

WHERE DID CAIN GET HIS WIFE?

This question has puzzled all Bible Students for ages. We confess that we don't know.

However we do know that we can buy goods in the market as cheap as the City Stores, and our expenses are so much lower than Portland Houses that we can and do undersell them from $2.00 to $5.00 on every Suit.

GIVE US A TRIAL AND BE CONVINCED.

Remember we have the exclusive right to sell the celebrated Brownsville Woolen Goods.

FRIDAY, MAY 27, 1892.

Entered as second class matter at the post office at Newberg, Oregon.

J. B. Long and R. A. Harris, who bought the Sheridan Courier ought, have changed the name of the paper to the Amity Pagan. The first number is on our table, and we judge from it, that the Pagan is a smooth bore, and not very dangerous, unless it be at the breach.

THE WEATHER has been quite warm during the past week for common folks and the swarms of candidates that have been humming around, seem to regard the temperature as being tropical. By the close of the campaign some of the boys will be convinced that they live in a "horrid zone."

THE CAR, "Oregon on Wheels," arrived home on last Friday. This car was on the road twenty-nine weeks, visited twenty-four states, traveling 11,625 miles over thirty different lines of railroad, and was visited by 250,000 people. About 500,000 books and pamphlets, and 100,000 bottles of sample wheat were given away. No accident of any kind happened to the car and at every city visited, the people were anxious to learn more of this great and prosperous Oregon of ours.

LAST Friday's Oregonian stated that one William H. Elder, of Dayton, had caused the arrest of two women in Portland on Thursday charging them with larceny. Elder claimed that the women took him into a room over a saloon on Fifth street and relieved him of $19, before he knew what they were doing. A bad state of affairs when women take a strong man from the streets and rob him before he knows what they are doing. William had better take his mother with him when he goes to see the big city again.

We know that Salem in the past was a slow going city, but supposed that in later years a little more push had been inaugurated among the inhabitants of the said old capital. From the following from the Capital Journal, it seems that even in the present age it takes more than a fire to get the citizens out of their ordinary gait, however.

The need of horses furnished in the city to draw hose carts was shown at Wednesday's fire. The hose carts and hook and ladder truck were each drawn to the fire by a single horse hitched to an express wagon that happened to be near. Men got on the wagon and on the fire apparatus until the poor beast was compelled to pull two vehicles, two loads of men, and almost a good load for two horses besides. This is over loading one horse to say the least.

Some time ago the Pope Manufacturing Company, of Boston, Mass., announced that they would give 100 Volunteer Columbia bicycles as premiums on essays on "Good Roads." Every essay was required to be published in a newspaper of general circulation. Allen Cook of our town concluded to enter the contest and wrote an essay which was published in the Graphic a few weeks ago. Last Wednesday he received the following letter which explains itself.

BOSTON, MASS., May 19, 1892.

Mr. A. S. Cook,

Newberg, Oregon.
DEAR SIR:—It gives pleasure to announce the fact that you have been awarded one of the 100 Volunteer Columbia bicycles as prizes in the essay contest on "Good Roads." Kindly let us know just how you will have your machine shipped, whether by freight or express, and send us also the measure of your leg. Enclosed please find a copy of the circular containing a cut and description of the machine which you have won. Congratulating you on your success and wishing you many happy days a-wheel, I am very truly yours,
ALBERT A. POPE.

THE KANGAROO BALLOT.

The Australian ballot law is a great blessing. So much has been written and said about the intricacies of voting under the law that many voters are almost scared out of the notion of voting. The Portland Oregonian, a masterly mixer of things it does not like, is largely responsible for the prevailing idea that it is a tedious job to prepare a legal ballot for voting.

The law is not by any means a model. Much of the election machinery provided by it is cumbersome and needless outside the large cities. But anyone of ordinary intelligence may prepare his ballot correctly in five minutes. A lot of sample ballots precisely like the official ballot, except that they will be on colored paper, will be in circulation ten days or two weeks before the election so the voters will have become entirely familiar with the form of the ticket.

The voter receives the official ballot from the judges and he must immediately retire to one of the booths and prepare it so as to express his preference. Each office is clearly specified and after the name of the office the direction is given to cancel the names he does not want. The legal pencil is provided in the booth and all the voter has to do is to leave unscratched as many names as he is entitled to vote for—one for sheriff, three for representatives, etc. The cancelling is done in the plain, old-fashioned way by drawing the pencil across the name.

