Entered as second class matter at the post office at Newberg, Oregon.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND pressed the button last Monday, and will now probably get a little rest.

THOSE very previous people who desired to be "in it" at the opening of the great Columbian exposition found that while the buildings were ready last Monday the exhibits were as yet incomplete. It will take another month to get everything in shape.

THE Union Pacific company has contracted for 2,500,000 ties to be used in construction of new branches during the coming year. If the reports we hear are true, some of these ties could be used to good advantage in replacing rotten ones along the main line.

THE Beaverton Chronicle, only a few weeks old, has changed editors. It seems that one of those dissolute irresponsible characters like one man West who edited (?) a paper in this town once, got the proprietors of the Chronicle into trouble and had to be bounced. Not every rascal is a good editor.

A SALEM schoolboy has been suspended from school for robbing a China pheasant's nest. Of course this action of the boy wasn't right, but it seems to us that school is just the place to teach boys that such things are wrong, while the course adopted turns him loose to commit other depredations without restraint or counsel to do better.

A HAPPY Iowa couple named their new baby "Ruth Cleveland," and upon notifying the president of the fact received a check for $50. Chairman Dan Murphy, of Oregon, has gone them one better, having named his boy and girl twin babies Grover C. and Francis C. respectively, thus bidding for a cool hundred at least. This is Oregon enterprise.

THERE are some mighty mean people in Iowa, to judge by the story told by an exchange. The body of an unknown man was found in the outskirts of a town, on which was found a revolver and $100. The authorities appropriated $75 for burial expenses and the police judge fined the body $25 for carrying a concealed weapon, and confiscated the revolver.

THE illustrations in Tuesday's Oregonian evinced no little enterprise on the part of that paper, only it was hard to keep Dr. Cole and vice-President Stevenson or Mrs. Potter Palmer and Mrs. Paisley in their proper connections, and one would find himself a little mixed in trying to remember whether it was the Womans' building or the Oregonian building that had a big square tower built on one corner.

MEN may be found in every community in Oregon who violate the game laws every year, who go fishing and hunting on Sunday, and in many other ways violate laws and rules of decency, and it is all done without fear of molestation but it is a thing calling for newspaper censure for a mere schoolboy to rob a Mongolian pheasant's nest. With such examples all about him how could he be expected to do otherwise?

THE custom of exercising executive clemency in the pardoning of criminals, is becoming so common that it is dangerous. It has got so that the sentence of a court is a mere farce, in a good many instances. An Oregon City "boy" 21 years of age, was recently sentenced to two years in the penitentiary for forgery, but after only a few days at that institution he was pardoned out because of his "extreme youth." Too many boys would look upon such action as a license to perpetrate other crimes.

THE Capital Journal seems to take great satisfaction in sneering at the members of the Salem Ministerial Union because they demanded more pay for their services in the state institutions. Preachers as a class are looked upon too much as a set of men whose sole purpose in life is to do good to others while asking nothing for themselves, and because in this single instance they seem to have insisted on their rights as citizens, not only the Journal, but the press generally throughout the state finds nothing for them but censure and ridicule.

THE statement is made that in 1850 the criminal population averaged one to every 3,500 people, while in 1890 there was one criminal for every 786 people. It should be the duty of every person interested in the welfare of the country to look for the causes which bring about such a condition of affairs, and knowing them use every effort to suppress them. By the side of this single question which receives so little attention, many so-called questions of the day, which call forth the best efforts of tongue and pen and legislative action, sink into utter insignificance.

SEMI-CIVILIZED individuals who have thought that Sunday opening of the world's fair, accompanied by the sale of liquors was essential to maintain the dignity of typical America, will no doubt be pleased to learn that the latter part of the arrangement has been made by Messrs. Frank James and Bill Dalton, who will dispense ardent spirits, relying on their extreme popularity to draw custom. Now if a few hundred red flag anarchists could be turned loose for the occasion it might be made, even at this late day, sufficiently cosmopolitan to please that class of Americans who are more "tippical" than typical.

SOME editors have no use for religious papers, but this does not apply to F. P. Baum, of the San Juan (Wash.) Graphic. He uses the Sunday School Journal for newspaper wrappers.

OPENING OF THE WORLD'S FAIR.

