Royal Baking Powder

Strongest, Purest, Most Economical.

As to whether any of the baking powders are equal to the "Royal," the official tests clearly determine. When samples of various baking powders were purchased from the grocers, and analyzed by the United States Government Chemists and the Chemists of State and City Boards of Health, the reports revealed the fact that the "Royal" contained from 28 per cent. to 60 per cent. more leavening strength than the others, and also that it was more perfectly combined, absolutely pure, and altogether wholesome.

As most of these powders are sold to consumers at the same price as the "Royal," by the use of the Royal Baking Powder there is an average saving of over one third, besides the advantage of assured purity and wholesomeness of food, and of bread, biscuit and cake made perfectly light, sweet, and palatable.

The official reports also reveal the presence, in other powders, of alum, lime or sulphuric acid, by which their use is made a matter of grave danger to the consumer.

Whenever a baking powder is sold at a lower price than the "Royal," or with a gift, it is a certain indication that it is made from alum, and is to be avoided under all circumstances.

A Life Search.

Men in the ministry are brought into contact with all sorts of people. Their name is legion, and the subject of religion, which appeals strongly to the imagination and gives full scope to speculation, has a special fascination for them. If preachers would write out their experiences with this class of persons there would be no scarcity of spicy reading. It was a harmless kind of crank that Bishop Thomas Bowman, of this city, ran against one time at a camp meeting. On that occasion he preached from the following text: "As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the son of man be lifted up." The most attentive listener in the congregation was a tall, lank individual, with wild, deep-set eyes and long hair. At the conclusion of the sermon he made a bee line for the bishop, and the latter, divining the character of the man, tried to get away from him, but failed.

"Well, now, my brother," said the bishop, with just a little pique in his voice, for he was very tired and the weather was hot, "what is it you wish?" "Bishop," he replied, with intense earnestness, "I have been a student of the Bible all my life, and there is one question that has troubled me for a long time. Perhaps you can throw some light on it. It is this: What was the color of the snakes that were sent to afflict the children of Israel?"—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Farms for Epileptics.

Epilepsy is so large a cause of enforced idleness among the working people in England that a colony has been established in a country place within an hour's ride of London, where they can perform lucrative labor suited to their condition. The plan is initiated from one successfully carried out in Westphalia, Germany. On a piece of land of some hundred acres there will be built cottages to hold from ten to twenty inmates. The sexes will be separated, and also the children from the adults.

Market gardening, spade and barrow labor, cow keeping, dairy work and poultry farming will be the first industries; then gardening and fruit culture, and later on will follow bookbinding, carpentering, bookbinding, printing and other industries; and for the women laundry work, sewing, cooking and various domestic services.—Boston Transcript.

TALKS WITH A BRUSH

AN ECCENTRIC OLD EVANGELIST OF WESTCHESTER, N. Y.

Winter and Summer He Wanders Along the Roads Painting Scripture Texts on Boulders—Nothing Deters Him—Passive When Violence Is Used.

Who is the mysterious paint brush evangelist of Westchester county? Up and down the beautiful hills and along the rugged, rocky roads of Westchester for miles after miles his work can be seen. The wayfarer cannot escape it. At every fresh turn in the road the painted words of warning confront him. Even the most ungodly sinner in all New York, after walking a mile from the little village of White Plains, would think he was surely on the rocky road to the New Jerusalem.

Up in Westchester they call the mysterious evangelist the "Scripture Slagger," and they say "he slings his powerful black." So he does, and with discretion, in paint of the hue of heaven's own blue, mixed in oil.

All along those rocky roads the fences are made of huge boulders, out of which rough walls are made, separating the pastures and bounding the roadsides. Besides there are still other boulders jutting out of the soil along the roadway. On these, and on the stone fences, the mysterious evangelist unfolds his warnings. He is a little man, but energetic. He is a silent man, except with his brush, made out of hairs plucked from the necks of oxen.

