—Chicago Tribune.

SENSATIONAL MURDER TRIAL.

Some of the Strange Features of a Virginia Tragedy.

The killing of Ned Hannegan by Thornton J. Hains, near Fortress Monroe, and the recent trial and acquittal of Hains taken together constitute the most puzzling and peculiar case that has interested Americans for many years. The two were intimate associates and had never exchanged angry words so far as known, both belonged to distinguished families and Hannegan was noted for mildness rather than tendencies to anger.

But these are not the facts which make the tragedy so fascinating. There is a mystery of contradiction in the evidence which cannot be explained by the ordinary rules, and there is evidently "something back," as people say—something in the past which makes the case one like those the Greeks believed to be the work of an avenging Nemesis. Hains swore that he quarreled with Hannegan about putting their sailboat inshore, as a storm was rising, that Hannegan rose and advanced on him with the uplifted oar, and that he being in fear of his life, fired twice.

NED HANNEGAN—T. J. HAINS.

So far Haines testified in his own defense. But Commander Robley D. Evans, U. S. N., who was within 100 yards and looking at them, testified that Hannegan did not rise, that he did not even allow the oar to slip from its place till he fell and that Hains advanced a step and fired "down at the face of the man who was rowing"—namely, Hannegan. Of course every criminal lawyer would say at once that the direction taken by the balls ought to show at a glance the relative positions of the two. So Dr. Peekes, the coroner, was called.

He testified that one ball struck the inside bend of the right elbow on a straight line, and "it could not have been inflicted if Hannegan had had his arm raised to strike a blow unless the man who fired stood right over him. The ball which entered the chest also entered on a straight line." Against all this the defense had the testimony of a half idiot negro, Lincoln Smith, who swore that Hannegan struck at Hains, but he could not tell which way the boat was headed, or whether Hannegan struck once or twice, or anything else. He simply insisted on the attack by Hannegan and knew no more. All the rest of the testimony either corroborated that of the coroner and Commander Evans, or was irrelevant to the main issue. And on that evidence "twelve good men and true" acquitted Hains.

It came out in cross-examination that Commander Evans had had a difficulty with Hains and had ceased to speak to him. Also that he "paid no more attention to the boat after the shooting, because he thought the boys were skylarking." On this and other points, says the local report, Colonel John S. Wise "kept the courtroom in a roar of laughter while he was speaking" for the defense. Another lawyer for the defense begged the jury not to "shed the blood of a young Virginian whose grandfather served his country with honor—whose uncle fell in the Confederate cause."

After this it is not surprising to read that Senator Voorhes for the defense was, according to Colonel John S. Wise, "not up to his usual strength." There was an indignation meeting, and then one of the jurors went gunning for Mr. Lipscomb, an attorney. And finally it is announced that the defendant had frequently played cards with one of the jurymen in his cell and that after the trial he "treated all the jury men to mint juleps."

AMMONIA AND ALUM

In Banking Powder—How to Detect Them.

In view of what the Minnesota Senate has done, it is hoped that legislative bodies in other States will soon take up the subject of food adulteration. The subjoined list of baking powders containing ammonia and alum, compiled from official reports and published in a recent number of the Scientific American, is given below. "It deals in a direct manner with an evil which must be cut down," said the Chicago Tribune in commenting on the Scientific American report. Following is a partial list of

AMMONIA AND ALUM BAKING POWDERS.
Compiled from Official Reports.

Powders marked with a star seem to have a general sale, as they are mentioned in at least two of the reports:

*ATLANTIC & PACIFIC.	*ROYAL.
CROWN.	SILVER STAR.
*DAVIS O. K.	*SNOWDRIFT.
GEM.	STAR.
*KENTON.	STANDARD.

There are, in addition to the foregoing list from the Scientific American, a number of such powders sold in the Western that were not found in the Eastern stores.

