Entered as second class matter at the post office at Newberg, Oregon.

SENATOR LELAND STANFORD died at his home at Palo Alto, California, Wednesday morning at 1:30. His death was due to apoplexy.

There are people in the world who seem to think that in order to get a good article of almost anything, they must purchase such things as are manufactured away from home. We are not inclined to that view. The other day a sack of flour manufactured at a neighboring town, was through mistake sent us. After a thorough trial and a fair comparison, we are free to say that it does not at all compare with flour made at our home mills for making first class bread.

There are people in Oregon who, judging from their actions, believe that saloons are actually worth more to a town than a college. Newberg don't figure that way. We never have had much experience with saloons, but the past five days have been pretty well filled up with college work and everybody seems inclined to the opinion that a good investment was made when Pacific College was founded. Other towns may bid for saloons but Newberg will stand by her college.

TUESDAY'S dispatches from Chicago say: "Oregon is one of the states that will receive daily shipments of fruit and vegetables in season. The first shipment of strawberries arrived today, and came out crisp and fresh as the day they were picked. Oregon inaugurated today a daily telegraphic statement of the crop prospects and conditions in the state, and it proved quite an interesting feature. In the four tests today in the agricultural building, Oregon flour was found to be superior for whiteness and amount of gluten."

It is a very common thing to hear people complaining of the treatment they have received at the hands of nurserymen. They have ordered a certain variety and after planting and caring for them two or four years, they find the variety is entirely different from what they ordered. The following from the Orange Belt of California will be of interest: "An interesting case in which nurserymen and orchardists are concerned, and one without precedent in this state, was decided by Judge McKinley of Los Angeles, this week. Two years ago last March J. M. Sherrer of Verdugo bought of the Park Nursery Company a lot of peach trees. Of 4,000 of these supposed to be Susquehanna and Muir varieties, 290 bore last year white freestone peaches a kind the plaintiff claimed to be of no practical market value, while the kinds ordered are in general demand at a good price. Decision was given in favor of the plaintiff, and judgment rendered for $350. The ruling based the measure of value upon the orchard in its present condition and its value in ordinary conditions with trees upon it of varieties ordered."

Elwood Special in Indianapolis Journal: Word has been given out by the American Tin-plate Company that it will enlarge its plant to double its present capacity. This step is necessitated by the great and increasing demand for American tin plate, orders pouring in at a rate that far exceeds the ability to supply with their present equipments, although over 2,000 boxes of finished plates are turned each week. The plant, which was at first denounced by many as a mere campaign scheme, has given the lie to such un-American assertions and demonstrated the fact that it is solid and permanent. At the present time it is the pride of Elwood, and every citizen, irrespective of party, unites in saying that it is substantial. If it were a campaign argument it has turned out a most convincing one, and fully represents the spirit of republicanism which made it possible for the factory to exist.

A WOMAN HERMIT.

In the vicinity of Sweet home in Linn county, there lives a female hermit whose history is as peculiar to the world as is said to herself. She is over 60 years of age, and beneath a black cap with a white frill which she constantly wears, can be seen traces of care and premature age. This old lady comes of a good family and has raised a respectable family of children herself, and the date of her eccentric life began with an event that took place when her children were all grown. Like some other thoughtless parents, they neglected to record the date of births in their family, and feeling the mistake, she and her husband decided that, for the benefit of their grown children, they would ascertain as nearly as possible their ages. For this purpose they set a day and summoned some of their neighbors whom they had known for years to meet at their home for the purpose of establishing the birth dates of their children. Better would it have been for them had this day never arrived. The age of the oldest son was taken into discussion, and on his age the man and wife disagreed. The difference of opinion ripened into enmity and was the cause of separation. The husband moved to a secluded spot and passed the remainder of his days a miserable hermit. He never went out nor had any company. Only a few years ago he was found in his cabin after he had been dead several days. The wife had built a house in a remote corner of her son's yard and is living a similar life. Unimpressible and devoted to the milk of human kindness, this strange woman is eking out an existence made miserable by a simple event, and known by few outside her family.—Stayton Times.

DESTROYED BY FIRE AND AGAIN AT WORK.

The Price Baking Powder Company of Chicago, which is known throughout the country for the superior excellence of its Baking Powder, met with a serious loss on the morning of May 18th, in the nearly total destruction by fire of its factory and offices. No sooner had the flames been subdued than the work of restoration commenced, and the Company by prudent foresight, having had stored in outside warehouses duplicate machinery, labels and supplies of raw materials in preparation for any emergency was enabled by energetic management to resume manufacturing within a very few days after the fire, thereby causing its customers but a trifling delay in the filling of their orders. Had the Company not been so prepared the delay would have required months of time to get new machinery.

