NEWBERG GRAPHIC.

ISSUED EVERY FRIDAY MORNING.

EDITORS AND PUBLISHERS:
 E. H. WOODWARD AND OREM C. EMERY.
 FRIDAY, DECEMBER 1, 1903.

Entered as second class matter at the post office at Newberg, Oregon.

The election of Judge Galloway to the position of president of the State Fair gives splendid satisfaction over the state, as will be seen from the notes of commendation in the various newspapers. Judge Galloway will make an active, energetic executive officer. The board could not have done better.

Five thousand five hundred dollars is a pretty good figure for a carpet but there was one at San Francisco a short time ago that was actually worth that money, notwithstanding it had been in use seven years. It was a carpet used in the coiners department of the United States mint and the longer a carpet is used the more it is worth. This carpet which was a thick woolen one was taken up and carefully examined. The precious ashes were carefully gathered up and by an elaborate refining process gold to the amount of $5,500 was recovered. The metal in the finest of dust had deposited in the carpet while the yellow metal was being converted into coin.

The little red rooster that Dr. Lewis had crowing over the Oregon fruit exhibit at the World's Fair is in a fair way to become as famous as Old Abe the American eagle that went through the rebellion. Dr. Lewis sent him by express to his home in eastern Oregon where he arrived safely last week. A placard on the cage bore the following inscription: "My dear express agent: My name is Little Billy Rooster. I am the proudest little rooster that made the horticultural hall ring with my crowing over the victory for Oregon when she beat the world on apples and fruit of all kinds. Please feed me and give me water and deliver me to Uncle Bill Usher, Union, Oregon, and for you I will ever cack-a-doodle-do." He will be kept here until the opening of the Mid-winter fair, when he will be taken to San Francisco to crow over Oregon's exhibits there.

THE WEST SIDE PRESS CLUB.

The second monthly meeting of the newspaper editors of the west side counties was held at McMinnville on Friday and Saturday of last week. As yet the importance of an organization of this kind does not seem to be felt by some of the brethren, so the attendance was light. Matters of importance to the press were discussed, and plans partly formulated for effecting as near as possible a uniform scale of prices for job work and advertising in the west side offices. Visiting editors were kindly treated and shown about town by the McMinnville brethren. A visit to the city waterworks and light plant disclosed the fact that McMinnville has the best and cheapest electric and water plant on the west side, a comparison of prices showing a difference in her favor of nearly twenty-five per cent. This might be cut down some if arc lights were used instead of incandescent, but even then it seemed to be the general opinion that McMinnville was ahead. We were also shown through the college by Pres. Brownson, who by the way, is a very pleasant gentleman, and one has but to meet him to understand why he is held in such esteem by the people of McMinnville. A new observatory has just been completed in which has been placed the fine six-inch telescope presented by the Kinney family last year. Fortunately for the telescope the weather was cloudy so that neither Snyder, of the Transcript nor oneself were able to test its powers of endurance.

Taken altogether, the meeting was both pleasant and profitable, and the organization will undoubtedly result in good to all concerned. Every editor on the west side ought to attend the next regular meeting, which will be held at Hillsboro on December 22nd and 23rd.

WHEN YOU GO TO CHURCH

If you are met at the door by an usher, follow him with caution, say at a distance of about fifteen feet, then drop into the first seat that pleases your fancy. When the usher discovers that you are not at his elbow to take the seat he has found for you, he may look a little confused and glance back at you in a way that indicates that he wonders which one of the back counties you were brought up in, but never mind, he was appointed to serve the congregation and make all as comfortable as possible.

Always take the end of the seat next to the aisle. Your lower extremities may close up the way pretty effectually, but by taking a twist sideways you can make room so ladies can get past you, and their skirts will brush the dust from your shoes and make them look neat.

If you hear the door open, face about promptly and crane your neck to see who the late arrival is. He may be a stranger slipping in rather timidly for the first time and you want to indicate by your "gaze" that you have an interest in him. A couple of hundred faces turned toward a stranger just as he is seated gives him assurance that the congregation is very much interested in his welfare.

When you have seen that all are comfortably seated, take your ease. If you feel a little cramped stretch your limbs and yawn. Plant a foot occasionally against the back of the seat in front of you. It is very restful, and then you will never have a better opportunity to make a mark in the world. Shoe heels were never known to fall on well finished furniture.

In case the sermon doesn't suit your fancy, lean your head against the back of the seat and go to sleep. This may confuse the minister but it will do him good. Next Sunday he will preach a sermon that will please everybody.

When a collection is taken for foreign missionary work, think of the work at home that is suffering for the want of funds, and when the basket is passed under your nose just fix your gaze on some object at the far corner of the room while you hold a firm grip on your wallet.

While the benediction is being pronounced lose no time in putting on your overcoat and adjusting your toilet in general. Then as soon as the congregation is dismissed turn around and plant your foot on the seat while you gaze about to see who is present.

When your curiosity is gratified start for home at once, and leave the strangers who chance to be present to be looked after by the preacher and the hotel runners. That is what they are there for.

