NEWBERG GRAPHIC.

ISSUED EVERY FRIDAY MORNING.

EDITORS AND PUBLISHERS:

E. H. WOODWARD AND O. C. EMERY.

FRIDAY, MARCH 24, 1893.

Entered as second class matter at the post office at Newberg, Oregon.

Circuit court convenes at McMinnville on next Monday. There are nearly 80 cases on the docket, about the usual number of which are divorce cases. The minister gets a fee for tying the knot, and the attorney a larger one for helping to untie it.

A new vessel of the whaleback order, but an improvement over the Wetmore, is soon to be launched from the yards of the Pacific Steel Barge Co., at Everett, Wash. This company feels confident that it will be able to build a vessel having all the advantages ever claimed for the Wetmore, but with none of its defects.

The dangerous character of the class of men who usually receive territorial appointments, especially in Alaska, was again demonstrated a few days ago when a Deputy U. S. Marshal shot and killed a store keeper out of pure personal spite. That the murderer is in jail does not count for much, as his official associates are generally of such a character that by some hook or crook they will succeed in securing his release.

Now that Oregon has a game warden whose business it is to keep fish dealers from selling salmon in March and prevent country people from killing grouse and pheasants of their own raising, the "sportsmen" of the state have effected an organization and arranged for a big tournament some time during the early summer, offering $3,500 in prizes. Meanwhile the orchards of the state are unprotected and the scale and codlin moth hold undisputed sway, while the state board of horticulture exists only in name, without sufficient means to pay necessary postage and traveling expenses. Great is the wisdom of some legislators.

E. W. DIXON, of Forest Grove, has invented and constructed a model of an air ship which he thinks will solve the great question of aerial navigation. The Times gives the following description of the ship:

The "ship" is composed of two parts, the balloon and hull. The balloon which is pointed in front to offer as small resistance as possible, is made in two compartments and will be filled with hydrogen gas. The hull, suspended by it has cost Mr. Dixon years of study. The hull is similar in shape to a water craft, excepting the bow, which is more nearly round. Unlike all other air ships the rudder is in front. The propelling power will be electric motor. The wheels are so constructed as to pull hard upon the air and run at a high rate of speed. All the machinery is adjustable, in fact, is a combination of adjustments which are believed by the inventor to be the solution of the problem of aerial navigation. The pilot will have all the machinery under his control, and both wheels can be adjusted at the same time or separately so as to make the ship go on a circle, or go higher, or lower, as desired, and any or all of the adjustments can be made while the wheels are going at full speed. Mr. Dixon provides protection in case of accident to the balloon in five different ways: by making more gas, throwing overboard sand bags, providing the balloon with a parachute, adjusting the propellers so as to sustain the ship and having individual parachutes at hand. Mr. Dixon says he is in hopes of organizing a company and building a ship to go to Chicago in July, and thinks he can go from Portland to Chicago in thirty hours.

THE "INVASION-OF-PRIVATE-RIGHTS" EXCUSE.

The great bugaboo with which the bills proposed by the State Board of Horticulture, and endorsed by the State Horticultural Society, had to contend before the legislature, recently in session, was the allegation that they authorized an unwarranted invasion of private rights.

It seems to be very easy to befog the vision of the public generally and of the legislature in particular upon this matter of private rights. The fruit growers of Oregon were represented to be a rapacious class, ready and anxious to put into operation a system of laws of a tyrannical and inquisitorial character. They were said to be asking for a class of legislation unknown to any other of the states of our Union, except California, and, of course, everybody knows how disastrous has been the result of protecting by law the fruit industry of that state. Strange as it may appear to the members of the legislature who were influenced by the class of arguments which led to the defeat of the proposed laws, above referred to, the provisions of those proposed laws would not have been any more arbitrary, any more inquisitorial, would not have placed any more judicial power in the hands of individuals than a number of very necessary and useful laws now upon the statute books of Oregon, particularly those relating to contagious diseases among domestic animals and to noxious weeds.

