PACIFIC COLLEGE.
In "The land of big red apples,"
And of evergreens, and flowers, The land of summer sunshine,
And of winter's mists and showers;
In the land of lofty mountains, Whose snow-crowded summits rise, In majestic grandeur heavenward, As if to kiss the skies;
Where the peaks, like mighty sentinels, Their silent vigils keep;
Until their crests are hoary,
And their faces furrowed deep;
In the thriving town of Newberg, With its churches and its schools,
With these hills to girdle out wise men, But no sabons to gird out fools,
May be found aspiring people Who with broad Utopian plans, To advance the public interest,
And supply its great demands;
Who desirous of securing To our youth this seat of knowledge, Have with pains and perseverance, Planted here Pacific college.
In the valley of Willamette With the mountains as old "Round about Jerusalem."
For protection we are told, S made this newly christened school Having for its motto grand "Heart culture and head knowledge shall with us go hand in hand."
And its influence ever broadens, As the rivers toward the sea;
As if its power for good be ceaseless, As is famed Niagara,
By the mines of truth be opened,
And her secret depths explore,
"Till the riches that are garnered Shall be pleasing to the Lord."
—L. E. HORTLEY, in "The Crescent."

CORROBORATIVE: Shakespeare said,
"All the world's a stage." The Salem Democrat says "there are 294 convicts on the rostrum."

PORTLAND will steal some of Astoria's thunder by getting the cruisers Baltimore and Charleston to run up to the big city after the celebration.

The price of sugar will probably go up a notch in the east. Spreckels has sold his Philadelphia sugar refinery to the American Refinery Co. and competition will be less sharp for a time.

Right along with some of the anti Chinese talk it might be well to enter a vigorous protest against the system that made it possible for the steamer Darmstadt to unload 2315 immigrants last Monday.

A COMPANY with a capital stock of $5,000,000 has been organized in Chicago to work the nickel mine at Kiddles, Or., which is said to be the richest in the world, and the only one in the United States rich enough to pay for working.

Prof. J. M. Bloss, late of Topeka Kansas, has been chosen president of the Oregon State Agricultural College. There is room for improvement in the work of this institution, and it is to be hoped that Prof. Bloss is the right man to inaugurate the reform.

The man who undertakes to cheat a life insurance company by a sham death has tackled a big job. Raloff, a Seattle man, worked a pretty slick game a few weeks ago, but it was no go, and the authorities are now hunting a live man instead of a dead one.

The Corvallis Times shows the kind of stuff it is made of, when it takes sides with a saloonist against a minister of the gospel who has backbone enough to work at his trade seven days in the week, and who is using his utmost endeavor to prevent the spread of season influence in Monroe.

The promiscuous granting of teacher's certificates to persons without proper qualifications receives a good solid shoulder blow from the editor of the Forest Grove Times, who says he has in his possession manuscripts written by prominent teachers in Washington county, containing so many errors that the wonder seems to be that the writers are able to teach children anything.

Horan, of the Salem Journal, is an enthusiast on strawberry culture. He has thirty-six varieties growing, and expects to exhibit twenty or more varieties of this most excellent fruit at the strawberry fair in May. There isn't any variety of fruit in Oregon that will yield a better or more certain crop than strawberries, and we are glad to note that many of our people are finding it out.

The parties so prominent in the Santiam academy trouble may not realize it, but they are giving that institution a large amount of very unprofitable advertising. When church and school managers and patrons cannot agree, they had better settle matters quietly. They cannot adopt a more certain method of rination than by rushing into print.

A DESERTER from the regular army, who had been captured and imprisoned at Spokane, Wash., hanged himself one day last week. There is a good deal of barbarism connected with any military system that is so severe upon a deserter that he prefers death to the penalty provided. When the people of this country become civilized, such things will not be.

The question of the land included in the "quadrant," in Washington county, which has long been disputed over by the settlers and the O. C. Railway company, has been decided in favor of the settlers. This is a little out of the ordinary in the way of a decision, in this day when corporations, with their influence count for more than the protests of homemakers, and the five hundred settlers on the track are to be congratulated on their good fortune.

THREE men and a woman, all colored, were sold last Saturday at public auction for a term of sixty days at Fayette, Mo.
They were charged with the grave crime of having "no visible means of support." They were purchased "by reliable farmers" who paid from $10 to $13 for them. Who says the days of slavery are past? Why in the name of high heaven don't the decent people in Missouri see that the law which authorizes such inhumanity is repealed?

SALEM's system of city government is very unique. The police force appears to have adopted Penney's tactics, and has a way of getting rid of objectionable characters without putting the city to the expense of prosecution and prison keeping, by driving them out of town. They also arrest and fine a helpless woman peddler for not taking out a three months license, when she only wished to work in the city three days. And worse than all, there is never a protest raised by the papers published at the capital city, who evidently believe that it pays to place a premium on gambling and prostitution at the expense of virtue and honest industry.

SPRAYING TREES.
For spraying fruit trees the first requisite is a spray pump. Of these there are many patterns and they sell at from $1.50 to more than $100.00. To my mind the Best spray pump is the best. Not that my experience is very extensive, but I judge that the principle of an air chamber for continuous pressure, is better than a machine that stops spraying soon after pumping ceases.

I think any man with an apple or pear orchard of two or three hundred trees can afford to buy a good pump and should use it often. The object of spraying fruit is to destroy aphids, (both green and woolly), caterpillars, codlin moth, blight and scab, the last two named being fungus diseases.
We will take up the pests in the order named: Aphids. Probably the best remedy for these is kerosene emulsion. I have tried with apparent success, a tablespoonful of carbolic acid to three gallons of strong soap suds, for the destruction of green aphids. This might be made much stronger with acid, while the buds are dormant and may be worthy of further trial. We need not expect good fruit, and late keepers, while the vitality of the trees is being taken up by these insects.

