A SUGGESTION TO TEACHERS.

If teachers mean by examination
To show the scholars' information,
Why do they carefully seek out
Such difficult things to ask about?

These are the questions, as a rule,
The teachers ask us in our school:
"What's the time in the Congo state
When Persian clocks are striking eight?"
"Halve the square of seventy-three,
And what will a tenth of sixteen be?"
"What was the reason Charlemagne
Sent his great grandaunt to Spain?"
"Explain what came of the Gothic war,
And what the Turks were fighting for
When Venice conquered Charles Martel,
And ancient Constantinople fell."
"Name the products of Peru,
And all the rulers of Timbuctoo."
"Point out the errors in the words,
'Green cheeses ain't not made of curds;'
'Him was not the friend of he;'
'He had'nt ought to written me.'"

Now, for instance, we'll suppose;
They wish to show what a fellow knows.
Then they'll be glad of a few suggestions
As to a set of useful questions,
"What did one Columbus do
In October, 1422?"
"Will some bright scholar kindly say
Which is 'Independence Day?'"
"What little girl will be so candid
As to tell us when the pilgrims landed?"
"The war of 1812, my dear,
Was fought in what particular year?"
"Kindly tell us, if you will,
What nations fought at Bunker Hill?"
"Who cut down a cherry tree
And helped to make a nation free?"
"Name a certain English queen
Who still upon her throne is seen."

If teachers only had the tact
To hit upon the proper fact,
Recitations then would be
More creditable to them and me.
—T. J. in St. Nicholas.

JUDGE BOISE is fitting up an office in Salem and will go into the practice of law.

THE Oregonian seems to think that about the next thing those Salem people will ask for will be a state house for the dome.

IN this state there is one prisoner in the penitentiary for every thousand population, and one insane person for every four hundred and thirty population.

Now that appropriations are in order, we would suggest that greater things have been undertaken than the making of a twenty-five foot channel along Morrison street, Portland.

A GENTLEMAN named Russell has purchased a half interest in the Harrisburg Courier. For the good of the long suffering people of Harrisburg it is to be hoped that he is a Russell-er.

IF there was any logic in the Iron Worker man's argument last week, how can he account for the steady increase of drunkenness during the past twenty years, or long before a Keeley Institute was known?

MR. TRAINOR, Portland's waggish bible distributor, might practice on our new anti-Sunday legislature to better advantage than attended his efforts to introduce literature so foreign to Astoria saloon keepers.

WHEN it comes to practical joking, a Portland man named Trainor takes the cake. He enclosed several plain copies of the new testament in neat packages and sent them C. O. D. to a number of Astoria saloon keepers, a number of whom paid the $2 25 charges without question, and are now after Mr. Trainor with blood in their optics.

A NEW office, that of "game warden," is to be asked for by Portland sporting men. We suppose the arduous duties of this gentleman would consist in facilitating the protection and support of game birds by the farmers of Oregon, in order that Portland dry goods clerks and saloon keepers might have a good time when the birds get ripe. For his trouble, if the bill should pass, this individual will receive $1,500 a year and $500 for traveling expenses.

WE TRUST that the useless expenditure of publishing the weather bureau reports three months after date will be discontinued by the action of this legislature. It is doubtless a nice thing for state printer Baker, but no one else derives any benefit from it.

IT IS a real pity that every pugilist in America is not in the same condition as Charley Mitchell, who is in Pentonville, England, in jail, and who twice a day is compelled to work on the treadmill. If a man is determined to be a brute, a treadmill is the proper place for him.

THE least controversy indulged in as to which administration has given the most to the navy, the better. In the opinion of a great many the $47,000,000 thus spent in the past eight years would have brought many times greater returns if it had been expended in some much needed internal improvements.

PROF. BARZEE, of Sodaville, will go to Salem to "assist" the legislature to pass an appropriation to fix up the springs at that point. In order to keep in touch with the public (treasury) we suggest that Newberg sends a man to Salem to assist the legislature in making an appropriation to improve Chehalem "river."