Since last Monday morning at 10 o'clock, at which time President Cleveland touched the electric button and set the machinery in motion, and unfurled the flags above the buildings, the World's Fair has been open to the world at fifty cents per head. President Cleveland in his address spoke as follows:

"I am here to join my fellow-citizens in congratulations which befit the occasion. Surrounded by the stupendous results of American enterprise and activity, and in view of the magnificent evidences of American skill and intelligence, we need not fear that these congratulations will be exaggerated. We stand to day in the presence of the oldest nations of the world and point to the great achievements we here exhibit, asking no allowance on the score of youth. The enthusiasm with which we contemplate our work has intensified the warmth of the greeting we extend to those who have come from foreign lands to illustrate with us the growth and progress of human endeavor in the direction of higher civilization. We, who believe that popular education and the stimulation of the best impulses of our citizens lead the way to a realization of the proud national destiny which our faith promises, gladly welcome the opportunity here afforded us to see the results accomplished by efforts which have been exerted longer than ours in the field of man's improvements, while in appreciative return we exhibit the unparalleled advancement and wonderful accomplishment of our young nation, and present the triumph of vigorous self-reliance of an independent people.

"We have built those splendid edifices, but we have also built the magnificent fabric of a popular government whose grand proportions are seen throughout the world. We have made and here gathered together for object use the beauty and products of American skill and invention. We have also made men who rule themselves. It is an exalted mission in which we and our guests from other lands are engaged, and, we co-operate in the inauguration of an enterprise devoted to human enlightenment and in the undertaking we here enter upon, we exemplify in the noblest sense the brotherhood of nations. Let us hold fast to the meaning that underlies this ceremony, and let us not lose the impressiveness of this moment. As by a touch the machinery that gives life to this vast exposition is now set in motion, now at the same instant let our hopes and aspirations awaken the forces which in all times to come shall influence the welfare, dignity and freedom of mankind."

THE WOMAN'S BUILDING.

CHICAGO, May 1.—The most satisfactory feature of the day's proceedings, from a feminine standpoint, was the formal dedication of the woman's building this afternoon. A great throng of women crowded into the building, to the imminent danger of silks and fabrics and frail bonnets. The ceremonies opened with a grand march by Jean Ingeborg von Bronsart, of Weimar, Germany, followed by a prayer by Miss Ida Hiltin. Then Miss Frances Elliott, of London, favored the assembly with a dramatic overture, at the close of which Mrs. Potter Palmer, president of the board of lady managers, delivered the dedicatory address. She said:

"The moment of fruition has arrived. The hope which for more than two years has gradually been gaining strength and definiteness has now become a reality, for today the exposition opens its gates, and with it comes the formal opening of the woman's building. Experience has brought many surprises, not the least of which is the realization of the unity of human interests, notwithstanding the differences of race, government, permanent or external conditions. Of all the existing forms of injustice, none are so cruel and inconsistent as woman with regard to self-maintenance. It is only too evident that woman, thrown upon her own resources, had a frightful struggle. The theory that the sphere of woman is the home told heavily against her, men taking advantage of it to force her hire to a nominal price, and many who clung to a respectable occupation showed high principle and were real heroines of life."

Mrs. Palmer dilated upon the broad stretch between the theory of the sanctity of the home and the actual status of affairs, and then turned to what she called dealing with existing facts. She said it was the hope to create, by means of the exposition a well defined public sentiment in regard to the propriety of women maintaining families. It was hoped the statistics of the board of lady managers would give a correct idea of the number of these women, nor only those without natural protectors, but also those forced to work shoulder to shoulder with their husband, without noting the number forced to support husbands in idleness and vice. Mrs. Palmer then at some length discoursed upon the present situation of women, the theories and arguments raised for and against, and coming back to the exposition, said that, realizing that a women can never hope to receive a proper recompense for her services until her usefulness and success are fully recognized, the opportunity had been taken of the advantage presented by the exposition to bring together such evidences of her skill as to show that ability was not a matter of sex. The board, she said, did not wish to be understood as placing a sentimental value upon the work of women because of sex; it was simply hoped to place the facts before the whole world and let it judge for itself. Mrs. Palmer detailed the difficulties encountered in bringing the commissioners, especially foreign, to a realization of the fact that woman was filling a sphere greater than was thought, and then returned thanks to those who had aided in bringing the woman's exhibit to its present state of perfection. In conclusion, Mrs. Palmer said:

"The eloquent president of the commission last October dedicated the great, great, great exposition to humanity. We now dedicate the woman's building to elevated womanhood, knowing that by so doing we shall best serve the cause of humanity."

WHERE BEGGARS THRIVE.

Chief among the many puzzling questions with which my childish mind whiled away the weary half hour of a Sunday morning sermon, was the existence of beggars in Bible days. I pictured Palestine to myself as a land of temples, tombs and gardens, inhabited by beggars and Pharisees. Born and reared in the prosperous west, poverty such as the scriptural tales dimly suggested was to me a thing as vague as the Hell of the same records, a fairy tale far more unreal than the sleeping palace or the caves of Aladdin. Now, the puzzle is solved, I have seen poverty, I have been to Mexico, I understand Palestine. I can almost believe in a horned Satan and fire and brimstone.

