BUDDHIST DOCTRINE.

A STATEMENT ABOUT SOME OF ITS MYSTERIOUS PHASES.

The Teaching of Rebirth Explained-The Fundamental Rules Upon Which the Whole Religion of Buddha 1s Built.

How Rebirth Is Obtained. A deep Buddhistical vein is now going brough the modern world of western naions, having become especially forceful ystem, more or less, on the very old teachngs of Buddha Gautama. There is no want of comprehensive sei-satific works in reference to Buddhism, and poets also have been unable to resist the great attraction of the doctrines of this Indian sage, as is shown in the works of Richard Wagner, which are largely influenced by the ground thoughts of Bud-dhism. The Samsara and Nirvana have become current expressions of many of our modern poets, not only in their descriptions of scenes relating to the world in which we live, but also in their pictures of salvation from this world of error, guilt, suffering, birth and death. The doctrine of Buddhism, of rebirth, that is, the continued reincorporation of our real spiritual being, forms the fundamental principle of the great Asiatic religions. The doctrine of the rebirth is alone sufmystery of existence; it explains why the righteous man is often so poor and despised, while the evildoer enjoys riches and honor, it replies to the despairing question, addressed constantly, but vainly, to heaven by millions of souls, "Why have we to suffer and endure so much?" It ex-plains that indestructible as are the forces of nature and matter, so likewise is the said innermost being of man. Death is no annihilation, but only the passing over from one feeble form into another; whosoever Medicinal Value and Some of the n rob him of them, but he must abide by Chemically the apple is composed of the consequences.

FOUR CARDINAL TRUTHS. Man's real fate depends solely on his in ward being, on his own will, and he has the prospect of countless rebirths, in which he will earn the fruits of both his good and his evil deeds. But to him who is and release, is opened a way of redemp-tion. The cause of suffering, death and rebirth is the will to live, which fills us all; the desire of individual existence in
