

NEWBERG GRAPHIC.

ISSUED EVERY FRIDAY MORNING.

EDITOR AND PUBLISHER:
E. H. WOODWARD AND O. M. C. EMERY.

FRIDAY, MAY 26, 1893.

Entered as second class matter at the post office at Newberg, Oregon.

The Newberg Graphic is one of our new exchanges, edited by Ira B. Malin and published by the Times Publishing Co.

The Hillside Democrat was completely burned out last Monday night. A new outfit, including a steam press had just been put in by the proprietors.

FRENCH PETE a Chicago barber eats eighty-four eggs in twenty minutes. This would be rather an expensive diet at the ruling prices for Oregon eggs.

The LaFayette Ledger, owing to the meager support given it by the people of that town, has been reduced from seven to six columns. W. I. Westerfield, brother of the proprietor, now has the management of it.

DR. MAHANA has at last succeeded in interesting a number of capitalists in his new railroad scheme, and a company, called the "Center Elevated and Railway Company," with a capital stock of $1,000,000 was incorporated at Salem last Monday.

UNCLE SAM will now have the pleasure of paying $3,000,000 for the New York, a new armored war vessel, said to be the fastest in the world. How much more sensible would it have been to build two or three good serviceable merchant ships for the same money. There might be some use for them.

"Life" gives about the best definition of capital and labor that we have seen and it is especially appropriate just at this time. "Now, supposing I borrowed $5 from you; that would represent capital wouldn't it?" "Yes." But supposing, after while, you wanted to get it back—"That would represent labor."

It is really too bad that the "working-men" of Chicago are not to be given an opportunity to visit the world's fair on Sunday, these particular workmen being so much better than the millions of others in the country. But the heartless managers have so far refused to grant any special privileges, and now we are told that a scheme is on foot to blow the whole exposition outfit into Lake Michigan.

Is morality enforced in Chicago by the closing of the World's Fair gates, and the opening of theatres and saloons on Sunday?—Brownsville Times.

Of course it isn't, but Chicago alone is responsible for the moral state of affairs outside of the gates, while the whole United States is back of the World's Fair, and responsible to the whole world for a right or wrong position taken on the Sunday question.

PROF. S. P. LANGLEY who is at the head of the Smithsonian Institute, at Washington has invented a flying machine which is soon to be tried. Prof. Langley is said to be the greatest fountain of scientific lore in this country and the favored few who have seen the "Air-Runner" as he calls the new machine are confident that it will fly successfully. It is simply for experiment and not in any sense for practical transportation service.

DASTARDLY WORK OF WHISKY MEN.

Our readers have no doubt read the account of the dastardly work of whisky men at Muscatine, Iowa. Three citizens of that city, a retired capitalist, the editor of the Journal and N. Rosenberg, a prominent attorney have been active in prosecuting violators of the Iowa temperance law and have been threatened for some time by the bum element. On the tenth of this month the residences of each of the three gentlemen were wrecked with dynamite. No lives were lost but several persons were injured. Mr. Rosenberg is a brother of Pres. Rosenberg of Penn College. He was a schoolmate of ours in 1874 and we know him to be a gentleman in every sense of the term. The scene at Mr. Rosenberg's home is thus described by the Muscatine Journal:

"About 1:30 Mr. Rosenberg heard someone about his house and got up to see if he could discover anything. He looked out of the kitchen window but saw nothing. He slipped into the next room and in an instant there was a terrific report and the next thing he knew, the house was a complete wreck. When Mr. R. picked himself up he did not know where his family were. His wife found herself down in the cellar, covered with plaster, lath and flooring, while her babe was buried beneath her feet, and the other little one was wedged in between some of the timbers. She picked up her precious babe and proceeded to help the other out of its dilemma. Up stairs Mrs. Rosenberg's sister, Miss Hattie Prizer, of Brighton, and Miss Emma McCollough, of Nebraska, were sleeping. The shock threw the former out of bed and the walls having bulged out, thus permitting the second floor to drop to an angle of forty degrees, she rolled down to the ground, without much injury except to receive several pretty bad bruises. Miss McCollough was also tumbled out and slid or climbed down a studding. Mr. R. had his left ankle badly wrenched it being swelled to more than twice its normal size. The little babe received several bad scratches on its head, but was about as playing when the Journal man called about 9 o'clock. Mrs. R. was quite badly bruised, but was trying to forget them like a little heroine while waiting on her husband. The house is about 20x18 with a kitchen in the rear, making the house T shaped. It was 1 1/2 stories high. The kitchen looked as though a large battering ram had been used to knock in the walls and then let the roof fall down on the ruins. The main house is also completely wrecked. The first floor dropped into the cellar, leaving nothing but a dilapidated shell standing, while furniture, stoves, etc., are down in the cellar, broken to pieces and ruined. It was a complete and total wreck. The explosive was thrown into a cellar window on the north side of the house, for their is evidence of burning there and it seems to have spent its force there. One cannot but stand in amazement and wonder as to how the family escaped alive. That the floods intended to kill them can be but little doubted, but Providence prevented."