To a casual observer Mexican poverty is extremely picturesque. It is not an imitation of respectability such as the humblest American will attempt, but it is humanity in rags and nakedness, too often in sores, almost always in dirt. There, begging is a trade, the occupation of all the poorer population. Beggars infest the railroad stations at the interior towns, and a motley array it is. They are of all sexes, conditions and ages, with and without sores, the lame, the halt, and the blind. Babies in arms holding out dirty little hands for a "centavo," old women, young women, healthy little boys, crippled grandfathers all whining to the same tune in their mongrel Spanish "For the love of God, Senorita, give me a cent."

Give them cents! I poured them out upon them. Never had a copper seemed of so much value. I luxuriated in their delight. I bought out the porter, the newsdealer and the conductor to satisfy the want that never could be satisfied; for there is a friendly feeling among these unfortunates, and when they find one who will give, they spread the glad tidings among all their class, and indeed I suspected them of having discovered some peculiar way of telegraphing the information to the next station, so besieged was I for charity.

Some tourists who had been in the country before endeavored to impress me with the fact that I was encouraging idleness, but who would not be idle when the sun was hot and water a luxury and even for labor, money was not forthcoming. They must live. To live they must eat, and it seems to me that in the more desolate portion of the country, to eat they must beg.

Very picturesque were they seen from the car window in the soft gloom of the southern night, their dark eyes gleaming like stars under their quaint hat or still more primitive head dress, their white teeth glittering as the musical Spanish rippled forth in compliments calculated to appeal to the generosity of the senorita who seemed to them a small sized Providence. In the cruel glare of the sun defects became evident, and one saw the coarseness in the squalor and dirt, still never did they cease to be poetic. They harmonized so perfectly with the background of cloudless sky, antique buildings, and tropical verdure. There was a beauty even in their very ugliness which was a plea for their existence and in remembering the pleasantest journey of my life I shall always have a very tender recollection of the beggars of Mexico.—Edith M. Day, in Lewis & Dryden's Railway and Marine Gazette.

CROP-WEATHER BULLETIN NO. 6.

WESTERN OREGON.

The past week showed a marked improvement in the climatic conditions, yet the cool, cloudy and showery weather continues. Rain fell on April 26th, 27th, 30th, on May 1st and 2nd general rain is falling. There were several days of bright, warm weather. The mean temperature has been from 48 to 51 degrees. The total rainfall has been less than one-half an inch, except at Ashland, where 0.84 of an inch fell. Frost occured in Douglas, Josephine and Jackson counties on the 26th and 27th, which did some slight damage to strawberries.

CROPS, ETC.

The ground is thoroughly saturated, and on the low lands it continues to be too wet to be worked. The peach, pear, cherry and prune trees and strawberries are in full bloom. Apples are swelling their buds and are almost ready to blossom. Some damage has been done to the peach bloom by the continued cool wet weather; but the prevailing opinion is that there will be a large fruit crop. The berry bushes are loaded with blossom. On the uplands plowing and seeding has progressed and the major portion of the spring seeding has been done. On the lowlands some wheat has been injured. The wheat is rooting and stooling most satisfactorily. The grass is growing much better than any other vegetation. Onions around Beaverton in Washington county have in places been reseeded, the first seeding having been drowned out. Vegetables, where planted, are above the ground and very healthy. Hops in Linn, Marion and Clackamas counties are from one to four feet high and almost ready to tie. In Washington, Yamhill and Polk counties they do not appear to be so far advanced; the hop acreage has generally been increased. The hop lice have appeared at Needy, Clackamas county.

The lambing season is about over and has been fairly successful. The wool will be extra good, being remarkably clean and of good staple.

EASTERN OREGON.

There has been an improvement in the weather conditions during the past week, but it yet remains cool, cloudy and backward. Very heavy rain fell in Sherman and Wasco counties on the 26th and 27th. The season has been very wet and cold. Snow fell in Klamath county on April 23rd, 24th and 27th. The precipitation for the past week ranged from 0.10 to 0.30 of an inch. Heavy frosts occured on the 28th, but no damage is reported from it.

CROPS, ETC.

The ground is thoroughly soaked and is in good condition for spring work. Spring plowing and seeding have been almost completed and the acreage is generally increased. Within the next ten days all spring seeding will be done. In those sections where the fall sown wheat was supposed to have been badly frozen out during the past winter, it is now found that a very good crop will be had. The acreage of alfalfa has been materially increased in Malheur county. The cereal acreage has been increased in the Powder river valley. The grass is obtaining good growth and stock is improving. The lambing season is about over, and while full reports are not at hand, sufficient is known to say that 85 per cent. of the lambs have been raved. The rains have kept the wool clean, so that the clip will be one of the finest and best on record.

