

Entered as second class matter at the post office at Newberg, Oregon.

Newberg wants telephone connection with the outside world and wants it bad.

The Japs seem to be pretty successful in their efforts to Shanghai their enemies.

Newberg has communication with the outside world both by river and rail. Put this in your hat.

That "everlasting whip cord" is out of sight when compared to the everlasting tariff bill of the present congress.

Let us hear from the Portland company that was to give us telephone communication with Portland by way of McMinnville.

It is a little early to criticize the salary system for county officers. Give the system a fair trial gentlemen before offering your criticisms.

You have heard of Yamhill. Well Newberg is in Yamhill and one of the liveliest towns in the county in spite of tariff reform for revenue only times.

Sensible girls will give the cold shoulder to the young man who scorns to carry in wood for his mother but thinks it just the thing to carry about with him a saw log for a walking stick.

That snake bite seems to have gone to the Transcript man's head. It is fortunate for Snyder's friends that it is not far across the country to Salem where they give heroic treatment.

A young man back east hung himself because some people found fault with him. If the young man had been in the newspaper business his obituary would have appeared at a much earlier date.

JAPAN'S declaration of war was hardly necessary. After three or four of China's war ships had been sunk and several thousand pig tails butchered, the whole world knew the Japs intended to hurt somebody.

The Oregon Democrat laid down and died last week. Sorry to hear it as Flagg is a good fellow and deserves success in his business. He says he is convinced that no democratic paper can succeed in Marion county.

A CHICAGO paper says: It is estimated that there are 750,000 bicyclists in the United States, and people who have to cross Michigan avenue, south of 35th street, about seven o'clock in the evening, are willing to make affidavit that 725,000 of them live in Chicago.

SECRETARY MARGENT of the State Horticultural Society will receive a colony of lady-birds from California the last of this month. The lady-birds are beneficial insects which prey on the San Jose scale and other pestiferous insects and they are to be introduced here in order that they may spread over the state.

The Oregon Naturalist Publishing Co., of Oregon City, will in a few days, issue a twelve page monthly paper to be known as the Oregon Naturalist. It will be devoted principally to natural history, and a considerable part of its space will be devoted to the department of ornithology. The paper will be fully illustrated.

J. H. LAMBERT has originated a new cherry on his fruit farm at Milwaukee which promises to be a very valuable addition to our long list of profitable cherries. Mr. Lambert has refused to sell any clons from the tree but has now presented the entire stock to the Oregon State Horticultural Society and the variety will be propagated and sold for the benefit of the society.

THE Record of Silverton gives a vigorous kick because people will still insist on referring to the Woodburn, Springfield branch of the S. P. as "the narrow gauge." The same here brother. Newberg bore the burden of the stigma of being situated on "the narrow gauge" with christian fortitude for several years. Will the public be considerate of our feelings and let up on this "narrow gauge" business.

CHRONIC cases the doctors dread most. The panic we had last year has become chronic and the doctors over at Washington can't agree on the necessary treatment of the case. Some want to give sugar coated pills while others recommend an iron tonic. A very large number of people are of the opinion that all the patient needs is a good letting alone on the part of the doctors.

While fruit canneries are very useful in their proper place they have their limitations. There seems to be an impression that all that is needed to make a success of a cannery is a plentiful supply of fruit. This is a very serious mistake, but not as bad as the mistake of putting up a cannery where the supply of fruit is not sufficient. There are several canneries in Oregon that are doing very little business this year. It is probable that some of these could be operated with profit if parties could be found who are willing to take chances on the large amount of money which is required.—Rural Northwest.

THERE is a very noticeable tendency of late, even among some well meaning people, to criticize our government in a way that tends to cause the young and rising generation to develop without that feeling of patriotism and devotion to country which should prevail in the breast of every citizen. Law makers are open to criticism and should be called to account for their acts, but to speak sneeringly of our government is quite another thing. In this day of commotion when there are isms without number it will be well for every good citizen to ponder well before speaking rashly respecting the law and in the meantime study the words of Lincoln when he said: "Let reverence of the law be breathed by every mother to the lisping babe that rattles on her lap; let it be taught in the schools, seminaries and colleges; let it be written in primers, spelling books and almanacs; let it be preached from pulpits and proclaimed in legislative halls and enforced in courts of justice; in short, let it become the political religion of the nation."

