The boys say there is a strong probability of landlord Hendershot of the Newberg Hotel being nominated by the three party for representative. Billy is a jolly good fellow and a good campaigner, consequently if they give this end of the county a place on the representative ticket he will probably be the man.

Shep, of Little Rock, Ark: "I was suffering from a severe cold, when I read of the cure that had been effected by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. "The Temple of Fame," an entertainment given by the Epworth League at Armory hall on Tuesday night was well attended and the program was so well rendered, that, in response to a general invitation it will be repeated on this Friday, evening at the same place. The price of admission will be only 10 cents. Mrs. Bennett plays the part of queen with excellent taste and many of the other participants do credit to the parts they take. It is an entertainment well worth the price of admission.
The hooping of the grouse as they perch on the limbs high up in the big fir trees are seldom heard in these parts any more. A few years ago the first warm days of spring with bright sunshine called forth these game birds with their hooping, which was music to the ears of all lovers of nature. Some say the China rooster is too game for the grouse in a cock fight and the grouse has given way to his imported enemy and taken to the mountains. One thing is certain, and that is the China rooster is a better fighter than the Chinese soldier, else the Japs would never have had the walk away from him in the recent war with China. He has no hesitancy in engaging in a fight for supremacy with a winged foe he meets and he is easily the cock of the walk among the birds in Oregon forests.

In the evening the pastor spoke on the theme "Genesis and Geology."
Many earnest students of natural science have turned away from the study of Genesis feeling that Moses has not been scientific in his treatment of questions belonging to natural science. I submit however that Moses is scientific in his cosmogony.
Let us place ourselves at his standpoint. We are to write the history of the world for an inland, pastoral people not far advanced in knowledge. We will suppose the nebular hypothesis to be true and that evolution and geology are correct and they have utterly ignored the world after certain creative acts as beginnings had been wrought. True science admits as much. The world evolution has had many terrors for cosmologists and they have utterly ignored the world after certain creative acts as beginnings had been wrought. True science admits as much. The world evolution has had many terrors for cosmologists and they have utterly ignored the world after certain creative acts as beginnings had been wrought. True science admits as much.

At the Friends church Sabbath morning the pastor spoke on "The Curse of Uselessness."
Uselessness is most deplorable; a cast of wreck—broken tree—a jagged red light. But the uselessness is more deplorable of all. There are so many, too, in every community. The cause of it is general selfishness and jealousy. We are so selfish of our own interests and pleased that we stay by our own fire-side while genuine and patriotic men are cheerfully lending a hand. So we absent ourselves from community meetings held in the interests of united local action on some worthy subject, in the interest of municipal reform, public works, or education, because it is more comfortable to stay at home, or because we look at the matter with green-eyed jealousy, imagining that some one is trying to "manage affairs." In the times of the judges when Deborah was judge over Israel, they were greatly harassed by Jabin, King of Canaan—Barak called Barak to summon the men of Zebulun and Naphtali and go down to battle against Jabin. But there was one little village in the edge of Zebulun that did not send any men to the army. The men of Israel went against the Canaanites, and the Lord gave them a great victory. In their songs of praise and rejoicing Barak sang, "But course ye utterly the inhabitants thereof, because they came not up to help the Lord, to the help of the Lord against the mighty." How bitter is the curse of uselessness. Not because the people of Mexico had done some great wickedness which they deserved, but because they were useless in the cause of Israel and the Lord. The curse of uselessness is bitter to all. It is the curse of more useless, and more selfish, more jealous to the one who allows himself to be useless, and the curse of the universe falls on him. "From him that hath not even that which he hath shall be taken away." But great are the blessings of usefulness—the becoming more useful, more generous, the gaining of all that goes to make up the noble character. The best development of all our God-given powers.

Sam Laughlin, one of the Yamhill boys earliest in the Klondike country, has been heard from after a long silence. He is now in Circle City, and had a great experience getting there. His party supposed they could make the journey in a week, but captured in their boat, got lost and were cared for by the Indians. Sam has an interest in a claim on Bonanza creek. It takes a long time to get a letter that he may be a millionaire by this time.
Tuesday afternoon about five o'clock, Bettie, the five-year-old daughter of G. V. Querner of Amity, narrowly escaping burning to death. While she was standing near the fire place her clothes caught fire. Her mother, who was at work in the room, ran to her assistance, and attempted to tear the clothes off her, her hands being badly burned in the attempt. She then carried the child out into the yard, where a neighbor, Grant Smith, came to her assistance, wrapping his coat about the child, thereby extinguishing the flames. The child is badly burned, but it is thought that she will recover.