GOV. PENNOYER makes many good recommendations in his message, but when he suggests that the State Board of Horticultural be abolished, he becomes in the eyes of fruit raisers a mossback of the first water. Where would the fruit interests of California be today without proper officers, backed by the law, to enforce the extermination of pests?

C. W. FULTON of Astoria, was elected president of the senate, and W. P. Keady of Portland, speaker of the house. Fulton will certainly make an excellent presiding officer, but unless Keady has made a very radical change in the past eight years, the house will have plenty of cause for regrets over their choice for speaker before the close of the session.

IF THERE is one thing needed more than another at Newberg just now it is telephonic connection with Portland and neighboring towns. The advantages to be derived from such connection will not be questioned, and the necessary cost would be comparatively small. At present we enjoy the distinction of being the largest town and in fact the only town of any size on the west side, having no connection with other towns by telephone. Let's have a telephone.

GOV. PENNOYER'S very sensible views regarding the useless waste of money in keeping up the exorbitant expenses of the Oregon national guard, will meet the approval of a majority of the taxpayers of Oregon, if we are not mistaken. $30,000 worse than thrown away would accomplish a great deal of good put into right channels year after year. Oregon has no earthly use for such an institution as a national guard, and the taxpayers of the state should kick hard against helping to maintain it.

WHILE the present legislature is at work, its members should be encouraged to so amend the laws relative to assessment and taxation as to render them less complex and expensive. Every taxpayer should be assessed the actual amount of property he had at a given date. From this assessment should be levied and collected by county officials taxes for county, state, school and general municipal purposes. This would save to the taxpayers of the state a great deal of money now needlessly paid out for special assessments and collection of taxes.

THERE are a great many snide advertisers in this country, many of which, under high sounding names have swindled unsuspecting printers out of a whole lot of good advertising space. One such, if we are not mistaken, is a Toronto firm that furnishes a prize picture puzzle. Another is a San Francisco concern, fathered by a prominent paper of that city, that offers stock in a vague and visionary scheme that promises a big dividend. The shrewdest are liable sometimes to be caught by the well prepared bait of these sharpers, but such schemes as those mentioned are very transparent, and it seems strange that so many take them up. We have always made it a practice to fire into the waste basket any advertising matter that promised something for nothing, on the ground that such a thing is unbusinesslike and consequently unsafe for both publisher and patron.

THE GRAPHIC has taken the liberty at different times to suggest to property owners the propriety of making a general clean up about their premises quite often. There is hardly anything that gives a town a more slovenly appearance than a few piles of old boards and other rubbish along the streets in front or at the sides of buildings. Newberg is a comparatively new town and with a little care it might be made quite attractive to strangers. As a person with clean face and hands looks brighter and feels better than with dirty face and hands, so a town that looks clean and fresh about the streets is more attractive to people who are looking for a location, than one with the opposite surroundings. Poke your neighbor in the ribs (after sweeping before your own door) and suggest to him that just a little effort along this line would add much to the attractiveness of Newberg.

W. S. LADD, the Portland banker is dead. He had not been well for some time, and died suddenly at his home at 9:30 a. m., last Friday. The deceased was born in Holland, Vermont, in 1851. His wealth is estimated at $10,000,000. The Chamber Commerce, of which Mr. Ladd was a member, in their tribute to his memory said:

He was one of the pioneers of Oregon and one of the founders and chief promoters of the growth and prosperity of this city. He was a public-spirited, broad-minded, large-hearted man. He was the active and efficient friend of progress and public improvements. Industry, energy and capacity for business were his conspicuous characteristics, and crowned his career with a collossal fortune. His money and his influence were alike arrayed against vice and immorality. He was the liberal benefactor of churches and charities. He made no offensive parade of his wealth, and was as gracious to the poor as to the rich. He was faithful to his friends and fearless of his enemies; simple in his habits, exemplary in his conduct, affable in manner and honest in his dealings; he possessed those qualities of heart and head which commanded the respect and confidence of his fellowmen. —Oregonian.