London purple and paris green have no addition to aphids. Caterpillars or any leaf-eating insects can be destroyed by spraying with arsenical poisons. Codlin moth the same. In spraying for codlin moth, I would not recommend spraying so soon after the blossom falls as is usually done in the east. I believe our nights are so cool as to prevent the codlin moth from hatching out so early here, yet it is better to be in time to catch all the worms.
For blight and scab, there are several remedies. Perhaps the best is a modified Bordeaux mixture. W. J. Green says that it is proven that four pounds of sulphate of copper and four pounds of lime to fifty gallons of water is strong enough to do all the work expected from the Bordeaux mixture and he thinks many times, it might be weaker than this.
This modified Bordeaux mixture is superior to ammoniacal mixtures, in that it sticks better than any other fungicide.
Being so good to stick to the trees and fruit, it will require a less number of applications. One must learn partly by experience about how often and how long to continue spraying with this mixture. It has another great advantage. Paris green or London purple may be used with it and better results will be obtained than when they are used alone. Lime is a great preventive against burning the leaves with these arsenical poisons. You will find upon examination that almost all apples and pears in old orchards are more or less affected by the scab. It was stated at the January meeting of the state horticultural society, in Portland, by a prominent fruit dealer, that there are no pears to ship. Let us awake to the fact that we must spray or our fruit will not come into competition with those who keep up with the times.

Does spraying pay? Mr. Frank Well-house, a large apple grower says: "We sprayed 160 acres of apple orchard twice and 320 acres three times, and fully 50 per cent of the codlin moth were destroyed, some observers say 75 per cent." Mr. E. Clark, Osage City, Kansas, says:
"I would not take $100 for my sprayer and do with it, for I have gained 70 per cent over last year." This is almost the universal testimony of every man who owns a sprayer and uses it to the best advantage. Do not buy a cheap pump that will not give good satisfaction and will soon wear out. Use a good fine nozzle and keep the pressure up. Do not trust to hiring some one, but do the work yourself, then do it right. Take some good horticultural journal and keep posted. You can make a success of very few things without study and care. It is so with spraying, and again we say, spray.
DR. A. MILLS,
Dundee, Or.

OLD APPLES TREES.

It will be noticed by those who purchase apples that in many instances apples from certain orchards are apt to be more or less decayed. Even the latest keepers will begin to rot at the blossom end and have a dry, punky, rotting spot there that spreads all over the apple. Dealers are beginning to use discrimination as to kinds of apple trees they purchase from, for young, vigorous trees will usually produce vigorous and long-keeping fruit, while fruit from one of the old historical orchards may not keep well.

Questions arise in this connection of much interest. One: Does our mild climate produce fruit that does not keep because our winters are not cold and bracing? Another is: Have the trees of the old planting become decayed and incapable of producing sound fruit, or has the soil they have grown in forty years become exhausted of vitality or deprived of the constituents necessary to produce sound fruit? I have an old orchard that was planted forty years ago—in '52—and the grand old trees will sometimes hang with fruit to their utmost capacity.

The situation is favorable and many of the trees seem to be vigorous. There are also pear trees of Bartlett, Fall Butter, and Winter Nellis varieties, that bear ten to fifteen bushels each. The pears seem to do better than the apples, but none of the latest varieties of either have the long keeping quality to good advantage. I endeavored to trim and prune and cut back this old orchard to see if it is possible to renew its vigor by so doing. This experiment is too recent to be satisfactory as yet, but I am becoming to be afraid that by long taxing the fertile soil, it has lost some of its virtue and cannot respond, after forty years of such draught on its power, to furnish complete food to make the perfect and long-keeping apple.

Here is an interesting question for our professors of the State Agricultural College to study. It is important to know if our orchards should be dug around better and be nourished by applying fertilizers to replace lost quality. I know an orchard almost fifty years old that produces heavily yet. Are we to lose these old trees, or can we regenerate them?

The old orchards of other countries still bear fruit, and their experience may be of use. Do such old orchards in Ohio, for instance, produce sound and long keeping apples? These questions are important and should be answered as soon as possible. It is reasonable to suppose a decayed tree will not produce sound fruit; but where it is sound and vigorous and in good form, should it be pruned poor fruit because of its age? Poor fruit does to fatten swine, but won't do to ship by the car-load, or to keep for late use.—Fruits and Flowers.

STATE S. S. CONVENTION.

The seventh annual convention of the Oregon state Sunday school association will be held in Centenary Methodist Episcopal church, Portland, east side, by invitation of that church, beginning Monday, May 10th, at 2 o'clock p. m., and closing Wednesday, May 12th, at 12 o'clock m. As this is a mass convention, all interested in Sunday school work are invited to be present, and every Sunday school in the state is urged to send one or more representatives. No department of Christian effort affords better results than earnest, persistent, well directed work in the Sunday school, hence the attention of Pastors, Superintendents and Teachers is especially called to this convention, trusting that they will, as far as possible, be present, and add interest to the meeting by an intelligent discussion of the best methods to promote thorough and lasting results in this most important field of Christian service. Further, they are requested to give this notice as wide publicity as possible by announcement from pulpits and in schools. In addition to a number of the leading workers in our own state who will take part in this convention, we have the promise of a few more addresses by Rev. John A. Warden, D. D., of Philadelphia, who is acknowl-