With it he speaks. His only name is "George." He marches, a Salvation Army of one man, carrying a bugle to announce his coming. His sandy mustache bristles, and the lines of his face show five decades. There hangs upon his head an old straw hat, summer and winter, and on the hat is a broad ribbon, bearing the legend, "Jesus is mighty to save." A cane, curved with innumerable inscriptions, helps him over the hills as he marches on, carrying the battered bugle bag in which repose his restless brush, his pot of paint, his Bible and other little things, such as a comb and cake of soap, through the use of which he keeps himself only a seminomadic. They say there is no vanity in him, nor any glass with a quicksilver back in that battered bag. As he marches he spies a rock, big and brown, half hidden behind a clump of weeds, and on which he left no message when last along that way. In a moment the weeds are uprooted, and kneeling by the rock he paints, letter by letter, "O-b-e-y-t-h-e-L-o-r-d." Then he marches on reading the Bible. On a smooth worn boulder in the stone fence, he prints, "Repent! Believe! And sin no more." Across the road he leaves the warning, "You must repent or go to hell." A little farther on he kneels again, and under his brush grow the words, "The wages for sinners is hellfire."

There are painted words, though, along the roads more worldly than the ones he leaves there. One of them says, "Spend your Sundays at Manhattan beach." On finding this it is said he bowed his head a moment. Then in a deeper shade of blue than usual, mixed on the spot, he painted right alongside the words, "Where will you spend eternity?"

Many of the farmers up in Westchester take summer boarders, and on a big tree in the front yard each of them mails a sign which reads: "Pleasant summer home. Board by the day or week." Across the road from such as these the paint brush says, "Think of that beautiful home above."

So the strange evangelist goes on, fighting the world with blue paint, measure for measure, and covering the surplus space with admonition, exhortation and advice.

To him all things are of the world, worldly and therefore he knows naught of politics.

This strange man sleeps by the roadside, in a stable or where he may, and for months eats only what is given him. Money is nothing to him. For a little while each year he works on the Sound View stock farm, owned by William A. Sumner, and it is then he pulls the hair from the necks of oxen and makes his stock of brushes. His point is given him and he mixes it himself.

He has been told to stop the task of covering the rocks of Westchester with blue paint, but he keeps on. By his action he says, "Shall a man not make his fellow man reflect?"

Township trustees threaten and resolve in vain. The notices multiply. Assaults do not terrify him. Once he was met by two men near the Westchester fair grounds and commanded to stop painting a sentence he had begun. He turned his back to them and kept on without reply. When he had finished he began a new sentence. Then the men rushed at him and struck him down senseless with clubs. The unfinished sentence read: "Forgive them!"

What a Widow Is. A clerk in one of the New York dry goods stores says that the demand for rich curtains for windows has fallen off lately because so many wealthy families have gone in for the craze of having coats-of-arms and other heraldic devices worked in on the hangings of their windows. Some two or three small shops on Fifth avenue introduced the hobby, and have done a fairly large business. These particular firms supply draperies different from those in stock in most of the dry goods and upholsterers' places. The decrease in sales in the latter stores is noticeable.—San Francisco Argonaut.

Queen Victoria has declared her intention of devoting the entire women's jubilee offering to the English Association of Trained Nurses, the chief object of which is the improvement of the nursing of the sick poor.

Death has recently separated a couple at Moore, Cheshire, who have been married for sixty-three years. They were Mr. and Mrs. Banner, the husband being 91 years of age and his wife, who has just died, 88. They had lived at Moore all their lives, and in one house for more than half a century.

A self-acting electrical balance has recently been invented. The object to be weighed is placed in the pan, which closes the circuit, starts a motor, and moves the weight on to the beam of the balance. When the equilibrium is established the current is broken.

DAUGHTERS OF THE KING.

Practical Work That the Order Is Doing in the Poor Districts of New York. The gracious service of the great Order of King's Daughters has become so important in interest and diversified in interest that it has of necessity been organized, systematized and classified under various committees, each devoted to the alleviation of some particular form of distress. No branch of its beneficence is more practical in aim and devoted in ministrations than that which has its headquarters in the Mariners' temple, at No. 1 Henry street, and is bending its energies to the relief of all forms of suffering in tenement houses.

