

NEWBERG GRAPHIC.

ISSUED EVERY FRIDAY MORNING.

E. H. WOODWARD, EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 16, 1896.

Entered as second-class matter at the postoffice at Newberg, Oregon.

The commissioners of Clackamas county are wrestling with the question of the proposed purchase of a county poor farm.

The oat crop was rather short this year and consequently the price is already almost double what it was at any time last year.

The McMinnville Bee was evidently considered a drone by the faithful among the free silver brethren, for it was allowed to die for want of proper nourishment.

This has been an unusually good corn year for the Willamette valley, as the many patches of really good corn here and there will show, yet when compared with a corn growing country Oregon is not in the race.

Wheat is still going up in price while silver continues to decline. Strange, isn't it, after all these fine spun theories we have been hearing in this campaign, about the rise and fall of silver regulating the price of wheat?

This extremely fine October weather is being greatly enjoyed by the people generally, except farmers who want rain to make the ground plow, and river men who want more water for safe steamboating.

The Washington Poultry Journal suggests that the poultryman ought to go in for the free coinage of eggs. The American hen produces $135,000,000 worth of eggs each year, and yet she doesn't say a word about the crime of '73 but like McDuff, just lays on.

On Thursday last week the Bee of McMinnville passed over the river, to the tune of the following refrain.

"With this issue the Bee suspends publication. The causes for doing so are the lack of support that the paper should receive from the party whose principles it has advocated, and from treachery on the part of some men in the bimetallic party who should have shown the paper favors, but instead have helped to down it. Hence, we have to discontinue.

An exchange draws a parallel between a man and a dog in the following words, which incline to favor the latter: "Help a dog out of a ditch and no matter what sort of a dog he is—a town dog, or country dog, educated or illiterate, aristocratic or plebeian, he will wag his tail into paralysis and exhaust every muscle trying to tell that every drop of blood in his veins is at your service. Help a man out of a ditch and what follows will depend very much on his breed."

The Rams Horn drops the following words of encouragement to poor boys who may be envious of the rich man's son:

Between a rich man's son and a poor man's boy, it is no doubt true that angels can often see that the latter has the most to help him to get the best out of this life. In many ways the rich man's son is as helpless as an infant in swaddling clothes. The poor man's boy is obliged to work, and by so doing finds a sweetness in brown bread that the rich man's son cannot find in pound cake. He finds a joy in rest to which the other is a stranger in his idleness. He has every incentive to improve his time, while the other has every temptation to waste his. He has hopes, aims and ambitions which the other knows nothing about, and in hundreds of ways can find a truer satisfaction in living than his more favored brother. Having battles to fight that the other has not, he may also win victories that are sweeter.

Chauncey Depew said in a speech recently:

In the delirium of the French Revolution demagogues said, "France is great enough, intelligent enough, strong enough, to have a currency and a financial system of her own." She issued 40,000,000,000 of a paper currency called assignats and mandates; she passed laws making it a penal offense for the farmer not to sell the produce of his field and his livestock for this money at its face value, and for the merchant not to sell his goods for this money at its face value; she made it a penal offense for the laborer not to accept this money for his work at its face value, and for the manufacturer not to accept this money at its face value for the product of his factory. The result was that all business was suspended, all industries were stopped, all labor ceased to have employment, and starvation and misery stalked abroad over the land. And then in the mighty awakening from this delirium of debased currency, this more than 40,000,000,000 was swept into the waste basket, and France, torn, poverty-stricken and bleeding, began her national and her individual life again with bare hands.

Before the close of the Revolutionary War it took $5,000 of Continental currency to buy a pair of boots. Our forefathers could drive Great Britain out of the thirteen colonies, but they could not make the paper dollar which was irredeemable worth more than the pulp of which it was composed.

FIRST VOTES.

Two and a half million young Americans will be entitled, a fortnight hence for the first time to take part in the choice of a President of the United States. Tens of thousands of the number are "Companion boys," to whom we can speak almost as to sons.

The Companion can give them no specific advice: Vote for Bryan, vote for McKinley, vote for either of the other candidates who are before the people. Counsel of that sort from a publication which is not even a political and much less a partisan paper, would be resented justly, as an impertinence; but without infringing the laws of propriety we may be permitted to speak a serious word to first voters.

As there is nothing which gives a man a more authentic stamp of nobility than the power to rule himself, so there is no field which gives a grander scope for noble impulses and noble conduct than politics—the government of others. Mean men have invaded the field but that is all the more reason why good men should rally to wrest back the power and influence now in the hands of usurpers.

Therefore you are not only right to be in politics,—particularly in this year, when so much is at stake,—but you fail in your duty if you are not interested in the most dramatic canvass the country has ever known, and the most momentous one since that great struggle which preceded the Civil War.

Probably there are very few of the voters of the country who have not made up their minds as to how their vote shall be cast. Canvassing and "education" have been so active that there can be not many doubtful voters left anywhere. Yet there is time for a serious final consideration of the question. Have I decided right? For a re-examination of the question two matters are chiefly to be studied.