THERE is just one more chance for Oregon to be advertised at the world's fair, other than by her lack of enterprize in not making a state display. The question is, will the present legislature recognize the great advantage that would be derived by the whole state from such a display, or will the false economy and niggardly disposition of the last legislature find a counterpart in this? California, with its fruits, Washington, with its lumber interests, Idaho, Montana, Colorado and Wyoming with their mining interests and the great middle west, with its agricultural interests, will all be represented, and appeal, by means of their rich displays, far more forcibly than word or pen, for recognition of their great resources. Oregon, with her great and constantly growing fruit interests, with her billions upon billions of feet of commercial timber, with the most varied mineral resources of any state in the Union, and with agricultural lands unsurpassed in fertility, and with none of these brought near to perfection, stands in the path of her own progress, and virtually publishes to the world of capital, labor and enterprise, that no other need apply. We do not believe that this is the sentiment of a majority of the people, and trust that the new legislature will share our views on this point.

LETTER FROM E. ROBINSON.

RIVERSIDE, Cal., Dec. 31, 1892.

EDITORS GRAPHIC:—I send you a few lines thinking some of your readers might be interested in a few horticultural notes.

We reached San Jose on the 15th. It is a beautiful city with its prune and apricot orchards, its avenues of palms, pepper trees, eucalyptus, etc. I visited several orchards in the vicinity, many of them in very fine condition and some very poor. The older orchards are mostly planted 16½ to 18 feet apart, but the almost universal opinion and practice now is to plant all fruit trees not less than 22 feet apart each way—peaches, apricots and prunes. Walnut trees need about 40 feet. The idea that they need more room in California than in Oregon is erroneous. Low heading is practiced by all the best orchardists, not only to prevent sun scald but for convenience and because it is easier to cultivate close up to a low headed tree when properly trained. The two systems of pruning seemed to be equally practiced and the trees to make nearly as much growth as in Oregon. I saw young petite trees with a growth of 4½ to 5 feet. Probably their trees will do with less thinning out than ours.

I visited Los Gatos, 11 miles out on the foothills, in what they call the "warm belt" where frost is almost unknown. In this region are more grapes, a few oranges, a large olive orchard, etc. Some of the soil about Los Gatos appeared to be nearly all gravel, yet the trees looked well. This is partly because the gravel is sometimes in layers and the tree roots run down below it. The whole valley is very much "spotted" and it is necessary to be very careful in choosing a location. Bare land in the valley without trees on it is worth $150 per acre and up anywhere within 9 or 10 miles of San Jose. One gentleman told me he sold his petites for $1,200 off his 7-year-old 5 acre orchard, which I saw. He dried the fruit himself however. All drying is of course done on trays laid on the ground. Another man last year cleared $1500 off 10 acres after having everything done (cultivated, etc.), except hauling the dried fruit away. These are not exceptional cases, there are many better, but these are men whom I am acquainted with and know what they say is true. The general impression prevails that we can grow prunes in Oregon, only they lack sweetness, you can judge of this for yourselves.

The climate of the Santa Clara valley is much pleasanter than many of the large inland valleys. The latter do not get the advantage of the cool sea breezes. There are extensive fruit interests in the large San Joaquin valley, but the summers are insufferably hot. There are many advantages in this state, but it is a question if we don't have as many in Oregon to offset them. Yours Truly,

EDMUND ROBINSON.

PURITY OF THOUGHT.

In the mechanism of the human body an allwise God has placed two powers of motion, or muscular movement, the voluntary, which is under the control of our will and the involuntary which is controlled by the maker of the universe. Therefore, is always pure and right. It is the former of which we wish to speak.

