

One Pure Baking Powder.

Like Telling a Secret.

A story is told and it is a true story that over seventy per cent. of all the baking powders sold contain either alum or ammonia, and many of these powders contain both. The ill effects upon the system of food raised by alum or ammonia powders are the more dangerous because of their insidious character. It would be less dangerous for the people were it fatal at once, for then such food would be avoided, but their baneful action because imperceptible at first and slow in its advances, is no less certain.

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder is declared by all authorities as free from alum, ammonia or any other adulterant. Its purity has never been questioned, and while it does finer and better work, it costs no more at retail than many of the adulterated powders.

BEWARE OF OINTMENTS FOR CATARRH THAT CONTAIN MERCURY.

As mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do to the system is too great to possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, O., by F. J. Cheney & Co.

Sold by druggists; price, 75c per bottle. One of the hardest lines of duty to a woman is the clothes line.

The manufacturers of Star Plug chewing tobacco have made St. Louis the greatest tobacco market in the world by furnishing the consumer a better tobacco than is produced by other manufacturers and always making the plugs of Star Plug sixteen-ounce pounds. It pays to study the interests of the consumer, as he is "the Judge and the jury."

Tobacco is man's most universal luxury; the fragrant aroma of MASTIFF PLUG CUT draws people to pipe-smoking, even those who never used tobacco before.

Beauty often depends on plumpness; so does comfort; so does health. If you get thin, there is something wrong, though you may feel no sign of it.

Thinness itself is a sign; sometimes the first sign; sometimes not.

The way to get back plumpness is by CAREFUL LIVING, which sometimes includes the use of Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil.

THE FOXGLOVE.

In grandmother's garden, in shining rows, The foxgloves tall and trimly grow. The sun dial points the hours to tell, And foxgloves tell the hours to tell. And all is clear and all is fair, As childhood's self and dwelling there.

In grandmother's garden a child I played, With naught save love to make afraid; I counted the spots upon the cheek, And knew it could tell, if it would but speak, How cunning fairness in the night, Had painted them by faint starlight.

In grandmother's garden the foxgloves gay With every kind of color and hue, Full well I knew that they were wise, And watched with childhood's eager eyes To see them whisper each to each, And catch the secrets of their speech.

In grandmother's garden still I walk, And still the foxgloves seem to talk, Their speech not yet my manhood learns, But when I lean them you in return, I wonder at them still in vain, But with them am a child again.

—Arlie Bates in Youth's Companion.

THE SANCTITY OF LOVE.

The Abbe Marignan, as soldier of the church, bore his fighting life well. He was a tall, thin priest, very fanatical, of an ecstatic but upright sort. All his beliefs were fixed without ever a wavering. He thought that he penetrated the designs, the wishes, the intentions of the creator.

Everything in nature seemed to him created with an absolute and admirable logic. The "wherefore" and the "because" were always balanced. The dawns were made to render glad your waking, the days to ripen the harvest, the rains to water them, the evenings to prepare for sleeping, and the nights dark for sleep.

The four seasons corresponded perfectly to all the needs of agriculture; and to him the suspicion could never have come that nature has no intentions, and that all which lives lives for itself, on the contrary, to the hard conditions of different periods, of climates and of matter.

Only he did hate women; he hated them unconsciously, and he despised them by instinct. He often repeated the words of his Master, "Woman, what have I to do with thee?" and he added, "One word almost say that God himself was ill pleased with that particular work of his hands." Woman was the temptress who had ensnared the first man; she was the being which is feeble, dangerous, mysteriously troubling, and even more than her weak body he hated her loving soul.

He had often felt women's tenderness attach itself to him, and though he knew himself to be unlovable, he grew used to it, indeed, just like a trap, with her arms extended and her lips open toward a man.

He had indulgence only for nuns rendered harmless by their vow; but he treated them harshly notwithstanding, because, ever living at the bottom of their chaste hearts, he perceived that eternal tenderness which constantly went out to him although he was a priest.

He was conscious of it in their looks, more moist with pity than the looks of monks; in their ecstasies, in their transports of love, which angered him because it was women's love; and he was also conscious of it, of that accused tenderness of their voices when they spoke to him, in their lowered eyes, and in the meekness of their tears when he reproved them.

And he shook his cassock on issuing from the doors of the convent, and he went off with long strides, as though he had fled before some danger.

He had a niece who lived with her mother in a little house near by. He was bent on making her a sister of charity.

She was pretty, and hair-brained, and a great tease. When the abbe sermonized she laughed, when he was angry at her she kissed him vehemently, pressing him to her heart, while he would seek involuntarily to free himself from this embrace, which, notwithstanding, made him taste a certain sweet joy, awakening deep within him that sensation of fatherhood which slumbers in every man.