Following is a list of the most prominent:

ANDREWS' PEARL .... Contains Ammonia
(C. E. Andrews & Co., Milwaukee.)
ACME .... Contains Ammonia
(Thos. Wood & Co., Philadelphia.)
BON BON .... Contains Alum
(J. C. Grant Baking Powder Co., Chicago.)
CALUMET .... Contains Alum
(Calumet Baking Powder Co., Chicago.)
CLIMAX .... Contains Ammonia
(Climax Baking Powder Co., Indianapolis.)
FOREST CITY .... Contains Ammonia, Alum
(Vouwie Bros., Cleveland.)
HOTEL .... Contains Ammonia, Alum
(J. C. Grant Baking Powder Co., Chicago.)
HERCULES .... Contains Ammonia
(Hercules Baking Powder Co., San Francisco.)
ONE SPOON, TAYLOR'S .... Ammonia, Alum
(Taylor Mfg. Co., St. Louis.)
RISING SUN .... Contains Ammonia
(Phoenix Chemical Works, Chicago.)
ROYAL .... Contains Ammonia
(Royal Baking Powder Co., New York.)

Ammonia and alum are the most common adulterants used in the manufacture of baking powders. The government report shows that a large percentage of the baking powders on the market contain either one or the other, or both these pernicious drugs.

What woman would use an ammonia or alum baking powder if she knew it? Such powders not only undermine the health, but ammonia gives to the complexion a sallow or blotched appearance. The presence of ammonia or alum in a baking powder, however, can easily be detected.

To Detect Ammonia.—Mix one heaping teaspoonful of baking powder with one teaspoonful of water in a tin cup; boil thoroughly for a few moments, stir to prevent burning, and if ammonia is present you can smell it in the rising steam. Or place a can of the suspected powder top down on a hot stove for a minute or two, then take off the cover and smell.

To Detect Alum.—Alum powder can be usually detected by putting a couple of teaspoonfuls of the powder in a glass of cold water. If no effervescence—that is, bubbling or simmering—takes place, condemn the powder and return it at once.

JOHN CHAPMAN, OF RAMAPO.

Needed to Fill a Long Felt Want Which the Fat Man Refused to Recognize.

It was a late boat crossing the Erie ferry, and there were only three or four passengers in the men's cabin. One of them was a thin man with a long linen duster and a tall white hat. Although there were many vacant seats, this passenger, after a deliberate inspection of the interior, went to the far corner of the cabin and sat down in a seat next to a fat man with a big valise.

"John Chapman, of Ramapo!" exclaimed the spare man. "How are you tonight?" The fat man stared a moment at the speaker and then said:

"I am not John Chapman, of Ramapo, but I am quite well tonight."

"Not John Chapman, of Ramapo?" said the thin man, apparently much surprised. "Why, are you sure?"

"Well, I guess I ought to know who I am!" exclaimed the fat man.

"Certainly, sir, certainly; to be sure!" replied the thin man. "But, mercy! how could I be so much mistaken? Why, if I had gone on with what I had on my mind I would have been mortified beyond measure! I was so sure you were John Chapman, of Ramapo."

"Mistakes like that frequently happen," said the fat man.

"Yes, I know," said the thin man. "It is not the mistake I deplore so much. The thought of the mortification I would have suffered if I had gone on and done what I had on my mind, and then found that you were not John Chapman, of Ramapo, is what annoys me. Mercy!" The fat man bowed.

"Yes, indeed," continued the thin man. "I don't know what made me pause on this occasion, for I always go right up to John and without ceremony say, 'Loan me a dollar till tomorrow.' Now, if I had done that tonight, and, after you had loaned me the dollar, I had discovered that you were not John Chapman, of Ramapo, just see how deadly my mortification would have been. Mercy! It makes me cold to think of it!"

The fat man assured him, with a smile, that there would have been no occasion whatever for mortification on that score.

"Thanks! thanks!" exclaimed the thin man. "You are very kind. But I don't know as I ought to accept it even until tomorrow. If you were only John Chapman, of Ramapo, now! You are exceedingly like him in looks and manner!" The fat man bowed, but the smile was missing. The boat was now nearing her slip.

"If, as you say, my fears of being mortified beyond measure if I had gone at you as John Chapman, of Ramapo, are groundless," said the thin man blandly, "I will put the thought aside and accept the loan—but only till tomorrow! Only till tomorrow!"

The fat man grabbed his valise and hurried on deck, looking back once or twice to see if the thin man was in pursuit. He wasn't. He sat still and watched the fat man as he disappeared across the gangplank. Then he arose and mopped his forehead with a red handkerchief.

"It's singular, nowadays, how tight the money market is," said he.—New York Sun.

Electricity in Agriculture.