Every voluntary motion is preceded by a thought, and if that thought be pure, the movement that is governed by that thought will be pure also, or in other words thought is the great fountain head, the engine that propels all our actions, and if the fountain be pure, all the streams proceeding from it will be of the same nature, and all that partake of it will be refreshed.

A kind providence has not left us without a guide but in his written word has given us rules whereby we may keep this fountain full and pure, that we may control this power of motion he has placed in our charge.

There are different ways of expressing thought. We may express them in actions, in the expression of the countenance and perhaps the best through the muscular movement of the tongue in articulation, "for out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." The apostle James in the third chapter of his epistle describes this interpreter of thought by saying: "Therewith bless we God, even the Father; and therewith curse we men, which are made after the similitude of God. Out of the same mouth proceedeth blessings and curs ings," etc., and in conclusion "This wisdom descendeth not from above but is earthly, sensual, devilish. But the wisdom that is from above is pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits without partiality, and without hypocrisy."

Thoughts not expressed in words, are called secret and may be considered the foundation of our character, and will eventually make themselves manifest in our lives. If these be pure, bright and cheerful, so will our lives be. But if on the other hand they be low, sensual and degrading, such as we would not like the world to know, if indulged in, they will soon be revealed in our actions, and the expression of the countenance. There is much that we could say about what thought put into effect has accomplished how it has ruled nations, conquered kingdoms, builded cities, etc. All our modern improvements which are of such vast importance to us in many ways. We owe to men of great minds who have spent their lives in deep earnest thought, the mother of invention. And the inspiration comes to us in the lines of the poet:

Lives of great men all remind us
We can make our lives sublime."

But my subject is purity of thought and when should we begin to teach the necessity of it to our children. We will say as has been said on other subjects, a hundred years before the child is born. We do believe if parents wish their children to be pure in this respect they must be pure also. Then train them from the cradle, have all their clothing made properly from babyhood until grown, give them plenty of playthings as soon as old enough to notice them, having different sets, that when they are tired of one they may have something new, give them plenty of exercise suitable to their sphere, and talk to them as babies like to be noticed. Keep their little minds active until they have come to the years of understanding, then store well their minds with useful knowledge. Let nothing pass our lips that we would be ashamed to have them repeat before the world. Some may say, I have not time for all of these things. We will say we consider the training of the mind of our children the most important part of the home work. And in conclusion may we, as parents, launch out from the shoals of impurity, on which so many have made shipwrecks and sink the bucket of thought into the fathomless depths of wisdom that comes from above, that we may be able to impart to our children that knowledge that will make them pure and noble men and women. And we can do this if in faith we adopt the prayer of the Psalmist David when he says "Let the words of my mouth and the meditation of my heart be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength, and my redeemer.

THE DICTIONARY HOLDER
Did you ever learn what fabulous results grew out of the manufacture by Mr. Noyes of an ornamental stand to hold the Dictionary? The story reads like a fable, but to tell it one must ask another question: Have you ever noticed the advertisement of the Aermotor Company, which starts out as follows;
45 sold in '88
2,288 sold in '89
6,268 sold in '90
20,049 sold in '91
60,000 will be sold in '92
A Steel Windmill and Steel Tower every minutes. These figures tell the story of the ever-growing, ever-going, everlasting Steel Aermotor. Where one goes others follow, and we say "Take the Country."

Well, that establishment belongs to La Verne W. Noyes, and the means with which it was built up until it is the third largest user of steel in the World, only exceeded by two of the great Harvester companies was wholly furnished by the Dictionary Holder business. This brings us back to the Holder, and suggests inquiry as to how it took and held and still holds the field, increasing rapidly from year to year.
The secret of that success is this: Mr. Noyes has made a most perfect, artistic and meritorious article, and has maintained a high standard of excellence and supplied the article at a low price. The words of these Dictionary Holders have been so great that they literally sold themselves, and in such great quantities that a small profit on each one has made the result above mentioned.
They have gone to almost every habitable portion of the globe, even to the remote lands of the ice, and are kept by all storekeepers.
