NEWBERG GRAPHIC.

ISSUED EVERY FRIDAY MORNING.

EDITORS AND PUBLISHERS:

FRIDAY, MAY 6, 1892.

Entered as second class matter at the post office at Newberg, Oregon.

HE POINTS A MORAL.

He never takes the papers, for "they're dull as all creation."
And besides, he's "up" with everything that goes.
That's why the train has left him when he gallops to the station,
And his friends are dead a year before he knows!
He never takes the papers, for he isn't a believer
In the news and sensations of the day;
That's why they've put his business in the hands of a receiver,
And his creditors are hauling him away.
—Atlanta Constitution.

INSANITY has come to benefit more men than it injures.

LATE telegraphic reports announce the probable election of a woman delegate to the republican national convention from Wyoming.

THE Portland Dispatch has grown so fat off the revenue derived from the city printing that it has been enlarged to eight columns.

R. G. HORR, of the New York Tribune, in making a list of the millionaires of the country, has reached the four thousandth. Is it any wonder that times are hard around this print shop?

THE Kalamath Falls Express is the youngest newspaper on our table. Born April 28th of democratic parents, it starts out with a good advertising patronage and bright hopes for the future.

POLITICAL timber must be a little short in Morrow county. T. W. Ayers, Sr., has been nominated by the democrats for county coroner, while his son, T. W. Ayers, Jr., has been nominated by the republicans for the same office.

IF THE Russian government was as sincere in its efforts to relieve its starving people, as in its expressions of thankfulness over the shipload of wheat and flour recently sent from America, there would soon be no need of outside help.

WHILE congress is making appropriations, would it not be a good plan to recognize the pledges given to the different Indian tribes throughout the country, and make such appropriations as will enable the government to redeem them.

WITH all its wickedness the city of Portland is in a fair way to become worse still if the sentiment expressed by some of its prominent papers is any criterion. Sunday violators, prize fighters and gamblers receive more favorable mention than ministers of the gospel.

THE Rural Northwest announces that it has secured Prof. G. W. Shaw of the State Agricultural College, as corresponding editor. It is to be hoped that a knowledge of some of the benefits of this school and experiment station may now reach the people in a way to be understood and utilized.

THERE is a man in New York who is a hundred times a millionaire. His name is Jay Gould. There is said to be living in a rented tenement in the city of Portland, Oregon, a woman poor and old, the mother of Jay Gould's wife. If it needed anything else to prove the utter depravity of Jay Gould, it would seem that this would make the evidence conclusive.

IF THERE is any good reason why it is necessary for this government to keep on spending $6,000,000 per year in building a navy to rot and rust out, from sheer inactivity, or serve as a sort of holiday attraction on special occasions, we should like to have some of its advocates give expression to it. We are tired of the "because" and "if" theory. Sound solid reason is a whole lot more satisfactory.

THE Pasco (Wash.) Headlight is no more. The people of two states will now have a chance to give their eyes a rest, or feast them on some more inviting prospect. Meanwhile the two "colonels" who have furnished "ile" for the Headlight are basking in the country east of the Cascades, where business is brisk, and society is less particular in its estimate of a man's actions with other men's wives.

THE Californian Illustrated Magazine, is the name of the best literary magazine published on this coast. It is edited by Charles Frederick Holder, and is published by the California Publishing Co. San Francisco. It is filled with articles descriptive of points of interest, manners and customs, history archaeology and all else distinctively characteristic of the Pacific Coast country, and is well worth $3.00 per year.

The Walla Walla Union has this to say on the Chinese question: "If Tom Rose and his brother boycotters watch them they will discover that the saloon keepers all employ Chinamen to clean their spittoons. Why not let the proposed boycot begin on the booze sellers? If the boycotters would stop drinking until the saloon men quit luring Chinamen to clean spittoons, they would find more bread in the mouths of their families."

THE Dispatch tells us of a gentleman from Utah who was bunkoed out of $360 in Portland last week. He knew the parties who did the business, and could identify them, but as he would have to give bonds or go to jail if he preferred charges, he had to drop the matter, as he could get no bail in the city, being a stranger there. This amounts to a virtual protection to bunko men, and accounts for the many "sure thing" tricksters in the city.

A LOT of Portlanders, calling themselves the Willamette Rod and Gun Club, make a business of desecrating the Sabbath by target practice in South Portland, and disturbing the quiet of the neighborhood. Because a lady of South Portland has had some of these fellows arrested, the Oregonian proceeds to read her a lecture on calmness and patience, at the same time treating the aforesaid gun club to a large dose of taffy. The woman hasn't as much influence as the gun club, see?