The proposed act to stop the importation of trees of the peach kind from districts infected with the Peach Yellow is said to have been defeated because it was distasteful to the railway companies who feared that it might involve them in damage suits. It certainly could not have operated injuriously to any other interest in Oregon. As has been said before, this disease is to the peach tree what the pleuro-pneumonia is to cattle, if not even more fatal. Absolutely no remedy is known for it. If it once establishes itself in Oregon the peach growing industry, which is making rapid headway in some parts of the state, will be doomed. More than that, the very failure of the legislature to pass this law is likely to practically cut off the fast growing business of Oregon nurserymen in supplying California with trees. The immediate loss of thousands of dollars annually and the prospective loss of millions was not sufficient to weigh in the scale against the annoyance which railway companies would suffer if they were prohibited from importing peach trees from districts infected with this dread disease.

The special cases of invasion of private rights which were objected to in the proposed bills were those which authorize the commissioners or inspectors of the State Board of Horticulture to pass upon the question as to whether trees, fruits, etc., are infected with pests, or not, and giving such commissioners the power to see to it that such pests are eradicated. Now the acts authorized by these provisions are almost identical in character with those conferred upon the state veterinarian in case of infected live stock and upon county supervisors in the case of noxious weeds. It is necessary that these officers should have such powers in order to deal effectively with the evils which it is their duty to contend with.

It is a very old principle of law that no man may maintain anything which is a menace to the life, health or property of his neighbors. Anything which does this is a nuisance and it affects the public at large it becomes a public nuisance which it is not merely the right but even the duty of the state to abate.

There can be no question about the fact that every neglected, infested orchard is a public nuisance, and it is useless to talk of building up a great fruit growing industry in Oregon unless these nuisances are abated. The fruit growers have asked for no greater protection than has been freely accorded to cattle and sheep raisers.

The sentiment of the state needs enlightenment on this matter before another legislature is elected. We believe that Mr. S. A. Clarke claims that it is the State Board of Horticulture which is objectionable. If this be true nothing was gained by defeating the proposed laws, for the State Board of Horticulture remains in existence. If, however, a better method of protecting the fruit interests of the state can be devised than the Board method it ought to be brought to light as soon as possible, in order to give time for a thorough consideration of its merits before it is submitted to the legislature.

Every fruit grower in the state is, or ought to be, interested in this subject.—Rural Northwest.

OREGON WORLD'S FAIR COMMISSION.

SALEM, OR., March 10, 1893.

TO THE CITIZENS OF OREGON:—The Oregon World's Fair Commission has been legally organized. Its officers, superintendents, assistants, and agents have been chosen, and they are now actively engaged in the preparation of an exhibit of the rich and varied resources of Oregon, to be placed before the eyes of the world in the several department buildings of the Columbian Exposition at Chicago. As this World's Exposition opens shortly, no time should be lost if we would be properly represented. Our state has been allotted ample spaces in the different department buildings, which this Commission has promised to fill, and which it hopes to occupy with honor to the state. And to make the labors of this commission the more successful, which will add not only to the credit of the state, but to her every citizen, the free co-operation of her each and every resident is earnestly solicited.

To this end, therefore, all persons who have prepared individual exhibits, all societies, organizations, or associations of any kind whatever that have prepared exhibits of any kind for the coming Exposition, are urged to at once place themselves in communication with the heads of the several departments, as organized by this Commission. You may be able to judge to which department your exhibit belongs by reading what follows: This Commission desires to send to Chicago those things which will in any manner give a true representation of any of Oregon's resources, or add in any way to the attractiveness of the spaces allotted to Oregon in any of the exposition buildings.

The Oregon exhibit will be collected and displayed under the following headings:

The Department of Agriculture, Forestry and Forest Products, and Live Stock, W. F. Matlock, Superintendent. The Department of Horticulture, including Floriculture and Viticulture, Dr. J. R. Cardwell, Superintendent. The Department of Mines, Mining, and Metallurgy, C. W. Ayers, Superintendent. The Department of Fishing and Fishing Apparatus, Manufacturers, Electrical and Mechanical Inventions, Geo. T. Myers, Superintendent. The Department of Women's Work, comprising the Fine Arts, Household Economy, and products thereof, Mrs. M. Payton, Superintendent until July 1, 1893, and Mrs. E. W. Allen, Superintendent from July 1, 1893. The Department of Education, including Educational Exhibits, Literary, Special, General, Music, etc., E. B. McElroy, Superintendent. The Department of Civil Government, including State and County, Geo. W. McBride, Superintendent.