One of the first to recognize the great importance of utilizing electricity for farming purposes in England was the Marquis of Salisbury, who not only uses the water power on his estate for lighting by electricity, but also grinds his corn, cuts his horse fodder, pumps his water and does a variety of other work by means of electric motors. On many manors which are adjacent to streams of water the farmers are beginning to realize the great possibilities which are close at hand for the more economical working of their farms and are installing electrical plants which can be worked at a cost unapproached by any other means.

There are tens of thousands of portable and other steam engines owned by agriculturists in this country which could be utilized in a variety of ways in connection with electricity. The mere saving in insurance alone would in numberless cases justify a farmer in driving his thrashing, chaff cutting and grinding machinery by an electric motor instead of being obliged to bring his engine, as now, right into his farm buildings.—New York Telegram.

What Englishmen Want.

An American woman who had married an Englishman of high rank returned home for a visit after a couple of years' experience in her adopted country. "How very odd," said one of her acquaintances, "that Lady C— has not become Anglicized in the least, she is more American than ever." The remark repeated to the newly made peeress was received with an appreciative smile.

"I am so glad," she exclaimed. "I am naturally imitative, you know, and I was so afraid I might lose what I consider my distinction. You people don't understand over here," she went on. 'You make a great mistake in copying English people when you go to London; they have enough of their own kind over there, they want something new and original, not a copy of themselves."—New York Tribune.

The Cow Was Raised.

A man in Jefferson county, who had a sick cow, wanted to get her up. Not being able to do so with his strength he fixed a blanket under her, attached his hay carrier and hitched on the old horse, which had not forgotten the distance he had to go to deliver the hay and didn't propose to stop short. He drew the cow up to the top of the barn, where the track carried her over an empty mow, when the blanket gave way and dropped her on the empty logs, breaking every bone in her body.—Tyrone (N. Y.) Herald.

FRIGHTFUL SHIPWRECKS.

Staunch ships strike and founder, the fierce winds and mountainous waves sweep noble mariners' "hearts of oak" to shipwreck and to death, yet that does not prevent the lubberliest landsman from risking his life on the stormy Atlantic in the role of tourist or commercial traveler. But, if he shall reach his destination safely, he will scarcely have escaped some of the qualms of seasickness, unless he takes with him Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, that inimitable specific for nausea. Bad water on long trips is a threat to the voyager, but this may be deprived in a great measure of its disordering effects upon the stomach, bowels and liver by the Bitters. Against the prejudicial effects of malaria, bad diet, fatigue and exposure it is also efficacious. It averts, moreover, rheumatism and kidney complaints. Don't travel on sea or land without it.

There is a man in St. Louis who has a wonderful memory. It is thought the city will eventually employ him to remember the Sabbath.

THEY NEVER FAIL.

J. N. Harris, 3 Fulton Market, New York city, says:

"I have been using BRANDRETH'S PILLS for the last ten years. They are a wonderful medicine. There is nothing equal to them as Blood Purifiers and Liver Regulators. But I wish to state how remarkably they cure rheumatism, and how easily; I was affected by rheumatism of the legs. My business (wholesale fish dealer) naturally leads me to damp places. I was so bad I could not walk, and at night I suffered fearfully; I tried Balsams, Sarsaparillas and all kinds of tinctures, but they did me no good, and I was afraid of being a cripple. I finally commenced using BRANDRETH'S PILLS. I took two every night for ten nights; then I began to improve. I continued taking them for forty days, and I got entirely well. Now, whenever sick, I take BRANDRETH'S PILLS. They never fail."

There's danger in a cough—more than ever when your blood is "bad." It makes things easy for Consumption. But there's a cure for it in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. A positive cure—not only for Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Bronchitis, Asthma and all lingering Coughs, but for Consumption itself in all its earlier stages. It's reasonable. All these diseases depend on tainted blood. Consumption is simply Lung-scrofula. And for every form of scrofula and blood-taint, the "Discovery" is a certain remedy. It's so certain, that its makers guarantee it to benefit or cure, in every case, or the money is refunded. With a medicine that is certain, this can be done.

There's a cure for Catarrh, too, no matter what you've been led to believe. If there isn't, in your case, you'll get $500 cash. It's a bona-fide offer that's made by the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. There's risk in it, to be sure, but they are willing to take the risk—you ought to be glad to take the medicine.