It is now forty years since the goods manufactured by this company were first placed on the market, to Dr. Price being due the distinction of having prepared the first can of Cream of Tartar Baking Powder ever manufactured in any country. It was a great discovery, superseding as it did the old method of using cream of tartar and soda separately, to say nothing of saleratus, with which the biscuit of early days was embittered.

The Price Company has no connection whatever with any other baking powder company or manufacturer, notwithstanding representations to the contrary made by other manufacturers whose sole aim is to deceive the public and borrow the good name and fame acquired by the Price Cream Baking Powder, which is known all over the world as the purest, and "most perfect made."

THE FARMER'S WIFE.

No farm can prosper unless it has for its center a happy, well ordered and intelligent home, and this must largely radiate from the wife and mother, who too often thoughtlessly neglects her personal appearance and mental advancement, her manners, her social duties, and sinks into a mere drudge. There is a great disposition among farmers' wives to succumb to their cares. We are inclined to think it is because of the monotony of their lives.

We should awake to our needs and study how to supply, instead of uselessly brooding them. I mean not only that which we need to work—the many conveniences which modern ingenuity has produced for housework. We should acquaint ourselves with all of these, and study to economize and systematize work.

We should learn what is best for us to try to accomplish and what to leave untried; what, in its broadest sense, is the most important work or duty for the day and hour. And while we are cultivating a knowledge of these accomplishments—and they are not mean—we should be constantly on the alert for the improvement, refinement and piety of our family. No one can wield so powerful an influence in a family that a good wife and mother can if she will only realize her influence and exert herself to be cheerful, helpful, and entertaining.

In an atmosphere like this, a man, free from the allurements of city life, constantly in communion with nature and "inhaling Heaven's free air," will develop all within him that is noble, manly and useful.

A wife and mother should never succumb to drudgery. Noble purposes should animate her life than merely bringing that to pass which administrators to the physical comforts only.

Of course the simplest hospitality costs something, but what can we have that is worth having unless it costs us something? We see much written about the industries of the farm, and it is well, but mankind needs social recreation also and it is our belief that the exercise of more hospitality "in gladness and singleness of heart" would be a great factor of success in our farm homes, and when we learn to dispense it more freely and graciously, we will find that the girls and boys will cease to have so much aversion to living on the farms.—Mrs. C. M. Sanders, in Southern Cultivator.

COMMENCEMENT WEEK AT PACIFIC COLLEGE.

The rains of last Friday morning cast a cloud over the prospects for field day exercises and everybody felt blue. The faculty and students met at the college at nine o'clock and after a hasty consideration of the state of the weather, they decided to postpone the exercises until Saturday. This proved to be a good move, as Saturday was a fine day and a large crowd was on hand to witness the sports. The weather has been bad during the spring for out door practice and consequently the records made last year were not broken in many instances. This did not lessen the interest manifested by the crowd in attendance, however, and it was difficult for the marshals to keep the people back. It is a rather strange fact that on such occasions the majority of people imagine that in order to see the performers they must crowd up like a flock of sheep. Everybody could see to better advantage if all would stand back a good distance, but it looks like as long as good gatherings are held the policeman's club will be a necessity. A club will sometimes hammer common sense into people when they can't be reached by reasoning, and it seems well that there is a good undergrowth of timber coming on in Oregon.

Much interest was manifested in the foot racing and there was some good work done. Ed Hampton proved to be the fastest on foot, although W. F. Edwards made a very close second.

By referring to the list of prizes it will be seen that Miss Stevens only fell a fraction short of making as good time as Hampton and Miss Judd's time was not more than a quarter of a second less. We are of the opinion that with the same training the young ladies will throw dust in the boys eyes in a foot race. We hope to see a test made next year and we shall miss our guess if the ladies don't lead in the races. The pole vaulting was the best thing on the program, and last years record by Baillie was beaten. Grant Heater scaled the bar when placed in the highest notch and at the solicitation of the crowd the posts were raised by placing timbers underneath. He then cleared the pole at a height of 8 feet 8 1/2 inches. S. Hobson was on hand with his camera and got a shot on Heater just as the pole left his hands and we understand he got a good negative.

Prof. R. Haworth, C. B. Westren and Oscar Allen acted as judges and their decisions were fair to the contestants and satisfactory to everybody.