Persons wishing to make exhibits in any of the departments enumerated, will please communicate with the superintendents of the departments in which they wish to make entries.

Yours Truly,
C. B. IRVINE, Sec'y.

FLORAL DEPARTMENT OF THE OREGON STATE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY. THE JUNE EXHIBIT.

One of the most important features of the work done by the Oregon State Horticultural Society at its annual meeting held in this city last January was the forming of a floral adjunct.

This part of their work is quite as essential as any other branch, and while polymology, etc., are practically indispensable, yet this society could do no more laudable work than that of promoting floriculture. True, we must rely upon the farmer to supply our temporal wants, yet there are elements in our nature that may be nourished by feasting our eyes on things of beauty, such as appeal to our better feelings, serving to elevate our lives to a higher moral standard. These beautiful gifts of nature come to us as messengers of love, peace and purity and rest.

Their commercial value also is of no small consideration. Neither should we lose sight of the fact that they would become one of the leading factors in promoting the growth and prosperity of our country as has been the case in California by furnishing an incentive to immigration. So that any way we may view this subject it proves itself well worthy the prominence the horticultural society is giving it.

AN EXHIBIT IN JUNE.

The executive committee appointed by Pres. J. R. Cardwell to manage the affairs of the department set vigorously to work to put into execution plans for a floral exhibit to be given in this city the present season. In consideration of the fact that the Oregon Pioneers hold their reunion on the 15th of June, it has been arranged to make the time of this exhibit correspond with their dates, continuing three days, from the 14th to the 16th inclusive. They have prepared a very liberal list of premiums which is as follows:

The county making the best display of cultivated flowers (Multnomah excepted)—1st premium, $50; 2nd $25.

Professional florist making best general display—1st, $25; 2nd $15.

Choicest collection of roses by amateurs—1st, $10; 2nd, $5.

Largest and finest assortment pansies by amateurs—1st, $10; 2nd, $5.

For the largest pansy—1st, $5.

Choicest sweet peas (variety a consideration)—1st, $10; 2nd, $5.

Finest display of potted plants—1st, $10; 2nd, $5.

Largest and handsomest Rex Begonia, $5.

Native flora pressed—1st, $15; 2nd, $10.

Native flora fresh—1st, $15; 2nd, $10.

Orchids—1st, $10; 2nd, $5.

The only consideration for entering an exhibit is an annual membership, requiring a fee of fifty cents for ladies and one dollar for gentlemen. The holder is entitled to the privileges of any exhibit in any part of the state during the year. This exhibition is given in the interest of every city, town and village in the state. The purpose is to reach all who love flowers. The state is large, and its flora combines the wealth of the valleys and prairies, the hills and mountains, of all their nooks and intervals and as well the bloom found upon our so-called deserts and wastes. There are few wastes in Oregon, none where flowers cannot bloom. Therefore we appeal to the women of Oregon, and men too, wherever and whenever they may be, whether on the beautiful prairies, the more beautiful hills or the slightly mountain sides, to help us in our endeavor to bring more beauty, fragrance and moral trust and pure life into our homes by introducing every where the culture of flowers.

CORRESPONDENCE DESIRED.

The ladies of the committee earnestly request all who are interested to accept this as a personal invitation to open a correspondence with them. Any information desired may be had by calling on or addressing the secretary, Mrs. M. E. Shafford, 240 Morrison Street, Corner 7th, Portland, Oregon.

FROM OUR EXCHANGES.

R. B. Hibbs shipped 62 China pheasants to parties in Colorado and Illinois one day last week. The birds will be turned loose in those states as an experiment. It is rather doubtful if they will stand the hard winters of the eastern country.—Reporter.