KANSAS can get a little consolation now by saying to some of the adjoining states that have been accustomed to showing up the hot v i ds of Kansas, "you're another one." The Iowa Falls Sentinel says: Last Thursday, July 25, was the hottest day "in the memory of the oldest inhabitant," and not only here but all over the state the record of high temperature seems to have been broken. A strong, hot wind from the south prevailed all day and did incalculable damage to corn and other late crops. It probably was of the same character as the hot winds of Kansas and Nebraska, of which we have heard so much. The thermometer indicated 106 in the shade about the middle of the afternoon.

A BUSINESS man said the other day that there would soon be room in Newberg for a daily paper. So there will be. There will also be room for a wholesale dry goods house, and one will be about as profitable as the other. When a town gets a reputation for inaugurating enterprises that ordinary business sense won't justify it will soon be compared to the boy who got too big for his breeches, and this youngster's reputation never was a very enviable one.

J. L. CARTER of Union county ought to go off and die and thus save the male portion of Oregon from further humiliation. Carter was beaten in the race for school superintendent by Miss Nellie M. Stevens but he continues to whine and says he will contest the election on the ground of sex in the supreme court. If he had any sand in his gizzard he would not accept the office now if offered to him after being defeated by a woman in a fair race. Go off Carter and soak your head.

The legislature would do well to follow Iowa by passing a law empowering the courts to tax the cost in criminal cases against the prosecuting witness in case he fails to appear to prosecute after being informed. In many cases information is filed for the mere purpose of spite or blackmail and the prosecuting witness after having accomplished his purpose drops out and the county left to pay the costs.

AFTER a thirty days' rest the LaFayette Ledger is again in the field of Yamhill journalism with Dupuy and Punnay as editors and publishers. The boys are exhibiting good business sense by publishing a paper such as the these times will justify. Subscribers will never complain if a paper is enlarged but they will kick if the size is reduced. Success to the Ledger.

COL. DICK THOMPSON of Indiana who is now 85 years old, is preparing to give to the world his personal recollections of sixteen Presidents which he has written in the past few years. The favored few who have looked over the manuscript among whom is ex-President Harrison, pronounce it one of the most remarkable productions of the age.

LET Uncle Sam stop shipping gold out of the country and make up a few cargoes of anarchists and general disturbers of the peace and ship them back to their breeding grounds.

WHAT ever else may be said of the Senators, it must be admitted that they are true to their Trusts.

THE RED FEZ APPEARS.
Midway Pleasance Attractions on the Streets of Portland.

A group of three persons dressed in a sort of medley costume, in Turkish, Greek and Algerian garments were confused, attracted some attention for a few minutes at the corner of Third and Alder streets, yesterday afternoon. They were swarthy, wild-eyed fellows, armed with sword and revolver, and it was a question whether they were Turkish bashaws, Greek brigands, Algerian pirates, or curios from the Midway Pleasance. Inquiry elicited the information that two of them were artists in the sword combat line, and the other was the manager of a troupe of Moorish dancers.

Portland makes no claim to being a cosmopolitan city, but among those who passed and threw an inquisitive glance at these strangers during the few minutes they stood on the corner were representatives of all four quarters of the earth. Europe was represented by Frenchmen, Germans, Italians, Britishers, Scandinavians. Africa by a natty dressed negro and three colored ladies, though no one could swear they were born in the dark continent. From Asia there were dozens of Chinese, and several Japanese, male and female. A genuine American, in the shape of a blanketed, moccasin Indian sat on the curb half a block away, enchanted with the gold lace, red fez caps, and general get up of the strangers, but he did not offer to make a closer inspection. There were several persons in the crowd who passed who had lived in Australia, but there was only a New Zealander, or wild man from Borneo, visible.—Oregonian.

Card of Thanks.
We wish to extend to our many friends, our sincere thanks, for the valuable assistance given, and sympathy shown in this our bereavement.