OREGON FRUIT AT THE FAIR.

Notwithstanding the fact that Oregon was the last state in the union to make an appropriation for a World's Fair exhibit, and further, that the amount appropriated was very insignificant compared with what other states did in this way, it now looks like our exhibit is to attract some attention. The St. Louis Grocer in speaking of our horticultural display says:

The state of Oregon is making a display of fruits at the World's Fair that will be viewed with special interest by fruit growers and canners. In the exhibit are pears weighing four pounds, peaches as large as foot-balls, apples six inches in diameter, plums larger than goose eggs, cherries that require half a dozen bites to dispose of them, and strawberries as large as common apples. Other abnormally large fruits and products of the soil are also exhibited. Oregon is the first state to install an exhibit of pomology. The fruits are enclosed in glass jars of various sizes, and arranged with a view to harmony of colors. The space allotted to this state is fifty linear feet against the wall, and fifty linear feet of table space directly opposite. This space will be filled with ripe fruits in season, supplied from Oregon by express. Mr. C. M. White, the superintendent of Oregon's horticultural exhibit is in charge of the display. The jars containing the fruits are of fanciful design, and will be arranged in tiers upon a stand made of native woods.

CROP-WEATHER BULLETIN NO. 9.

WESTERN OREGON.
Rains have been frequent and excessive, hail fell on several days. The sunshine was not the normal amount. No frosts are reported for the week. The temperature was much cooler than the preceding week, the mean being 50 to 52 degrees, as against 55 to 59 degrees the week before. The total rainfall varied from one to two inches.

CROPS.
The weather was very favorable to late sown grain on uplands, while grain on low-lands is sickly and yellow. Little farm work was done during the week; there yet remains a large amount of spring seeding to be done. Plowing summer fallow is in progress. Grass has a fine growth, the hay crop will be heavy. Hops have good growth, but they cannot be cultivated owing to the wet weather. Hop lice have appeared. The fruit outlook is not of the most promising. The peach crop will not be up to an average. The cherry crop is short in some sections, in others an average. Prunes, pears and apples promise to be better than last year. The cool and late spring rains did injury when the fruit was in blossom. The codlin moth is reported to have appeared. Strawberries are ripening in the southern counties. Sunshine and warmth will cause much more rapid growth and development in all vegetation and allow of spring work being completed.

EASTERN OREGON.
Frequent showers, some heavy rain, cool temperatures and lack of sunshine have marked the weather for the week. The rainfall varied from 0.50 to 1.50 inches. The temperature varied from 45 to 56 degrees the same as the preceding week.

CROPS.
The rains keep the soil in fine condition but there is an absence of sunshine and warmth, which are necessary for the more rapid growth and the development of vegetation. The wheat prospects are excellent, and if no hot winds should occur the yield will be phenomenal. There has been a general increase in the acreage of cereals. The peach crop is not an average one, they are considerably injured about The Dalles and Hills. Strawberries about The Dalles and Hood River are ripening slowly, due to absence of warm sunshine. Wool is being hauled into the warehouse, is of excellent quality and staple. Sheep shearing continues in progress. In the interior counties the fruit buds are swelling and opening, but the backward conditions continue. In Morrow county poplars are in leaf. Box elders and locusts are just opening.

The stock have good range feed, and they are generally reported to be in good condition. The year promises, from the present outlook, to be most successful.

A STEP FORWARD.

The organization of the "Willamette Valley Fruit Growers' Exchange" at Salem last week marks the beginning of a new era in the fruit industry in Western Oregon.