There is need of a spelling reform in McMinnville. The pupils of the city schools and of the college are notably deficient in this branch of education. The teachers themselves will admit this fact. A committee recently called upon to pass judgment upon some school essays found such simple words as "very," "until," "arc," etc., misspelled. One essay contained eighteen misspelled words, another, twelve. No other branch of education will show neglect and defects more glaringly than that of spelling and the use of language, and students and teachers will do well to remember that a good use of English in speaking and writing will aid its possessor vastly more in getting on in the world than a masterly knowledge of the circulation of the blood or the conjugations of Greek and Latin.—Reporter.

Contact with refined society in all parts of the globe, the grace of God and an idiomatically well have operated to transform Ben Hogen from an ignorant German-French pugilist and dive keeper into a man of tolerable decency and intelligence, for which Ben deserves credit and admiration. He said a good many good things in his lectures here, and his stereopticon exhibits were quite pleasing to the large audience that assembled. The most ardent admirers of his lectures were of the class who rarely go to church, and they thought Ben struck awfully straight from the shoulder. So do the home preachers, but they don't go to hear them. Itinerant lecturers like Hogen get a great deal of glory for many expressions of gospel truth that may be heard at home any Lord's day.—Reporter.

Rev. Wiley Knowles writes from his home in California to R. Nelson that he has just passed through the severest sickness he has experienced for years. He is living three miles in the country, and says he doesn't believe he can ever get used to it. Everything is dull and stupid, with no sound during the long hours of the night to break the dull monotony but the dismal screech of the insignificant ground owl. He says that last Sunday about a mile from him occurred one of the famous California rabbit drives, and all the forenoon all kinds of rigs passed his place filled with men, women and children, church members and non-church members, all anxious to be "the killing." You can, if you choose, do almost any kind of business there on Sunday, but on a legal holiday you can scarcely do any business at all. Mr. Knowles should return to Oregon, where we have a better state of morals.—Reporter.

LAFAYETTE ITEMS.

Rev. Gwyn has just closed a series of meetings in the Presbyterian church. He is a very eloquent and impressive speaker and there has been a number added to the church as a result of his labors.

The Evangelicals have also held one of the most successful revivals ever held in Lafayette, there being about seventy-five conversions.

The Evangelicals have the lumber on the ground and the foundation laid for their new church building which is located on the block north of the seminary building and will be 35x60 feet with 18 foot walls.

The seminary is getting along nicely under the management of Professors Bowman and Washburn.

The sheriff closed up our saloon on last Friday morning and it is still closed. The saloon keeper says the preachers and temperance lecturers have ruined his business, we say let it stay ruined.

Mr. Daniel and Mr. Edmonson have both sold out of the flouring mills and Mr. P. A. Bates is sole owner of the mill. John Dunn has sold his blacksmith business to Mr. Johnson. Mr. Dunn expects to move to his place on Chehallem mountain.

Mr. E. R. Poppleton has sold all his land where the nursery used to be, to the Evangelical society. They expect to build a new school building there, as the seminary building they now occupy is too small.

Mr. Walling, of Portland, assisted by about fifty of the officers and members of Friendship Rebekah Lodge of McMinnville, organized a Rebekah Lodge at this place on the night of 8th inst. There were 35 members initiated on that evening. The ladies had prepared a nice supper which all enjoyed at 12 o'clock. The officers for the first term are as follows: Mrs. Ella Gates, N. G.; Mrs. Jessie Johnson, V. G.; Mrs. Florence Olds, Recording Secretary; Mrs. Lou Vickie, Financial Secretary; Mrs. Anna Hembre, treasurer; Mrs. Littlefield, Conductor; Mrs. Michaux, Warden; Mrs. Alice Martin, I. G.; J. W. Martin, O. G. The lodge meets every Wednesday night in I. O. O. F. hall.

Mr. James our genial operator, has bought the Jolly property near the depot and will soon move his family there and raise chickens as well as sling lightning. Mr. Kelly has traded his residence property to Mr. Williamson for residence property near the flouring mill.

We are reliably informed that the visit of our jovial editor to Newberg will soon cease. Success to you Bro. Carpenter. POSEY.