FROM OUR EXCHANGES.
Yamhill County Reporter.
A. M. Sanders is assisting John Knight of Hillsboro, in the insurance business. Mr. K. has worked up a big trade in this line.

The August apportionment of the state school fund has just been made. It gives Yamhill county $4,376.97, to be divided on a school population of 5,031.

J. J. Henderson, as assignee, has sold 200 acres of the Sanders estate to a Mr. Marcus of Iowa, for $35 per acre. Mr. Marcus will occupy the place as soon as he can move out. Three years ago this land would have brought $50 per acre. It will reach that value again some day.

The Yamhill bridge at this place is now completed, and Mr. Henderson, the superintendent of the work, says it is strong enough to bear anything that travels the road. 200,000 feet of lumber, all sound, was put in at a cost of $7.50 per thousand. The water span, which has been in about sixteen years, was found to be generally sound.

The receipts of fees by the county officers for July are less than one-half their monthly salary. But July was an unusually dull month. The new fee system will operate to throw more litigation into the courts, and the absence of provision of mileage to sheriffs within their own counties will give constables more to do. Under the new law clerks are required to exact $5 from plaintiffs in all suits, and $3 for filing answer, demurrer or motion on the part of any defendant, and an additional sum from the plaintiff if $12 before any trial shall be had, unless referred to a referee or upon demurrer. The exactions are in lieu of fees such parties have heretofore been required to pay said officials in such matters, and are in lieu of the old trial fee, and they are paid into the county treasury. This law will save to the county in the clerk's office alone, judging from past years, nearly three thousand dollars. This is a republican stroke of economy that the populists ought heartily to endorse.

Dayton Herald.
About 4 o'clock last Saturday morning S. A. Roberts discovered that his mill, what is known as the Jacquot saw mill, was on fire. The fire had got such head-way that it was impossible to extinguish it. The building was entirely consumed. About 5,000 feet of rough lumber was burned. There was about 5,000 feet more of lumber on the yard. It is not known how the fire started, unless it caught by sparks from the furnace. There was no insurance.

Old Times.
Fourteen years ago when we landed at Dayton that little city was a lively point, as the Narrow Gauge railroad from Sheridan down the valley ended there and it was no uncommon thing to see three or four steamboats tied up near the bridge at one time, receiving freight and unloading supplies for the railroad. The Salem was one of the number and this boat has been on the run up the Willamette with more or less regularity ever since that time. As business for river craft has been rather light for some time the Salem has been anchored in the river at Portland awaiting the fall shipping. One day last week she sprang a leak and sunk to the bottom. The boat is pretty well done up with age and wear and tear but the owner claims he will have her raised and repaired again. The Orient, the Occident and the old Bonanza, steamers that were in the swim ten to fifteen years ago are off the run and the sound of their familiar whistles echoes no more along the valley of the Willamette. Newer craft now ply on the waters of the upper river while the old timers are left to the mercies of the elements while tied up along the river below Portland.

Captain Jerome who was on the upper Willamette run for thirty-five years or more, was captain on the Orient from the time she made her first appearance on the river until death called him off, and he was well known by everybody along the river from Dayton to Portland. He was quick tempered and more than one warehouseman remembers the ejaculations that often fell from his lips when things did not go to his liking. Jerome was pleasant and even tempered however in the cabin and his absence from the river saddened many hearts. Before the railroad came along all travel from Chehalum valley was by the river and people were more familiar with steamers and steamboat men than of later years. Everybody could distinguish the whistle of the old Orient from that of every other steamer, as the same "toot, toot, toot," without any change in the rising or falling inflections, echoed and re-echoed over the hills day in and day out the year round, up the river one day and down the next day. These were the days before the petty thief had made his appearance in these parts and it was no uncommon thing, in fact it was an every day occurrence, to see a dressed hog or quarter of beef thrown off on the bank where it would be left for hours without any fear of its being stolen. Reference is sometimes made to the "snap" of eastern people who come in and there are those who have evidence that the term is a proper one, as loose property that has been left laying around has been snapped up in rather an unceremonious way and chickens have learned that it is policy to roost high in order to save their necks. So the world goes. The old time steamers are giving way to newer and faster means of travel, and the old settler with his honest, free and easy habits is gradually losing his grip while the smart-elle is encroaching on his territory and confounding the old timer in his views that new blood, new fangled notions and improvements don't always improve.