As you walk home think how thoughtful some of the people across the river are, when they go to church.

ALASKA LETTER.

There is nothing around us just now more beautiful than the snow capped mountains on the west, north and east, two-thirds of the way down the evergreen forest is mantled in its white robe of snow, and when the beautiful morning sun shines upon them and at the same time glittering upon the smooth waters beneath, we can have some conception of God's unlimited power. We may walk a few minutes along our sandy beach toward the southwest, or go the southeast a mile or more and climb a small mountain nearly 3,000 feet high and take our ease gazing toward Asia, but some water is between us, near 5,000 miles in one direction, which helps to obstruct our view and the world being round and other obstructions in the way we fail to see our neighboring continent but there is beauty in water when it is spread out in such an immense space and we do not doubt the statement of our geographers when it tells us that three-fourths of the earth's surface is water, especially when one lives in Alaska a short time and observes that it rains nearly three-fourths of the time. Fearing that I will climb so high in my progess and not find my way back I will come down to our common day work.

grab two acres at $100 per acre but soon after the man commenced he abandoned it with the same complaint that often attacks mangled-wounded feelings. He pointed to a piece of ground that cost him $200 an acre to get ready for cultivation. According to order, I am not required to enter into what some might call the hardest of the work, but simply to keep the boys at it, but I confess that I can hardly tell sometimes which would be the hardest, to make the boys do it, or do it myself. Of course it would take a little muscular power to accomplish the latter, though I have thought that a little muscular power on the former would be a good antidote, for they are so much like a half dozen white boys working together, ranging from ten to seventeen years of age. There is always some one who is the smartest at ornamental job-breaking to make others laugh and for my life I can't tell what they are talking about, so they have the advantage of me. Sometimes one utters something mixed up with a little of both English and Indian talk which generally makes an uproar of laughter. However in the harangue of business at the end of each day we can see that something has been done.

There is one thing I presume the boys like Mr. Duncan for, and that is, he is changeable in his workings one day at one thing and the next at something else, hauling sand from a bank around the church foundation and placing it upon the streets or sidewalks, in wheelbarrows and hauling away refuse lumber from the saw mill for fire wood on a wooden railway nearly a mile in length. The latter is most exquisite pleasure for the boys because part of the way is down grade where they make good use of time, while up grade is right the reverse. Of course this is not hard labor for me as I am captain and must see that the track is clear which requires my presence on the front end of the car. But most of this wood is taken on a large boat or scow during high tide, which is also a source of pleasure to the boys. I can hardly say that I am captain here, for the boys know as much if not more about this kind of work than I do. When I say, "boys let's go to the boat, and sawmill," while at their grubbing, how quickly the tools are dropped and their heels fly into the air and they are usually there before I am. But for all the ups and downs in this occupation of life there is a consolation in it to know that it is a duty devolving upon some one to do for the bettering of a down trodden race who are well worthy of our serious attention.

Our day school enrolls over one hundred pupils and our teachers begin to find out that they are an intelligent set of children and are just as cunning and sly to make sport during school hours as white children dare to be. The mission house will soon be ready to take in some girls which will necessarily occupy more of our time. A number of new buildings, some of considerable size are being erected as residences in place of those that were burned last winter. All appearances indicate that most of the Indians make good use of the money they make during the canning season. A half dozen of them have taken stock in it and thereby gain some income besides their wages. Mr. Duncan told me that he had just paid out to the people on this island over $16,000, but it costs them something to live here, freight being very high. An Indian that just bought of Mr. Duncan 2,000 brick told me they cost him about $40 per thousand. Notwithstanding all the high prices and ups and downs we were favored the other night with an excellent serenade from the band boys.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE.

Judge McBride was talking over anecdotes of strange court trials, as a result of which innocent men have been convicted and hung or sent to jail. The judge recalled an instance in his own career where a jury convicted and he was about to sentence a man for robbery, against whom the strongest possible case had been made out, when it was found conclusively that the prisoner's story was absolutely true and the deductions drawn by the jury all false. A Frenchman near Oregon City about eight years ago, went to a private house and wanted to buy a cook stove. He wanted it badly, but the woman declined to sell. Four days after the house was robbed, and the stove taken. The woman's suspicions were aroused against the Frenchman. His house was reached, and sure enough, there was the cook stove. He was arrested and tried. The defense was that he had bought the stove from an unknown man who was passing his residence in a wagon. He could not describe the man, didn't remember what the wagon looked like, and together, the story looked very fishy. The prisoner was convicted and the judge was about to pass sentence, when a brave Irishman came forward and said that the Frenchman's story was true, and that he, himself, had sold him the stove. The Irishman was the plaintiff's husband and not desiring to get into hot water "with his old woman," had waited until all the chances of the innocent man's acquittal had gone, before making the confession. Judge McBride re-opened the case, and promptly released the prisoner.

BEWARE OF EASTERN TREES.