THE worst pirates the country papers have to deal with are those big daily and weekly papers that issue special editions and send them out to the small offices, hoping thereby to get some free advertising. We have received several of them recently, and they are now doing duty as interior decorations to some Chinaman's front parlor and we are a quarter of a cent ahead. It takes cash to run a country paper, allee samee big daily, and if any fellow gets free advertising from us we would be pleased to have him call our attention to it.

WHEN an individual hires another to do a piece of work within a given time, he has a perfect right to expect it to be done. When the people elect representatives to congress and pay them for their time is it more than fair that they be expected to put in all the time they are paid for, in actual service of the people? To correct this evil, an amendment to the rules has been introduced into the national house of representatives, deducting from the salary of each member an amount equivalent to the time of his absence, unless good reason can be given for such absence.

PREPARE FOR DRY WEATHER.

The time of abundant grass is now here and many are apt to forget that it will not be long before we shall hear the cows calling for more feed. The empty stomachs of our cows mean dollars and cents thrown away, in keeping a valuable machine idle and wasting away, and is the greatest drawback to profitable husbandry.

No plant is better adapted, on most places on the coast, to help the feeder over the dry grass period, than corn; and there should now be planted plenty of it. Before commencing to plant, look out for a good preparation of the soil. Beginners do best to take a piece of land which is not suffering from lack of drainage, and should be the lighter rather than the heavier kind of soil. If the land is not very fertile, a few loads of well-rotted horse manure or short barnyard manure applied to an acre of ground will show splendid results. The best way to proceed for a small piece of ground is, after the land is plowed, harrowed and rolled, to work it lengthwise and crosswise, 3 feet, or 3 feet 6 inches, and then from a wagon, apply a fork full of manure to, say 4 hills. The manure is afterwards covered up with a little fine soil to a depth of 3 or 4 inches, packed down, and planting is now in order—3 kernels to the hill. As cultivation can be done both ways it is but little trouble to care for such a piece of corn, and it will return a big yield, not once in a while, but every season. When large fields are planted, a machine which plants in check rows, is in order, as well, also, as other provisions for fertilizing the fields, which should preferably be done in the early fall, as top dressing broadcast on plowed soil.—C. H. Schmidt, in Rural Northwest.

WHAT CROPS TO GROW AMONG FRUITS.

Where land is plenty and cheap, it would be folly to crowd things, or attempt to have the vegetable garden and fruit patch all in one. It is much more convenient to grow fruits and vegetables in separate patches.

Still there are many modest homes in villages and the suburbs of cities that have only one-eight or one-quarter of an acre of ground, too much for lawn and flowers alone, and not enough for a garden and fruit patch. To be able to enjoy the luxuries of home-grown fruits and vegetables, a system of close planting must be adopted in a case like this. We would then rather do without tree fruits, with the exception of a row of cherries, peaches, plums or pears near the line on the north and west sides. Grapes, of course, should not be omitted in any garden, no matter how small, since they require so little space compared with the amount of fruit they yield. There may be a row or two next to the trees, and at proper distance from them, trained on stakes or cheap trellis.

The grape rows are to be seven or eight feet apart, and the space or spaces between afford a splendid opportunity for growing strawberries, currants, gooseberries, or tomatoes, potatoes, beans, cabbages and similar crops. Where strawberries occupy a separate bed, they may be set in rows three or three and one-half feet apart, and allowed to form matted rows. No other crop is to be grown between them; but any bed after fruiting, if not to be preserved for another season, should at once be spaded, or plowed over, and planted with potatoes, turnips, cucumbers, sweet corn, celery, endive, spinach, or whatever crop may be most desirable, and promises to yet come to maturity. A few radishes, lettuces, beets, etc., may be sown here and there on little vacant spots, as a sort of catch crops; and so may some other vegetables. In fact, the ground of these limited areas should be kept fully occupied with one or the other of these crops during the entire season, one being planted in the place of another as quick as this latter is gathered and the spot has become vacant. Even a small piece of ground thus managed can furnish a pretty good supply of vegetables and fruits for the occupant's family.—Ex.

THE WEATHER FOR APRIL.