There is a good deal of cumbersome formality for candidates and officers to observe in the preparation of the ballot, but when it reaches the voter his duty is simple though the ticket be a yard long. At the recent election in this city conducted on the Australian plan there was but one illegal ballot cast in the whole city.—Oregon City Enterprise.

A CAUTION TO PARENTS.

If your child is pinning up butterflies, or dissecting frogs in the name of science, look into the matter a little. See for yourself if he is gaining enough science to pay for the torture he is inflicting, if he is gaining enough knowledge of the wonderful animal mechanism to pay for the spirit of cruelty he is also developing. Science and gentleness are compatible. Agassiz was humane and loving to an extreme degree. Our best surgeons are prompted by pity for the suffering patient to perform painful operations in the most speedy and skillful manner, and in their pity as an emotion ending in itself or at best in tears and a long drawn breath, lessens, while pity, as a motive is quickened, and gains power and purpose. If you can not give your boy a higher motive for dissection than curiosity or the desire to do what his associates do, it were better that he never studied the mechanism of the bee or the frog.

Perhaps these questions may need an answer at some time during your child's school life. Has dissection a place before the high school? Has vivisection a place even there? Should he kill or witness killing? If a collection is to be made, certainly the child should be taught how to collect humanely. For an older boy it affords an outlet for his energy, and well guided, will develop an interest in life and a love for life just because he sees how wonderful a thing that life is, but ~~not~~ ~~merely~~ ~~against~~ ~~scenery~~ ~~collected~~.

EVILS OF FUNGUS GROWTHS.

We have a great deal of the need of spraying trees to save the fruit from pests as the apple worm, but the time is coming when we shall hear more of spraying to save trees and fruit from various fungi that injure wood, leaf and fruit. Many apples and pears show the effect of fungus in scab and rust that leaves them unsightly and very seriously damaged in every way. Not only fruit, but leaf and bark, and even wood, are injured, as in the case of the Winter Nollia pear blight that has done great havoc in California. Pears are sensitive to this blight, and many apple orchards are infested by that or something similar.

In looking over Eastern exchanges, we see many notices of fungus on different fruits, and especially on the gooseberry and currant. There are also blights of a similar nature that attack other small fruits. This is not a treatise on fungi, but a general hint relative to treatment of fungus in common.

An exchange recommends that in spraying for the codlin moth with Paris green, using a quarter of a pound to fifty gallons of water, add four pounds of lime and four pounds sulphate of copper, and you will prevent the leaf blight. Probably this solution would prove to be a preventive against fungus in general on the apple and pear.

Eminent authority on horticulture offers a very valuable suggestion, that good soil, good trees and good cultivation have much to do with checking the spread of fungus, which always select weak and injured trees in preference. Fungus spores will not take hold of a strong and vigorous tree as readily as one that is weak and damaged. Therefore, to select good soil to plant on, good trees to plant, and give such care and cultivation as will insure a strong and healthy growth, will do much to prevent fungus growth in orchards.

What is needed is a solution that will answer to kill insect pests and insure a healthy tree. The fruit grower must test all things for himself, exchange experience through horticultural journals, and work in harmony with the different government and State experiment stations. With such general and experimental interest in these important questions, we shall soon make tests that will be of great value to the world in general and fruit-growers in particular.—Fruit and Flowers.

WEATHER REPORT.

The week opened cool and rainy and closed with continuous sunshine and unusually warm weather. On Friday the 20th the maximum temperature ranged from 85 to 95 degrees, except, of course, along the immediate coast. The total rain fell on Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday ranged from .30 to .60 of an inch. The winds for the last three days have been northerly and very dry. The hot weather on the 20th scalded wheat on wet lands and baked the soil on low ground, other than the weather was just what was needed. Farmers have been unable to finish spring work, which was delayed fully one month; vegetation is growing rapidly and promising well. The beneficial effect of the desirable change in the weather is shown in all vegetation, except that on low lands.

The effects of the April frosts are now being shown by the young fruit falling from the trees. In some localities there has been practically no damage to fruit, while in others there has been general loss and there will be a short crop, especially peaches; the latter conditions are principally on low lands. Acreage of spring sown grain is below the average. Strawberries are ripening in all sections.

EASTERN OREGON.

From the 1st of the month up to the 15th rains fell in the Columbia River Valley while rain and snow squalls occurred south of the Blue Mountains. Since the 15th there has been warmer weather and more sunshine.

About normal weather conditions now exist. In the latter part of the week there was a decided rise in the temperature. On the 20th the maximum temperature ranged from 80 to 90 degrees, with dry east to north winds.