Often he talked to her of God, of his God, walking beside her along the foot-paths through the fields. She hardly listened, and looked at the sky, the grass, the flowers, with a joy of living which could be seen in her eyes. Sometimes she rushed forward to catch some flying creature, and bringing it back, would cry: "Look, my uncle, how pretty it is! I should like to kiss it." And this necessity to "kiss flies" or "kiss berries" worried, irritated and revolted the priest, who saw even in that the incredible tenderness which ever springs at the hearts of women.

And now one day the sacristan's wife, who kept house for the Abbe Marignan, told him very cautiously that his niece had a lover.

He experienced a dreadful emotion, and he stood choked with the soap all over his face, being, in the act of shaving.

When he found himself able to think and speak once more he cried, "It is not true; you are lying, Melanie!"

But the peasant woman put her hand on her heart: "May our Lord judge me if I am lying, Monsieur le Cure. I tell you she goes to him every evening as soon as your sister is in bed. They meet each other beside the river. You have only to get there between 10 o'clock and midnight, and see for yourself."

He ceased scratching his chin, and he commenced to walk the room violently, as he always did in his hours of gravest thought. When he tried to begin his shaving again he cut himself three times from nose to ear.

All day long he remained silent, swollen with anger and rage. To his priestly zeal against the mighty power of love was added the moral indignation of a father, of a teacher, of a keeper of souls, who has been deceived, robbed, played with by a child. He had that egotistical choking sensation such as parents feel when their daughter announces that she has chosen a husband without them and in spite of their advice.

After his dinner he tried to read a little, but he could not bring himself so far, and he grew angrier and angrier. When it struck 10 he took his cane, a formidable club which he always carried when he had to go out at night to visit the sick, and he silently regarded the enormous candle, holding it in his solid countryman's fist and cutting threatening circles with it in the air. Then suddenly he raised it, and grinding his teeth he brought it down upon a chair, the back of which, split in two, fell heavily to the ground.

He opened his door to go out, but stopped upon the threshold, surprised by such a splendor of moonlight as you seldom see.

And since he was endowed with an exalted spirit—such a spirit as must have belonged to those dreamy poets, the fathers of the church—he felt himself suddenly distracted, moved by the grand and serene beauty of the pale moonlight.

In his little garden, quite bathed with the soft brilliance, his fruit trees, all around, were outlining in shadow upon the walk, their slender limbs of wood scarce clothed by verdure, while the white honeysuckle climbing on the house wall exhales delicious, sugared breaths, and seemed to cause to hover around the warm, clear night a perfumed soul.

He began to breathe deep, drinking the air as drunkards drink their wine, and he walked slowly, being ravished, astounded and almost oblivious of his niece.

As soon as he came into the open country he stopped to contemplate the whole plain, so inundated by this caressing radiance, so drowned in the tender and languishing charm of the serene nights. At every instant the frogs threw into space their short metallic notes, and the distant nightingales mingled with the softness of the moonlight that fitful music of theirs which brings no thoughts but dreams, that light and vibrant melody of theirs which is composed of kisses.

The abbe continued his course, his courage failing, he knew not why. He felt, as if he were enfeebled, and suddenly exhausted; he had a great desire to sit down, to pause here, to praise God in all his works.

Down there, following the bends of the little river, wound a great line of poplars. On and about the banks, wrapping all the tortuous watercourse with a kind of light, transparent wadding, hung suspended a fine mist, a white vapor which the moon rays crossed and silvered, and caused to gleam.

The priest paused, yet again penetrated to the bottom of his soul by a strong and growing emotion.

And a doubt, a vague uneasiness, seized on him; he perceived that one of those questions which he sometimes put to himself was now being born.

Why had God done this? Since the night is destined for sleep, for unconsciousness, for repose, for forgetfulness of everything, why, then, make it more charming than the day, sweeter than the dawns and the sunsets? And this slow seductive star, more poetical than the sun, and so discreet that it seems designed to light up things too delicate, too mysterious, for the great luminary—why was it come to brighten all the shades?

Why did not the cleverest of all songsters go to rest like the others? And why did he set himself to singing in the vaguely troubling dark?

Why this half veil over the world? Why these quiverings of the heart, this emotion of the soul, this languor of the body?

Why this display of seductions which mankind never sees, being asleep in bed? For whom was intended this sublime spectacle, this flood of poetry poured from heaven to earth?

And the abbe did not understand at all.

But now, see, down there along the edge of the field appeared two shadows walking side by side under the arched roof of the trees all soaked in glittering mist.

The man was the taller and had his arm about his mistress' neck, and from time to time he kissed her on the forehead. They animated suddenly the lifeless landscape, which enveloped them like a divine frame made expressly for this. They seemed, these two, like one being, the being for whom was destined this calm and silent night; and they came up toward the priest like a living answer, the answer vouchsafed by his master to his question.

He stood stock still, quite overwhelmed with a beating heart. And he thought to see here some Bible story (like the loves of Ruth and Boaz, the accomplishment of the will of the Lord in one of those great scenes talked of in the holy books).

Through his head began to hum the verses of the Song of Songs, the ardor, the call of the body, all the passionate poetry of that poem which burns with tenderness and love.