The tenement house committee was organized last spring with Mrs. James F. Ruggles as its president, and the little band of women wearing the silver cross and purple ribbon went about among the poor of the Fourth ward alleys and east side tenements simply distributing flowers where flowers were rarely seen, and thus gaining admittance to the homes of the poor. When the hot days of July came the King's Daughters had become friends of the families, and found more important work to do than the scattering of blossoms and kind words among them. Sickness, hunger and death, with all their attending distresses, were among the people, and the committee hastily surveyed the field and evolved their system of relief, working always in co-operation with the charity organization to avoid imposters.

Every summer the board of health sends into the tenement district a corps of fifty doctors to attend the sick poor gratuitously during the months of July and August. In previous years the doctors have found their work almost useless, owing to the lack of proper food, proper nursing and comfortable surroundings on the part of patients. Last year each physician carried with him a bundle of postal cards stamped with a purple cross and addressed to the headquarters of the King's Daughters.

Each case was treated, with its peculiar needs, was described upon a card, and at the close of the day's work was forwarded to the address given. The doctor also left written directions at the house of each patient as to the treatment and diet, directions which only a trained nurse could comprehend and carry out.

But there was one thing that came first, and afterward there were two who followed after the doctor to care for the sick and save the dying. The nurses were King's Daughters, too, and because of the silver cross they wore gave their services to the society for the small amount which it actually cost them for board all through the summer, when they might have been earning $30 or $35 a week at much easier work. They made from sixty to seventy visits a week from house to house. If they found a patient destitute, as they frequently did, without even sheets upon the bed, they hurried back to the mission and procured the necessities of life. If the King's Daughters had prepared them. If they needed the nourishing food required by the sick, that, too, was found at the mission provided by the diet kitchens and the King's Daughters.

Medicine or necessities of immediate need they were authorized to procure at the nearest drug store, or, in the case of the King's Daughters, the dispensary, that confronted the committee was the first heartrending, the perplexities overwhelming. The order to the nurses was always to supply immediate need; later the case was investigated, and if deserving the kindly help was extended until it was no longer needed.

Like many great projects, this has but a small beginning. Three women at first, afterward seven, united in a circle of King's Daughters, with this purpose in view. The circle has increased to seventy members, with Mrs. E. T. Gillespie as president. The first $1,000 toward the building of the home has been secured, and work is constantly going on toward raising the desired amount.

A coal club has been established by one of the members, who buys coal in quantities and gives the people orders by which small amounts may be delivered at the same price. Two of the members have been given packages, and kindly spend the time to weigh it out themselves to sell in small amounts. Rooms have been rented also and sublet to needy and deserving people, and kindly help is given wherever it is possible, both in the line of personal ministrations and practical charity.—New York Sun.

An Entertaining Widow. "I have," says a Maine pension agent, "what I consider a funny pension case on hand. Several years ago I secured a pension for a soldier of a certain regiment and company, and then, after his death, I secured a pension for his widow. Now she comes to me to help her secure another pension as the widow of another member of the same regiment. You see that since I secured her first widow's pension she had married a comrade in arms of her first husband, and now that he, too, is dead, with a frugality and economy that are commendable and according to Scripture, she is applying for the second pension. I have never known exactly a similar case."—Lewiston Journal.

Window Curtain Sales Decreasing. IF I WERE FAIR.

If I were fair, I had thin lips and slender feet. If to my cheeks the color red and sweet came at a word and faded at a frown. If I had clinging curls of lustrous brown. If I had dreamy eyes aglow with smiles. And graceful limbs, and pretty girlish wiles. If I were fair, Love would not turn aside. Life's path, so narrow, would be broad and wide.

If I were fair! Perhaps like other maidens I might hold. A true heart's store of tried and tested gold. Love waits on Beauty, though sweet Love alone.