Throughout Oregon, the rains during April have been in excess of the normal amount. The total amount has varied from over four inches in the Willamette valley to two inches and over in southern and eastern Oregon. Snow has fallen on the mountains and higher elevations at frequent intervals. The rains have penetrated the soil, and it is now more thoroughly moistened than it has been for years. Water stands on the low lands of the Willamette valley. Temperature has been from 2 to 4 degrees below the normal for the month, this deficiency is apparent in every section of the state from the retarded condition of vegetation. The season is fully four weeks late. Frosts occured with unusual frequency and they did slight damage to the fruit interest. A severe wind and rain storm, one of the most severe on record occured on the 24th. There has been a marked deficiency in sunshine and an excess in the number of cloudy and rainy days. The weather has delayed spring seeding and farming operations in general, it has been unfavorable to shearing and lambing, the latter has been very successful however, fully 85 per cent of the lambs being saved. The wool clip is unusually good, the staple being long and remarkably clean. The acreage of grain is as large as ever before and considerable is yet to be sown, that which is sown is in first class condition, except in a few places on the low lands of the Willamette valley. The wheat has a good stand and has stooled well. Though the season is late, yet vegetation is healthy and offers bright prospects. B. S. PAGUE,
Observer.

TO YOUNG TEACHERS.

In the class-room, teachers do not confine the attention of the pupils exclusively to what is found in the books. "Books are but helps," or instruments. Be judicious and sparing in awarding credit or discredit marks; some pupils may devote much time and labor to the acquirement of their lessons, and yet in the class room be weak in the recitation; and to denounce such would tend to discourage rather than stimulate. Before entering on your duties for the day, be thoroughly conversant with the subject of each lesson. In hearing a lesson give the pupil time to answer when it appears that he has the correct idea, and merely hesitates to find words to express himself. Be sure the pupils have gained ideas; words, without ideas, clog the mind. The hearing of lessons should not occupy more than one hour and a half daily, the remainder of the day being devoted to actual teaching, when the lessons for the following day may be explained by the teacher. When practicable, teach by means of objects, or through the medium of the eye; in astronomy, use orrery, globes and diagrams; in spelling, frequently require the pupils to write the words or sentences given.—School Journal.

In almost every school there is an unpopular boy or girl—plain, stupid and disagreeable, as it seems—for whom nobody has a good word. If there is in your particular school such an unfortunate little outcast, whose life is all east wind and no sunshine, try and make friends with him or her. You will never regret your kindness, take my word for that. In a little while you will discover that the plain face has in it something really pleasing, if not actually beautiful; that the stupid head has plenty of sound sense and bright fancy, and that the disagreeable manners melt away before the sunshine of a little friendly interest. Pray make this small experiment. For yourself you will gain, I am sure, a faithful, loyal friend; and that, believe me, is no trifling gain; and as for that other, that poor little outcast, you will turn all his life to gold.—Anon.

A lady belonging to a community called the "Sisters of St. John the Baptist," in New York city, was spending a month not long since in one of our backwoods districts, says Kate Field's Washington. Going to the post office shortly after her arrival, she asked if any letter had come for Sister Bernardine. The rural postmaster looked bewildered for a moment. "Sister who?" he asked. "Sister Bernardine," repeated the lady. "A Sister of St. John the Baptist?" "Well, I should rather think not," replied the man with an uproarious laugh; "I guess he's been dead pretty near a hundred years now." —Ex.

MARION ITEMS.

Nathan Morris, from Indiana, is here with a prospect of locating. He is trying to rent a house for himself and family. Glad to welcome him to our town and there is still room for more. We have plenty of good land here yet and very cheap compared with Newberg and vicinity, and if there are any parties who may chance to want a cheap home, I would say, come and see Marion before locating elsewhere.

There will be a Christian Endeavor social at B. F. Hinshaw's, on the evening of the 29th. All invited.

Roger St. Helen is at Salem working with his brother Henry in the music business.

Hadley & White, our new merchants, are doing a fair business.

Our new postmaster will soon have his office completed, ready for use and the office will be transfered to it.

Marion was visited by the severest hail storm on the 25th, that has been known for years, which almost covered the ground and there was still some to be seen on the 27th. Fruit trees that were white as snow just before the storm, lost all their whiteness after it had passed, and yet we think the fruit crop will be fair, notwithstanding the frosts and hail.

William Fresh is adding in the way of improvement, a commodious building to be used for a work shop and wood house combined.

Our district school is flourishing and a fine lot of youngsters can be seen on the play ground in high glee, showing that they are not only interested in securing a good education but to become strong by a proper exercise of their young muscles.

Marion for health, pure water, pure air, and good society and no saloon.