From 14 to 36 of an inch of rain fell during the week. There has been a marked improvement in the growth and development of all vegetation. Wheat especially is doing finely, in sections the heads are three feet high. Spring grain is about sown, and corn planting is being finished. Some early planted corn rotted in the ground.

In Sherman County the corn is from 6 to 10 inches high. Every county reports very wet soil and unusually good prospects. The present weather conditions are welcomed by all.

Sheep shearing has been greatly delayed but is now in progress; the weather retarded shearing and some contracts for mutton could not be filled.

RIVERS.

The Columbia River and its tributaries are slowly and steadily rising, at the rate of one foot a day at The Dalles. Reports indicate a large amount of snow in the mountains, and the people along the upper river expect high water.

MRS. HARBOR'S LETTER.

Enroute, May 18, 1892.

ED'S GRAPHIC: My trip from Newberg by boat to Salem, was a delight. The Coast Range on our right, with its dark fir shadowed slopes, the Cascades on our left with their crowning glory, Mt. Hood and Jefferson, whose everlasting snows help to make the summer time in the Willamette valley such a delight; the river winding in and out towards the sea, like a thread of silver; their banks fringed with "osiers pale and copes low;" the profusion and variety of flowers dotting the green carpet everywhere; the trees shaking from their blossoms laden arms, their fading petals; the many song-birds, well known to the average American citizen, and new members of the feathered tribe, imported from other lands within the past few years, gave out their choicest melody.

These surroundings, to which was added the clear sunlight so enjoyable after the rainy season, all combined to make our ride pleasing.

Salem has many attractions. Located as it is on the bank of the river, it has all the advantages of water privileges. Its streets are broad, and noticeable for the magnificent row of maples that shade either side. Flowers are seen every where in doors and out; the home without flowers is an exception.

The stores will compare favorably in the line of goods carried, the taste shown in arranging their display, and their prices, with those of other cities of equal size. They have the modern motor and electric lines to meet the wants of suburban residents. Along with all this prosperity they are fostering the licensed saloon. Through this system of revenue they may be improving their streets, but they are certainly not improving their morals. From their twenty-three drinking places goes out a continuous influence for immorality and impurity.

Until the cities of our fair state see this, the tax payers will continue to pay the deficiency that arises from trials by judge and jury, for witness fees, and the usual expenses attending the courts. They will still build additions to the jails and prisons and almshouses. They will continue to find their sons educated to citizenship by the liquor traffic while the licensed saloon open three hundred and sixty-five days in the year, almost twenty-four hours in the day, and the church open two or three times in a week, and then from one to three hours.

Albany presents the same showing in business lines and beauty, and also saloon interests. The W. C. T. U. of Albany is in advance of most of these organizations in the valley. It owns a fine building, in which is a parlor and a large audience room. They are always at home, and can have any and all lectures they may wish, without consulting other organizations and meeting the possibility of closed doors against them, because they are fearless in the advocacy of every phase of evil. Right royally did they receive your correspondent.

Corvallis, with its agricultural college interests, is doing its share with the two towns already mentioned, in educating, through the school on the one hand, and the licensed saloon on the other.

Independence and Monmouth, so near that they are as one city, have the natural attractions of scenery that characterizes this entire valley. The state law prevents the establishment of saloons under the shadow of the Normal School, but the curse at Independence is felt even there. The worst case of intoxication I saw on my entire trip, save at Salem, I saw on the streets of Monmouth.

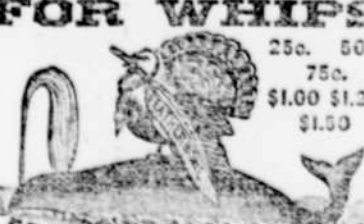

Dallas, lying as it does embowered among the hills, cannot fail to attract the eye of the passer by. From a point just south of the city, your correspondent looked across the valley, now putting on the holiday robes for the coming of the queen of the year, June. Twelve miles away can be seen churches and farm houses distinctly, the electric lights of Salem fifteen miles away, the trains on the standard gauge railroad, counting easily the number of coaches in the trains and seeing distinctly the motion of the wheels of the engine at a distance of five miles.

There is much to say of the resources and future of this, one of the garden spots of the earth, but time and space forbid. Newberg can boast of a freedom that is not found in all places. It is not dominated by the legalized saloon. We can send our sons and our daughters to its college and feel satisfied they will have an atmosphere of morality and purity surrounding them.