The cool weather has been detrimental to the peach crop. Peaches, pears and apricots are generally in full bloom close to the Columbia river. South and east of the Blue mountains no bloom is yet to be seen.

The present atmospheric conditions do not indicate an immediate clearing of the weather, though warmer weather with fewer showers may be expected and these conditions will be much more favorable than a sudden warm dry spell. More sunshine would be of great benefit to the vegetation.

DISTRICT SCHOOL NECESSITIES.

Some time ago there appeared in one of our most valuable papers, the "Oregon Courier" an article which suggested, "That our National Stars and Stripes should be presented by the county to every school district in the county, and the same be raised on all national and school holidays and that it should be a duty of directors to see that such a rule was enforced, the same as other school laws." Now I agree with the writer in this and would like to suggest more: That it be the school directors' duty to see that each pupil is instructed as to the meaning of those days, which our nation holds sacred, for if it is made a practice to raise the flag why not have our school teachers thoroughly instruct our children, as to the importance of such occasions. I know of children (or young people) in our district, at the age of eighteen, who do not know one-half of the holidays in the year, and I think I could safely say there are not many past twelve, who know what all the national holidays are celebrated in honor of.

A great many say "Let the parents teach their children at home." What do we pay our teachers for if not to instruct our children? Surely they expect to earn their money, and talk is cheap when you are getting paid for it. Besides, there are a great many other things to be learned at home, and plenty of things which are neglected by the parents who have (especially where they are farmers) so much to occupy both their time and talent.

Now I would like to ask the Editor, or some one else, if there is any law compelling a county school superintendent to visit each district school and how often? Another point is that there have been trees planted on school premises in our community and dedicated in honor of some noted person, which have not stood to see the coming Arbor day, on account of being destroyed by the pupils. Now why plant them if not preserve them. If there is a law to preserve them, why not enforce it? If none, why not make one? Surely they should be cared for as well as planted in honor of the person. Our district school grounds should be as well cared for as those in town. Our district school campus is larger, why not care the same for it as in towns and cities? It would be a great benefit to our country as well as more pleasant to the eye.

I can not understand why it is not a school law to require teachers to instruct their pupils in everything pertaining to our government, laws, rules and regulations. How are our boys and girls, our young statemen who are growing up, to become able to fill the positions which await them, if not trained from their youth up?

Fathers, mothers and all older heads, put your shoulders to the wheel and see what can be done for the advancement of our boys and girls. As one of our greatest statesman said "Neighbors give your boys a chance," let us see if we can not do something. Would it not be worth while to devote an occasional Friday afternoon to drill in this and similar lines, in the place of the customary literary exercises? It seems to me the benefits to be derived are equally as great.

I know personally of two pupils at the advanced age of fourteen in our school district who do not know the meaning of the abbreviation U. S. A. For shame on our school leaders if not our parents for such ignorance.

Again, the majority of our school houses are not fit buildings to keep out the cold during the winter months. You may say "Let the teachers report." Oh, yes! but haven't we some directors who had much rather spend time and money some other way? I tell you kind readers old mossback Oregonians are hard to convince, and they can very easily get on good terms with said teachers; so in goes "a good, sound, comfortable school, all accommodations, in first class order," on the teachers report. Do we not pay our superintendent enough so he can visit our schools once in every three, or six months and let him see personally the condition of the school? If not, why not give him another dollar? It will not be much added to his present salary, and would be money well spent.

Come, now, after you read this for pastime, set yourself to thinking and read it again at your leisure and see if you can not see some good in it. I would be pleased to hear from others on the subject, as I feel sure there is need of steps being taken to bring about an improvement on these lines.

We are frequently asked who is likely to succeed the present postoffice incumbent in this and that neighborhood. Not having any "inside" relations with the administration, we are unable to answer further than to venture a general guess. At Dayton, if asked to guess, we should mention R. L. Harris as the most probable incumbent. At North Yamhill, H. C. Gist; Carlton, J. W. Collins; LaFayette, John Thompson; Sheridan, J. T. Simpson; (he has been appointed); Amity C. H. Burch. The reading of the horoscope with reference to Newberg is not clear; and turning to McMinnville, we find that the stars were in precisely the same position as at the birth of the two most prominent aspirants, John Baker and Frank Harding, the sign of the zodiac being in the groin, which probably means that they will both go bellyaching. Then there are Hi Rummel, E. M. Greely, J. A. Thompson and a host of fellows, born when the sign was in the forehead, but all this reveals is the fact that they want the office. The successful candidate may know his own destiny from the presence of a strawberry mark on the left hip.—Reporter.