Just why fruit growers in the Pacific Northwest can't afford to take papers like the Real Northwest, and in consequence allow themselves to be fooled into paying high prices for pest-infected trees from the east can only be explained on Barnum's well known axiom that people like to be humbugged. We have had some sympathy for farmers in the newer portions of Oregon and Washington who got fooled in buying fruit trees but there are plenty of similar instances nearer home. It is but a few days since a fruit grower who lives within a few miles of Portland made complaint to the State Board of Horticulture that a lot of apple trees which he bought of an eastern nursery were infected with the woolly aphis. The roots of the trees showed that this most pernicious insect had been at work on them for more than a year, and examination of the tops showed that almost no growth had been made in consequence. The Board, of course, ordered the trees destroyed, but there are probably hundreds of others in Oregon and Washington who will receive and plant trees similarly affected without any suspicion of the fact that they are planting with the trees a pest which will not only make their own trees worthless but will also cause their neighbors great trouble and loss.

The attempt was made to secure the passage of a law by the last Oregon legislature which would make it possible to inspect all imported trees before they reached purchasers, but the legislature was more concerned about building up a state militia than in protecting and developing the fruit industry of the state, and refused to pass the law.

Under the circumstances the matter is a very difficult one to deal with. The state boards of horticulture can look after the home nurseries. The importations from the east are hard to reach. Most of the eastern trees are sold to farmers who know very little, if anything, about fruit growing. The very fact that they buy their trees from the east when they could get better trees at lower prices from home nurseries is in itself ample proof of this fact. There is no way of warning them, because, if they take any paper which treats of fruit growing, it is one from the east which is of very little value to them here.—Royal Northwest.

FROM OUR EXCHANGES.

The Hill boys are the leading bear hunters of Tillamook county. A huge cinnamon had been prowling around their premises for some time, and the boys baited the trap at different times with lamb, cow and hog meat, but brain never disturbed them. Finally one of the boys suggested that they kill "Zacharias" an old mule, and try mule meat. So the boys slaughtered "Zacharias" and cut him up into small, but choice bites, and awaited the result. Next morning they found their "Tch-too" sure enough in the trap. His hide now hangs on the kitchen rack, and as the boys have two good mules left, it is likely they will be able to capture two more bears, at least.—Sheridan Sun.

Telephone Register.

Very little wheat is moving out of this city or county. The farmers generally have sold enough to meet current expenses and to pay their harvesting debts and intend to hang on to the balances. This is one of the reasons for the scarcity of money at this time of the year when usually it is plentiful.

ley will change its appearance. Before long the wheat crop of this section will not much more than supply the flour for its people and the demand of its mills.

The Jeffersonian club of Yamhill county will hold a meeting in the Grange hall on December 8th, 7:30 p. m. All the members and all who are desirous of becoming members should be there promptly. There is important business to transact.

Several wagon loads of punne trees have been hauled through the city during the past week by the orchardists who are replenishing their orchards or putting out new orchards. The trees came from Newberg and are the best looking lot of trees that have ever been set out in this vicinity.

The entertainment and social at the M. E. church Tuesday evening for the benefit of the Portland hospital, resulted in gathering quite a large supply of the necessities of life, besides a small amount of cash. Credit is due the children for their interest in this cause. One little girl donated three bushels of potatoes.

Every old soldier in Yamhill county, whether G. A. R. or not is urged to be present at a meeting of veterans to be held at McMinnville, Saturday, Dec. 2, 1903, at 11 o'clock a. m. Don't bring your haversack. Important business. All county papers please copy.

When people talk about there being a better state than Oregon, every potato slyly winks its eye, every best gets red in the face, every onion feels stronger, every cabbage shakes his head, every oat field is shocked, rye strokes its beard, corn sticks up its ear and every foot of land kicks. The horses even denounce the statement with a neigh and printers grab their shooting sticks.—Milton Eagle.

TOLEDO WEEKLY BLADE.

And book containing all the Nasby Letters for One Dollar.

In answer to a general demand from all parts of the United States, the Toledo Blade has published in one volume, cloth bound, all of the "Nasby Letters" ever written by the late D. R. Locke, omitting perhaps a few unimportant letters on local or forgotten topics. Only a few of these letters were ever published in book form. Everybody has read some of them, but who has read all of them? The book contains over 500 large pages, and all the Nasby Letters written during a period of twenty-five years, and also a portrait of D. R. Locke from his last photograph. It would sell for one dollar or more, but will never be placed on sale. One hundred thousand copies are now being printed and bound, and one copy will be sent postpaid by mail free to every person who this winter remits one dollar for the weekly Blade one year. Everybody invited to send for a specimen copy of the weekly Blade, which will give a full description of the book "The Nasby Letters."

The Toledo Weekly Blade is the best and most popular weekly newspaper published in this country. It has the largest circulation of any weekly newspaper, and goes to every State, Territory and nearly every county of the Union. Only one dollar a year, including the above mentioned book free. Send postal to The Blade, Toledo, Ohio, for a free specimen copy of the paper. Send the addresses of your friends also.