The fruit growers of Marion and Polk counties who met at Salem and effected this organization are not entering upon an untried experiment. They propose, rather, to profit by the experience and follow the example of California fruit growers who have found by experience the necessity and utility of co-operative methods in marketing their fruit.

co-operate in order to secure a market for their fruits. It is found that purchasers do not rush around to hunt up and buy the crop of every individual grower. The California fruit growers find that the way to sell their fruits is to hunt up a market for it. Oregon growers need not expect to sell their fruit unless they do the same. Oregon might raise unlimited quantities of the finest fruit in the world but it would not profit thereby until those fruits were introduced in the markets where such fruit is wanted.

The great object of a co-operative fruit growers' association is to give, as far as possible, to the members thereof the advantages which one individual would possess if he produced all the fruit which is produced by the entire membership of such organization. The advantages thus secured are many. There should be a considerable saving effected in preparing the fruit for market. The large quantity of fruit to be marketed will attract the attention and respect of buyers. Car-load lots can be made up to good advantage. The volume of business transacted will be such as to secure favors from transportation companies which they would be slow to accord to small shippers.

Another great object of such an organization, and one that the Willamette Valley Fruit Growers' Exchange is intended to bring about, is the adoption of such methods of caring for the fruit and preparing it for shipment as will insure a good reputation for Oregon fruits. It is intended that all fruit which this exchange handles shall be thoroughly graded and put up honestly in packages which shall be of uniform quality so that when purchasers buy a box of fruit upon which the Willamette Valley Fruit Exchange has placed a certain brand they will know just what they are getting. Nothing could be more fatal to Oregon's progress as a fruit growing state than the shipment to the east of fruit in the mixed condition in which much of the fruit marketed in Portland is found. It will be much better for the state to feed all inferior fruit to the hogs or even destroy it than to let any of it go to the East. California has always found Oregon a convenient dumping ground for fruit that it did not dare ship East. There is no place to which Oregon can afford to ship the inferior grades of its fruit.

The Willamette Valley Fruit Growers' Exchange appears to be starting out wisely. It is to be hoped that good business management will attend its operations. If it attains the success it ought to have, it will do a great deal to bring about the growing ambition of Salem to become known as the fruit center of Oregon.—Rural Northwest.

FROM OUR EXCHANGES.

L. H. Cowing won a bet Wednesday evening in an undertaking which a few persons would have cared to attempt. It seems that a discussion was on between Cowing and John Humphrey relative to bicycle riding and this resulted in a bet of the supper that Cowing did not dare to ride across the trestle of the Southern Pacific railroad in the northern part of the city. The distance is a little less than one-third of a mile and is over fifty feet high at the highest point, and as the wheel had to be run across on the ties a fall would mean almost certain death, so the danger of the undertaking may be understood. Well, the thing was done, with but one narrow escape when the wheel nearly turned between the ties. Cowing won the supper but he says that he cannot recommend that place for pleasure riding, as the wheel goes bumping along, and is besides very hard to guide.—Oregon City Enterprise.

The first of this week, a letter was received for R. L. Harris, who was absent attending the meeting of the grand lodge I. O. O. F. at Eugene, which informed him of his appointment as postmaster here.—Dayton Herald.

Justice Baxter was engaged last Saturday in the trial of two civil suits. In one, judgment was given for defendant, and in the other judgment for plaintiff. Judge Baxter's court is the most popular one in the county, and the decisions given are fair and just. Not one having been appealed from.—Dayton Herald.

On Friday evening last, while George Alderman was milking one of the cows kicked him, causing the fall—a hard fall which had a sharp edge—to strike his left hand and cut off the first joint of the large finger, all but a very small piece of the skin. One of the other fingers had a piece cut out. A patch was also cut in the palm of right hand, and the cow was also disabled in the foot. Dr. Stuart dressed George's wounds and his finger is healing nicely. The cow was left "out in the cold" by the doctor.—Dayton Herald.

The oratorical contest at the college Saturday evening was very interesting and resulted in a victory for Louis Alderman, of Dayton, who will therefore represent this college in the state contest at Salem next month. Elias Underwood of this city will likewise represent the state university.—Telephone Register.

On Monday J. C. Cooper left on a tour of inspection over the McMinnville and Nestucca wagon road. It was expected by the company to have the road opened for travel by the tenth of June, but on account of the backward spring this will be impossible. Every effort is being made to hasten the work and it is hoped to have the road ready by the first of July. Mr. Cooper will be absent two weeks.—Telephone Register.