It seems to me, for naught might well atone. But Beauty's charm is strong, and Love obeys. The mystic witchery of her any ways. If I were fair my young would seem so few. Life would unfold sweet pictures to my view. If I were fair!

If I were fair! Perhaps the baby, with a scream of joy. To clasp my neck would throw away its toy. And hide its dimples in my shining hair. Bewildered by the magic of glory there! But now—Oh, shadow of a young girl's face! Uncolored lips that pale and cold finger trace. You will not blame the child whose weeps hands alone.

Not on the blighted bud, but on the rose so rich and fair. If I were fair! Oh, just a little fair, a rosy soft touch About my face to glory it might! If no shroud of my presence or my kiss, My heart would almost break beneath its bliss.

"I said each pilgrim shall attain his goal. And perfect light shall cloud his blinded soul. When dawn dawns, and the sun's rays are seen. And night is here. And then beyond the stars I shall be fair!"

—Edith Batters in London Spectator.

Pure Food in Congress. The act of Congress authorizing the examination of the baking powders has resulted in a most unprecedented compliment to the Royal Baking Powder. The test was made in the government laboratory at Washington, and the official report shows that the Royal is superior to all others in leavening strength—being over 30 per cent. above the average. The report also shows the purity of the Royal Powder and the wholesomeness of its ingredients.

This is probably the highest compliment of an official character ever paid to a proprietary article, though no more than the great army of baking powder consumers would expect in behalf of their old friend and favorite.

The result of the official examination, as thus determined, will, of course, make the "Royal" the standard for government purchases.

IMITATORS AND IMPOSTORS. The unequal success of ALCOCK'S POND'S PLASTER as an external remedy has induced unscrupulous parties to sell on the reputation of ALCOCK'S. It is an absurdity to speak of them in the same category as the genuine Pond's Plaster. Their pretensions are unfounded, their vaunted superiority to equality with ALCOCK'S a false pretense.

The ablest medical practitioners and chemists of thousands of grateful patients unite in declaring ALCOCK'S POND'S PLASTER the best external remedy ever produced.

Beware of imitations, and do not be deceived by misrepresentation. Ask for ALCOCK'S, and let no solicitation or explanation induce you to accept a substitute.

$100 REWARD $100. The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is a perfect specific, and cures all cases of Catarrh, whether of the bladder, prostate or bowels, whether the disease is new or old, whether it is attended with pain or not. The cure is simple, and the medicine is sold in all drug stores.

Now is the time to treat Catarrh of long standing. Ely's Cream Balm reaches old and obstinate cases, where all other remedies fail. Do not neglect procuring a bottle of it. It is the relief you seek.

Rev. H. H. Fairall, D. D., editor of the Iowa Methodist, says editorially: "We have tested the merits of Ely's Cream Balm, and believe that by a thorough course of treatment it will cure almost every case of Catarrh. Ministers as a class are afflicted with head and throat troubles, and Catarrh seems more prevalent than ever. We cannot recommend Ely's Cream Balm too highly."

Apply Balm into each nostril. It is quickly absorbed. Gives relief at once. Price, 30 cents at druggists or by mail. Ely Brothers, 239 Warren Street, New York.

Use Enameled Store Polish: no dust, no smell.

THE FIRST LAW OF NATURE.

This self-preservation is acknowledged to be, and people who adopt against the encroachments of disease a genuine medicinal safeguard, accredited by experience and the sanction of physicians, afford a happy illustration of the wisdom of the saying, in the health they restore and continue to enjoy. Among the many remedies against the growth of which Hostetter's Stomach Bitters affords efficient protection, diseases of the kidneys and bladder are fraught with the utmost peril and exhibit great obstinacy when opposed by ordinary means. The Bitters can and will subdue them. No testimony is stronger than this. Used at the outset and persistently, the best results may be expected. This medicine also eradicates liver complaint, constipation, dyspepsia, malaria, rheumatism and nervousness.
