Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

CONSUMPTION

THE MAN WITH A HOE

"Kill Him, but Tomorrow There Will Be Two of Them."

An incident of the cattle boom of fifteen years ago that is illustrative of the spirit of the times was the $5,000 banquet at Dallas, Texas, at which 500 of the cattle barons were entertained. Everything was of the best, says the Butte Miner. The champagne was from the vine-clad hills of France, the fruit from the valleys of California. The cattle owners lauded and complimented each other, orated about their successes and sneered at the Legislature and the National Land Commission. Especially did the newspapers, which had criticized their high-handed usurpation of the lands needed for agriculture, come in for criticism, and at last the only newspaper man present was called on for a speech in reply. A Governor of the Lone Star State, who had once said that the State did not want immigration, was toastmaster and he prefaced his introduction of the journalist with some slighting remarks regarding the press. Angry at the light in which he had been placed the newspaper man replied:

"Gentlemen: You may sneer at the settler whom you call a 'Nestor' for my consideration of myself safe from all injury at his hands, but let me tell you, you are not. A man with a hoe has poked his head over your barbed wire fences. You may kill him, but to-morrow there will be two of them, and next day four or eight. Land that will produce $20 worth of wheat cannot be kept for the pasturage of a $5 cow. In a few years the man with a hoe will have you on the run."

The gentleman laughed and considered it a fair hit, but they did not think the speaker meant it or that he told the truth. But he did, and his prophecy came true. No other such banquet was ever held. The "man with a hoe" carried a pair of slippers in his pocket and with them he cut the strands of fence with which the great cattle ranges were inclosed. The cowboys could not keep him out. All over the great ranges of the far West, where, senny-like, the herders rode through long days and nights, are now farms, homes and villages.

One of the stories regarding the reckless extravagance of the cattle owners is that told by Col. John Brittan, a Texas capitalist and officeholder in the State of Kansas, and was gazing on the wonders of a typical cattle town, where the cowboy was getting rid of his year's earnings in a single night and having what he designated as a royal time. Two gentlemen had returned from New York, where they had been living off the fat of the land and leading themselves down with brie-a-brac and good whiskey.

"Jim," said John, "that's mighty fine watch you have there."

"Yes," replied the other. "I got the ticker at one of the biggest stores in New York. It cost me a lot of money."

"I've got a finer one," said John calmly pulling an invalid chronometer from his pocket.

"I guess not. What did it cost?"

"Paid $325 for her, spot cash. What did yours cost?"

"Cost me $775," said the other gracefully, as he put the timepiece back in his pocket.

His friend was much chagrined at being beaten at his own particular game of display, and stood holding the now despised watch in his hand, looking it over and thinking. Braising up, he finally drawled: "Well, there ain't much difference between 'em. I'll bet you a dozen steers that I can throw mine further than you can yours."

Everybody laughed and looked at Jim. He took in the situation and replied: "I'll just go you on one that."

They went into the street, followed by the crowd, and taking aim down the street, sent the handsome timepieces spinning, to be smashed into worthlessness on the road. Jim won and went back to the Alamo saloon and set up the drinks. "A few months ago," said Brittan, "I saw them again in Athens. They were so poor that each wore a long-winding Waterbury and hung on to it with both hands for fear it might fall on the floor."

BLUFFED OUT OF A BIG ROLL

Bold Plan of a Robber in Denver to Raise the Wind.

Mr. Moffat is the Denver banker who was robbed of $21,000 in his private office one day at noon. The robber held a revolver on the banker and a bottle of nitroglycerin in the other. He requested Mr. Moffat to write a check for $21,000 under penalty of being shot and of having his bank building wrecked by the explosion in the bottle. Mr. Moffat is reputed to be worth as many millions as the number of thousands demanded by the robber. He wrote the check. The robber said he would have to trouble Mr. Moffat to go with him into the paying teller's cage and produce the cash; he would take $20,000 in large bills and $1,000 in gold.

"If you say one word, or indicate by a look or motion that anything is wrong, I will shoot you and then blow up the bank." Saying which the robber threw a light overcoat over his arm concealing the revolver he held in his hand, accompanied the bank president into the teller's cage, received the money and returned with Mr. Moffat to the private office. He then repeated his threat to kill the banker and blow up the building if an alarm should be given before he (the robber) was safely outside the bank. He made his escape and has not been captured. The robber's overcoat, revolver and bottle were found in a doorway near the bank building. The revolver was loaded, but a chemical analysis of the contents of the bottle revealed the fact that the fluid was not nitroglycerin but sweet oil.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Which End?

Perry Patette (in the road)—"Why don't you go in? Be dog's all right. Don't you see him wagging his tail?" Waggoner Watson (at the gate)—"Yes, an' he's growlin' at the same time. I don't know which end to believe."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Miss Bellefield—Do you like Mr. Van Braam, Nellie? Miss Bloomfield (who is addicted to slang)—Yes, I like him I don't think. Miss Bellefield—That is the great trouble with you, Nellie. You should cultivate a habit of thought.—Pittsburg Chronicle.

CAPT. BENSON'S STATEMENT

A REMARKABLE AND INTERESTING CAREER.

A Member of the First Kentucky Battery Who Was in Twenty-Seven Hard Fought Battles.

From the Capital Journal, Salem, Oregon.

Salem, Or., can boast of no better known private citizen than Captain William Benson. To the old residents, as well as to the school children, his figure is as familiar as that of Mt. Hood or the state capital.

Captain Benson, of the First Kentucky battery, detached from the 11th Illinois infantry, is now seventy-four years old, and has taken part in twenty-seven hard-fought battles, besides a great many interesting skirmishes. He is pensioned for injury in the breast, from concussion of a shell, and for a wound in the right shoulder, caused by leaping from a car while being taken as a prisoner from Andersonville to Fine Forest. For the past twenty years he has suffered almost continually from malaria and shortness of breath, and has been afflicted with rheumatism in the legs and shoulders to such an extent that he had not seen a well day in all that time. He was also afflicted with constipation and piles. Eighteen years ago Mr. Benson removed from a prisoner from Andersonville to Fine Forest. For the past twenty years he has suffered almost continually from malaria and shortness of breath, and has been afflicted with rheumatism in the legs and shoulders to such an extent that he had not seen a well day in all that time.