The Duty on Prunes.
The New York commission house of Henry Nordlinger & Co., is endeavoring to convince the prune growers of this coast that they will not be hurt by the reduction which may be made in the duty upon prunes. Their argument, in brief, is that when prunes can be sold at retail for five cents per pound this country will consume about 80,000,000 pounds annually; that before the tariff on prunes was advanced from one cent per pound to two cents per pound, consumers in the United States were enabled to buy Turkish prunes at five cents per pound; that the raising of the tariff to two cents per pound in 1890 has caused a falling off in consumption to about 65,000,000 pounds annually; that our American prunes are so superior in quality that consumers willingly pay a much higher price for them than for any foreign prunes, ergo the laboring man can not afford to buy them. Nothing is said as to the bad effects the reduction of imports had upon the trade of commission houses engaged in the importing business.

Under the encouragement afforded by a protective duty of two cents per pound the fruit growers of the Pacific coast have planted out a very large area of prunes and if this protection remains they will continue to plant until the production of prunes in the United States reaches and temporarily passes the profitable limit. The fruit growers of the Pacific coast will soon be selling prunes at as low a price as it is possible to produce them in this country. Pacific coast prunes should be given as fair a chance to supply the eastern portions of the United States as goods manufactured in the east have on this coast. If it were not for the tariff the greater part of the goods which this section now buys from the east would be imported from foreign countries because the east would not be able to make and lay them down here so cheaply as foreign countries could then do.

It is Messrs. Nordlinger & Co., can assure the prune growers of this coast prices higher than laboring men can afford to pay for all the prunes we are likely to grow, then we need not worry about the tariff. If, however, there should happen to be a large crop of prunes on the coast in 1895 it would not be strange if the crop should then reach 80,000,000 pounds and a crop of 150,000,000 pounds in one year will soon be realized. The time is, therefore, almost here when the prune growers of the Pacific coast will need the patronage of the laboring man as well as of the wealthy classes. It is probable that the great mass of the people will give the preference to Pacific coast prunes, but it is not to be expected that they will pay very much more for them than for foreign prunes. With the present duty of two cents our prunes are steadily supplanting the foreign article and at the same time the closing of the markets for foreign prunes, together with other causes, has caused a great reduction in the price of prunes in France and other prune growing countries of Europe. The cost of labor is much less in France and in Serbia, Bulgaria and Bosnia than in the United States. The cost of transporting the prunes from the prune producing districts of either one of the countries mentioned to New York does not probably reach one half the charges for taking prunes from the Pacific coast to New York. If the tariff were to be entirely removed the prune growers of Europe would be positively protected to the extent of half a cent a pound in the greater part of the United States, as against the prune growers of the United States. It is very certain that if there were no tariff on prunes the larger portion of the prunes used in the United States would be imported and that a great share of the prune trees growing on this coast would be dug up.—Rural Northwest.

A Dog With a Romance.
Did you ever notice that big stag hound as he comes trotting into town with his master Arthur L. Watson, who lives on Chehalum mountain? Will thereby hang a tale, and one a little out of the ordinary for an Oregon dog to carry. But the fact is this is not a common Oregon dog, he is far fetched. Mr. Watson before coming to Oregon lived near the scene of the Custer massacre and he says Custer and his men had some stag hounds that were left to care for themselves after the wiping out of the army by the blood thirsty Indians and they scattered over the country and this dog is a descendant from that band of hounds. He is a big wiry looking fellow and evidently could make way with a small sized Indian for breakfast. Tip your hat to him the next time you meet him on account of his blue blood.

Don't, remarks an exchange, try to pull a man down who is making his way honestly in the world, even though he be progressing faster than yourself. Jealousy that does prompt a man to hate persons who are more fortunate is of the green-eyed sort and no mistake. But there is plenty of it in every community, and it can't be hidden out of sight either. It is a veritable "devil thorn."