In their songs of praise and rejoicing Barak sang, "But course ye utterly the inhabitants thereof, because they came not up to help the Lord, to the help of the Lord against the mighty." How bitter is the curse of uselessness. Not because the people of Mexico had done some great wickedness which they deserved, but because they were useless in the cause of Israel and the Lord. The curse of uselessness is bitter to all. It is the curse of more useless, and more selfish, more jealous to the one who allows himself to be useless, and the curse of the universe falls on him. "From him that hath not even that which he hath shall be taken away." But great are the blessings of usefulness—the becoming more useful, more generous, the gaining of all that goes to make up the noble character. The best development of all our God-given powers.

Sam Laughlin, one of the Yamhill boys earliest in the Klondike country, has been heard from after a long silence. He is now in Circle City, and had a great experience getting there. His party supposed they could make the journey in a week, but captured in their boat, got lost and were cared for by the Indians. Sam has an interest in a claim on Bonanza creek. It takes a long time to get a letter that he may be a millionaire by this time.
Tuesday afternoon about five o'clock, Bettie, the five-year-old daughter of G. V. Querner of Amity, narrowly escaping burning to death. While she was standing near the fire place her clothes caught fire. Her mother, who was at work in the room, ran to her assistance, and attempted to tear the clothes off her, her hands being badly burned in the attempt. She then carried the child out into the yard, where a neighbor, Grant Smith, came to her assistance, wrapping his coat about the child, thereby extinguishing the flames. The child is badly burned, but it is thought that she will recover.

A spark from the smoke stack at Snyder & Co's evaporator, on Monday, fell on the roof of the building starting a blaze, which was extinguished at once by A. P. Slide, with a Babcock fire extinguisher belonging to the evaporator company.
Captain John Zunwalt has been transferred from the Modoc to the Ruth. He made his last trip on the Modoc to Dayton on Tuesday. Captain Zunwalt takes the place of Captain George Raabe, of the Ruth, who resigned to take a position with the Canadian Pacific company as captain of one of their boats on the Stickeen river, which runs from Wrangle to head of navigation. There are a number of Willamette and Yamhill river men going to northern waters. Cap. Archie Geier of the Elmore, Cap. Jas. Lee, late in the employ of the C. & E. Co., and Cap. Turner will soon leave for the coast to be employed on the Stickeen river boats with Cap. Raabe. An ex-Ruthite of the Ruth, and Inman of the Modoc, will also go to the Stickeen. Some of the deck hands have the fever and will go north.

At the Friends church Sabbath morning the pastor spoke on "The Curse of Uselessness."
Uselessness is most deplorable; a cast of wreck—broken tree—a jagged red light. But the uselessness is more deplorable of all. There are so many, too, in every community. The cause of it is general selfishness and jealousy. We are so selfish of our own interests and pleased that we stay by our own fire-side while genuine and patriotic men are cheerfully lending a hand. So we absent ourselves from community meetings held in the interests of united local action on some worthy subject, in the interest of municipal reform, public works, or education, because it is more comfortable to stay at home, or because we look at the matter with green-eyed jealousy, imagining that some one is trying to "manage affairs." In the times of the judges when Deborah was judge over Israel, they were greatly harassed by Jabin, King of Canaan—Barak called Barak to summon the men of Zebulun and Naphtali and go down to battle against Jabin. But there was one little village in the edge of Zebulun that did not send any men to the army. The men of Israel went against the Canaanites, and the Lord gave them a great victory. In their songs of praise and rejoicing Barak sang, "But course ye utterly the inhabitants thereof, because they came not up to help the Lord, to the help of the Lord against the mighty." How bitter is the curse of uselessness. Not because the people of Mexico had done some great wickedness which they deserved, but because they were useless in the cause of Israel and the Lord.