Address by Rev. Mills.

On Monday afternoon Rev. Levi Mills, of Wilmington, Ohio, by invitation, delivered a very able address to the Crescent Literary Society. His closing remarks we give below:

"Members of the literary society permit me to congratulate you on your good fortune, in being so favorably situated, and beautifully surrounded, in this land of health and bounty, in the excellency of your opportunities as students of this college, the superior abilities and efficiency of its instructors, which gives assurance that your education will not be superficial, but thorough. I congratulate you on the propitious time in which you are laying the foundation for the future untired relations and business engagements of life. It is fair to suppose that each of you will spend at least one fourth of the years allotted you on earth in the preparation for happy useful lives. You will be continually entering new fields of investigation and service which will continue to tax your energies, try your patience and employ all the powers of mind and body which you possess. Enter each of these with that tenacious spirit of stick-to-it-iveness which will cause you to continue through all discouragements and evil temptations. Be deliberate and reflective in the choice of what your life work shall be. Banish the thought that labor is dishonorable and toil degrading and be assured that it requires more brains and ability to be a mechanic than to be a clerk in a store, more skill to make pies and pudding in the kitchen than to trim bonnets in the millinery shop, that all are alike honorable and praiseworthy.

In your choice of a profession or business make selection in accordance with your natural tendencies of mind and desire, for which you feel conscious you are best adapted and that will prove pleasant and congenial to you, as one seldom succeeds in the pursuit of any calling or business which is distasteful to them, and for which they have no real liking. Form your own opinions about men, measures and policies, and when your judgment has been convinced of the prudence and propriety of a course of action, take it with faith in its success. Don't wait for something to turn up, but try the strength of your own mind and muscle and turn up something yourselves. Don't be influenced by policy alone, but let principle be the mainspring of your action. Don't look on the dark side of things, but be always sure to see the new moon over the right shoulder. Don't bear the burden of imaginary troubles which are to be, but by the cheerfulness and joy of the present, drive from your minds all shadows of disaster. Don't wait and wonder why you are not promoted to some place of honor and influence, but by your own usefulness promote yourselves.

Life with its possibilities is before you, improve it while you may. Its gateways of power are open before inviting entrance, by energy, honesty and integrity, your success is assured. Meet bravely responsibilities, do not shun burdens and obligations. Crowd into the youth and strength of your lives your best efforts, ever keeping in view the fact that "Time stops not" in its rapid flight, the sun so swiftly descends to its setting as it rose to its noon. The form that so rapidly matured into one of grave strength and manly attributes of character is bowed by the weight of years. The elasticity of youth gives way to the measured trembling careful tread of age, and on the head time sprinkles its snow. And in the language of another, "It is in mature age our thoughts assume their most valued characteristics, when musing over the events of past years multiplied we contemplate the mysteries of the future. The world bows down to age, gives it reverence.

The true man does not want to be a child again. At all times and in all places men and women have contemplated the questions of death and immortality. The one a stern reality from which there is no escaping. Every day our friends are dying, no place of domestic felicity, no bonds of brotherhood, no association or councils of mankind in whose circle he does not enter. But while death may destroy the man, it cannot blur the character nor check the tide of the influence of his life, it may slay the soldier cannot efface the record of the result of the battles which he fought, it may silence the voice of the statesman, but cannot undermine the principles for which he contended, it may rob us of our loved ones and leave home desolate and hearts broken, yet death itself has been conquered in its own dominion, destroyed in its own citadel by Him who came to destroy death and bring life and immortality to light. Seeing clearly under the guidance of light of christianity the future is full of hope. Death viewed from the standpoint of christian faith and trust in God is but the door of ingress to a more perfect life. We are all alike in death. The king and the peasant enter its portals together, and surely that which is the common lot of all mankind must be for the common good, the entrance to the harbor, well may we covet the rest within. It is not all of life to live. Earth is not man's abiding place. Life is not a bubble cast up by the sea of eternity to float for a moment upon its surface, and then sink into nothingness and darkness forever. We are from and destined to a higher, holier place than earth. There is a realm where the flowers perpetually bloom, where the rainbow never fades, where sin never enters, where sorrow is unknown and pain unfelt, no tears no weariness no death, where we exchange the lease of life for a freehold of a better tenure, where the beautiful beings that pass before us like visions will remain and abide with us forever. God grant to all of us this day the conscious assurance that we each of us are natives of Infinity, sons and daughters of a blissful immortality."