And he said to himself, "God perhaps has made such nights as this to clothe with the ideal the loves of men."

He withdrew before this couple, who went ever arm in arm. For all that it was really his niece; but not to be asked himself if it was not about to disobey God. And does not God indeed permit love, since he surrounds it visibly with splendor such as this?

And he fled in amazement, almost ashamed, as if he had penetrated into a temple where he had not the right to go.—Guy De Maupassant.

The Emperor as a Business Manager.

When I think of the emperor as the business manager of a practical political corporation I am constantly inclined to look for the key to his success and popularity in Germany by quoting the laconic opinion of him expressed by an American officer who was presented to him for the first time at the Baltic manor in 1890. He came away from his audience flushed with excitement, and I expected a vigorous report from the fact that this officer had been drawing his impressions of Germany principally from Paris and St. Petersburg.

"What do you think of him now?" I said.

"Immense; he has a genuine Yankee head on him."

It only need be added that this comment was the highest in the court vocabulary of my fellow countryman.—Poulton Rigelow in Century.

A Sermon That Stopped a Horse.

The late Archbishop Tait, of Canterbury, once made an effective use of a sermon. Driving down Holloway hill he was confronted by a runaway horse, with a heavy dray, making straight for his carriage. He threw a sermon in its face. The horse was so bewildered by the fluttering leaves that it swerved and paused, the driver regained control, the sermon was picked up, and the bishop proceeded on his way. "I don't know," he said to his companion, the present Archbishop of York, "whether my sermon did any good to the congregation, but it was of considerable service to myself."—San Francisco Argonaut.

The Boys Go Armed.

It is but a short time ago that a professor in one of the leading colleges of San Francisco slapped the face of a rich banker who had published a long and bitter attack upon his (the professor's) venerable father, a divine of great eminence and fame. The professor was at once shot down, although he was entirely unarmed, and had informed his adversary of the fact. Yet the jury declared that it was a case of justifiable homicide, and the accused left the court without a stain on his character.

Even the children, aping their elders, carry pistols and knives with the utmost nonchalance, and a few weeks ago, when the principal of one of the public schools had occasion to administer some much needed corporal punishment to a lad of 12, the young rascal drew a huge revolver on the headmaster, and the services of the chief of police had to be called in for the purpose of disarming him.

At the request of the terrified principal the police subjected all the pupils present to a personal search and examination, with the result that thirty-five revolvers of all sizes, from the "Colt navy revolver" to the "22 caliber popgun," besides a dozen knives of murderous appearance, were seized and confiscated.—St. Louis Post Dispatch.

TAKEN FOR A CRANK.

A semi-fendish delight often seems to possess people of strong nerves in entering at those weak ones. The irritability of the nervous system is ridiculed as natural ill temper. The very genuine and distressing symptoms from which he suffers are made light of. "He" or "she" is a crank, the cheerful sort of sympathy with which the nervous invalid meets from the unfeeling and the thoughtless. At the same time to complain is more defined and none has a more easily explainable origin when it is chronic. Impaired digestion and assimilation are always accompanied by nervous debility and anxiety. Build up the powers of assimilation and digestion with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, and nervous symptoms, sick headaches and a generally feeble condition of the system are remedied. Remember that fearful ravages are produced by a gripe among weakly, nervous people. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters cures it, and prevents malaria, rheumatism and kidney complaint.

A WEAK BACK KEPT STRONG.

R. H. Gilliam, Hixburg, Appomattox county, Va., says:

"Alcock's Pain-Expeller has enabled me to work and labor for the last two years. I have been troubled with a pain across my kidneys and a weakness of the spine, which at times rendered me almost helpless. The first relief I obtained was by wearing two Alcock's Pain-Expellers, and in about two weeks, my back was as good as new. I am now, and I have no pain or difficulty. I consider them the best plasters in use. I, for one, cannot do without them."

"Excuse the liberty I take," as the convict remarked when he escaped from the state prison.

Coughs and Hoarseness.—The irritation which induces coughing is immediately relieved by "Brown's Bronchial Troches." Sold only in boxes.

Good looks go a long way, but finally the point wears out and there you are.

TRY GERMEX for breakfast.

Cleared away—all the troubles and ailments that make woman's life a burden to her. She's relieved, cured, and restored, with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Periodical pains, weak back, bearing-down sensations, nervous prostration, all "female complaints," are cured by it. It improves digestion, enriches the blood, dispels aches and pains, brings refreshing sleep, and restores health and strength.

It's a powerful general, as well as uterine, tonic and nerve, imparting vigor and strength to the entire system. Contains no alcohol to inebriate; no syrup or sugar to derange digestion; a legitimate medicine—not a beverage.

If you're a tired, nervous, or suffering woman, then the "Favorite Prescription" is the only medicine that's guaranteed, in every case, to bring you help. If it doesn't give you satisfaction, you have your money back.