One issue has predominated in the canvass,—the free coinage of silver. It will, and it should control the action of all who regard it as the vital issue. If this were to be the last election—instead of only the next one—every man would be able to resolve instantly how he should vote, having first made sure whether free coinage would be desirable or undesirable.

Important as the issue is, there is something else for first voters to consider. This is the time when, speaking generally, a man's political relations are fixed for life. Men do not transfer their allegiance from one party to another, but most of them adhere to that party which receives their first vote. Do we not see, in this very canvass, men on both sides proposing to support candidates whose position on the silver question they abhor, because they cannot bring themselves to break away from the party which they joined before the silver issue was raised?

Therefore, while one's opinions on this all-absorbing question must be almost decisive, it is not wise to forget that the coming election will probably decide that question finally, and that other issues, now driven out of sight for the time being, will reappear. One does not wish to be left in a party with whose general purposes he has no sympathy, when the one issue that led him to join it has been taken out of politics. Having due regard to the right and wrong of the great issue of the day, to which of the parties do you wish to attach yourself? In which of them, by its history, by its past and present leadership and membership, by its fidelity to principle, in power or out of power, do you find your aspirations for good government most nearly realized?

The decision of the first voter is always momentous. It is more than ever so this year. It should be made up on conscience, and with a solemn purpose to do that which is most conformable to human progress, to honesty, and to the rights of all our countrymen.—Youth's Companion.

Miss Helen Keller, the deaf, dumb and blind girl of which considerable has been written, has recently passed a successful examination and has entered the women's annex of Harvard College. Here is a worthy example of the possibilities of human effort, when properly concentrated and well directed, such as has rarely if ever been seen. Miss Keller's future will be watched with interest.

A Chance to Make Money.

I have berries, grapes and peaches, a year old, fresh as when picked. I use the California Cold process, do not heat or seal the fruit, just put it up cold, keeps perfectly fresh, and costs almost nothing; can put up a bushel in ten minutes. Last week I sold directions to over 120 families; anyone will pay a dollar for directions, when they see the beautiful samples of fruit. As there are many people poor like myself, I consider it my duty to give my experience to such, and feel confident any one can make one or two hundred dollars round home in a few days. I will mail sample of fruit and complete directions, to any of your readers, for eighteen two-cent stamps, which is only the actual cost of the samples, postage, etc., to me.

A hacking cough is not only annoying to others, but is dangerous to the person who has it. One Minute Cough Cure will quickly put an end to it. A. T. Hill.

He—"Why do they call these the melancholy days?"

He—"Because they are the days when just as you have finished paying up your debts for your summer vacation, you remember that you have got to begin saving up for the holidays."

Truth.

If your children are subject to croup watch for the first symptom of the disease—hoarseness. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is given as soon as the child becomes hoarse it will prevent the attack. Even after the croupy cough has appeared the attack can always be prevented by giving this remedy. It is also invaluable for colds and whooping cough. For sale by A. T. Hill, druggist.

For the Kidneys.

While conducting a series of tests with a one-hundred ton testing machine, at the Yorkshire College, in England, which included the testing of a steel wire rope, Professor Goodman stated that such ropes were not a modern invention, and that he had recently seen a bronze wire rope one half inch in diameter, and from twenty to thirty feet long, which had been found buried in the ruins of Pompeii, and which must have been at least 1,900 years old.

A Lie Told.

Consumption and bronchitis are not by any means the same, although it is hard to distinguish one from the other. Bronchitis is an inflammation of the lining of the wind tubes or air vessels of the lungs, causing soreness of the same, cough, sore throat, hoarseness, difficulty of breathing, spitting of matter and sometimes blood. Thousands die annually with this dread disease. Wilbur's Cough Cure will cure. Price 50 cents. For sale by all Druggists.

Kansas Heard From.

Mrs. J. B. Mount received a letter a few days ago from a sister who lives at Topeka, Kansas, in which she speaks of the state encampment of the G. A. R. which had just been held in that city. She says:

"Topeka never had such a big time or such a perfect week—everything a success. We had a lot of the United States troops here from Fort Riley and Fort Leavenworth, so we got quite accustomed to 'army life.' The city never looked finer. Nearly every house in town was covered with flags, lanterns and pictures of McKinley. I don't think there are any Bryan folks in town. If there are, they were ashamed to hang out his picture. There were 15,000 veterans camped at the fair grounds and nearly every man was for McKinley."

Oil of Gladness

Is a pleasant, palatable preparation, entirely free from all oily taste, and may be administered internally or applied externally. It will remove all pain that "human flesh is heir to." If properly applied, and might be rightly termed "a panacea for all ills." Price 50 cents. For sale by all Druggists.

County commissioner Amos Nelson and deputy county surveyor Branson were down at Springbrook Thursday, endeavoring to cast a contention between Wm. Thomas and C. E. Hoskins with reference to some two or three hundred feet of county road.

The many different skin diseases such as ring worm, tetter, salt rheum, erysipelas, eczema, itching or an eruption of pimples, pustules, blotches, chaps or cracking open of the skin, scrofula, are directly the cause of impure blood. Wilbur's Blood Purifier is acknowledged to be the best medicine known for any of these unsightly complaints. Price $1.00 per bottle. For sale by all Druggists.