On Sunday morning at the usual hour for services Rev. Thomas C. Brown preached the baccalaureate sermon at Friends church. The church was crowded with an eager audience who listened with close attention to this most excellent sermon. Dr. Elias Jessup occupied the pulpit in the evening, preaching a missionary sermon. Both addresses were full of good things, well calculated to give the college students a higher idea of the possibilities of real success in life along the line of usefulness in the world. Our space forbids an extended account of these excellent sermons.

TUESDAY.

On Tuesday afternoon the college chapel was well filled, this being the occasion of the graduating exercises of the preparatory class. This class is to be congratulated on the preparation and delivery of their orations. Every production was original and each one showed much study and thought in the preparation. Taken all through we consider this the best effort ever yet made by a preparatory class in the college. We are glad to note the decided improvement. When students get down to business and use their brains, discarding the idea of declamations on such occasions a great gain has been made. The following was the program:

Invocation. Music.

- Oration, "The Model Citizen," Ore Price. "Polish Your Boot-heels," Edie Macy. Oration, "Advertising," Edna Stratton. Music. Oration, "Landscape Gardening," Lewis Hanson. Oration, "The Use and Abuse of Games," Florence Brown. Oration, "The Woman of the Nineteenth Century," Leta Reece. Music. Oration, "Menaces to Our Government," Drew Price. Oration, "Hobby Horses," Harley Britt. "Harmony," Lida Hanson. Music. Presentation of Dip'omas. Address to Class, Miss Rebbie Hinchman. Benediction.

On Tuesday night the Crescent Society gave a literary entertainment before a large audience. The exercises in the main were good, but less originality was shown than in the program of the preparatory class. We hope to see an improvement in this particular in the society in the future. The program was as follows: Piano Solo, "La Pluis De Perles," Miss Jennie Larson. Oration, "The Conquest of Self," W. F. Edwards. Declaration, "The Little Quaker Sinner," Miss Mattie Stratton. Essay, "Pictures in Life's Mirror," Miss Lola Hunt. Quartet, "Old Mother Hubbard," Prof. Jessup, W. S. Kirk and Misses Ada E. Howard and Lulu Trueblood. Oration, "The Resurrection," E. L. Jessup Story, "The Bride's Story," Miss Myrtle Price. Trio, "The Valley of Chamouni," Misses Ada Howard, Rebbie Hinchman, Dasie Stanley. Oration, "The Dangers and Uses of One Idea," Miss Elma Brown. Declaration, "Farmer Stubbins on Rollers," A. H. Jessup. Duet, "Farewell, Oh Farewell," Misses Ada E. Howard and Dasie Stanley. WEDNESDAY.

Wednesday morning brought the event of commencement week. At 10:30 the first audience ever gathered in the auditorium of the new church filled the seats. Pleasure and expectation were plainly written on every countenance. A profusion of potted flowers added taste to the already beautiful finishings of the rostrum. The mellow sunlight on the beautiful windows produced a pleasing effect. On the rostrum sat C. J. Edwards and A. C. Stanbrough the two graduates, with President Newlin on the left and Miss Emma Spencer and Rev. Nathan H. Clark on the right. The following is the program:

- Piano Solo, "Morning Dew," Miss Jennie Larson. Invocation, Miss Emma Spencer. Oration, "Conflict," C. J. Edwards. Solo, "Why do the Swallows Change their Home?" Mrs. W. L. Robertson. Oration, "Who are the Free?" A. C. Stanbrough. R. S. Inglis. Confering Degrees. Baccalaureate Address, President Thomas Newlin. Quartet, "Come where the Murmuring Brooklets Flow." Benediction, Rev. Nathan H. Clark.

The invocation by Miss Spencer was very appropriate and befitting the occasion. The music was excellent and well received. Messrs. Edwards and Stanbrough were at their best and their orations exceeded the most sanguine expectations of their friends. They reflected credit on themselves, their friends and on Pacific College. After the confering of degrees, President Newlin delivered the Baccalaureate Address which was full of good things and was listened to with the closest attention. It was just such an address as his friends have learned to expect of him when he speaks. Such addresses as well as graduating orations look lame in print compared with hearing them delivered and we make no attempt at reproducing any part of them. The young men received a profusion of flowers and the congratulations of everybody present, were hearty to say the least. On such occasions those who have toiled hard for the success and maintenance of the college receive big wages for their labors and without any regrets for what they may have done in the past, they receive fresh inspiration for better work and greater sacrifices in the future. Pacific College has been making history pretty fast during the past week. More will follow as the years go by.