The county assessor is now taking account of the indebtedness of those whom he assesses. When he and his deputies first started out it was not necessary to do this, because the law does not allow the deduction of indebtedness, but as there is a chance of this law being declared unconstitutional, it is considered best to be on the safe side and so a minute of each one's indebtedness is made for reference. All who have not given in their indebtedness are requested to send the amount to the assessor as soon as convenient. If the law is upheld it will do no harm, and if not the assessor will have your indebtedness and it will be deducted.—Telephone Register.

The Amity Pagan has put on a big smear of People's party war paint and will shoot paper wads for paper money. We don't exactly know on which side of the fence we will fall yet. We shall root on the top rail for a spell, brethren, till we see something to flip for.—Sheridan Sun.

T. J. Lucy, of Woods, Oregon, was in Sheridan last Thursday on his way to the metropolis. He is the leading merchant in his town, and reports an era of improvement setting in at Woods that presages the growth of a lively little seaport town in the near future. The Mulaney Bros. have platted an addition to the town of Woods, and expect to own and operate a light draught steamer along the coast to and from Portland, with headquarters at Woods. A petition has been forwarded to Congress asking for government aid deepening the channel leading to the bay. With a small appropriation judiciously expended the channel could be made available for large vessels. Mr. Lucy thinks a telephone line from Woods to Sheridan is already a necessity, and that it would pay well six months out of the year, and expenses the remainder of the year. Grounds are being prepared at Woods this season for the use of campers, free of charge.—Sheridan Sun.

F. M. York has a new Columbia bicycle. When he gets it mastered he will use it in assessing, and calculates if he is going to Lafayette, for instance, that he can get there before, under the old way, he would have his horse carried and hitched up.—Reporter.

Henry Flecher weighed a couple of January lambs one day last week. One of them kicked the beam at 92 and the other at 95 pounds. Good enough.—Reporter.

There is nothing that so increases a McMinnville man's desire to work in the garden as the discovery that his wife has misplaced the rake.—Reporter.

A LIBERAL OFFER.—We understand that J. J. Henderson offers to give $200 from his own pass toward building a good road from McMinnville to the corner of the Rogers farm. It will be remembered that he gave a larger sum to build the gravel road from his farm to Amity a year or so ago. He has probably decided that the former donation was a good investment. At all events Mr. Henderson manifests a spirit of enterprise and business sagacity such as marks the record of the successful man in all communities—a spirit that cannot be too highly commended.—Reporter.

THE FAIR SEX WON.

The match game of base ball participated in last Saturday by the girls against the boys of the public school, was an exceedingly interesting one. The game was played scientifically and according to the latest rules throughout. Both sides were nearly uniformed, the girls in white waists and black skirts to their knees, the boys in white and blue. More than two hundred from the town and Normal witnessed the game. The way in which the batter on the girls' side handled the ball was unusual, hardly a ball passing the catcher, Mand Hargrove, and the curved pitcher Miss McGrew, caught several runners hot from the bat and made double plays with them. The boys worked hard and did all in their power to beat the game but all in vain. The cheers from the crowd in behalf of the feminine team, "rattled" the boys who were ahead until the last two innings, and the girls succeeded in scoring one more run than the boys. The score stood 35 to 35 in favor of the fair sex. The boys were beaten at their own game.—Monmouth Record.

AN OREGON CITY GIRL.

Mrs. Ella Higginson who is well known in this city where she was born and reared but whose home is now in Whatcom, Washington, is editing the June number of Peterson's Magazine, which will be devoted largely to the Pacific coast. Her appointment as editor of this popular magazine is a recognition of her literary merits which will be gratifying to her friends in this city.—Oregon City Enterprise.

ROTHCHILD'S MAXIMS.

The elder Baron Rothchild had the walls of his bank plastered with the following maxims, and they are worth copying into our young folks' school exercise books:

Shun liquors.
Dare to go forward.
Never be discouraged.
Be polite to everybody.
Never tell business lies.
Employ your time well.
Be prompt in everything.
Pay your debts promptly.
Bear all troubles patiently.
Do not reckon upon chance.
Make no useless acquaintances.
Be brave in the struggle of life.
Maintain your integrity as a sacred thing.
Never appear something more than you are.
Take time to consider, and then decide positively.
Carefully examine into every detail of your business.
Then work hard and you will be certain to succeed in life.—Ex.
