

NEWBERG GRAPHIC.

ISSUED EVERY FRIDAY MORNING.

E. H. WOODWARD, EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1898.

Entered as second-class matter at the postoffice at Newberg, Oregon.

Encourage your neighbors to patron the Newberg creamery.

The Webfoot Planter and the Pacific Farmer have been consolidated with Frank Lee as editor and H. L. Martin as associate editor.

The Portland Daily Times, a new evening paper was launched last Saturday with J. S. Dellinger as manager. It is a neat, clean, creditable little sheet.

President McKinley names Thursday November 24 as the day for our annual Thanksgiving. A copy of the proclamation will be found on the first page of this paper.

The farmer who says he will wait and see whether the creamery is a success or not before he gives it his patronage is standing in his own light. The way to make any enterprise succeed is to get in and do your part toward making it go.

The Oregon Agriculturist says of the Newberg fair: "The people of Newberg and vicinity have shown a great deal of courage and enterprise in keeping up their fair year after year without public aid of any kind. Considering the circumstances it is the most worthy commendation of any of the fairs held in Oregon."

The Youth's Companion continues to occupy its old position which is away in the lead of all the young people's papers published in the United States. The paper is always sent to the subscriber until ordered stopped although the subscription may have expired, yet the publishers lose but very little money in this way.

The Rural New-Yorker, The Orange-Judd Farmer and other old time publications are all right for the farmer who lives in the territory in which these papers are published, but for the farmer or fruit grower who lives in the Northwest the Oregon Agriculturist is by far the best paper. Every farmer and fruit grower in Oregon ought to take this most excellent paper.

The citizens of Tillamook are making war on the fellow who runs the North Yamhill and Tillamook stage line on account of cruelty to his horses. Claude Thayer the Tillamook banker has a letter in last week's Headlight in which he tells of poor old jaded, sore backed stage horses and roundly scores the mail contractor. A humane officer ought to take the matter in hand if the citizens of Tillamook tell the truth.

With all the newspaper roasting that has been served out to the members of the legislature on account of the flagrant abuse of the clerkship privilege at the special session, not a single charge has been made against Hon. Clarence Butt, of Newberg. Let members who care for their reputations as honest men refuse to hire committee clerks when they are not needed and they will save themselves many a round scorching at the hands of the press of Oregon.

There is no gain but rather a decided loss by keeping little tots of six and eight years old in the schoolroom throughout the day. When they can't be any longer interested in their lessons they get restless and the schoolroom immediately becomes a prison to them. Miss Inglis, the primary teacher in the Newberg school says she could impart just as much to the little fellows in half a day as she can in a whole day and this no doubt is true. In most city schools a half day is all the beginners are kept in the schoolroom. This matter ought to be considered by our school board. The half day plan will no doubt meet the approval of all parents except such as send their children to school to get them out of the way at home.

The Nicaragua Canal and the Railroads. The transcontinental railroad interests have opposed the canal project because they fear that the waterway will take from the railroads a considerable portion of their present insufficient traffic. They apparently regard the canal simply as a rival and not a coadjutor; but in so doing they allow the minor and temporary effect of the canal to obscure the more important permanent influences which it will exert. That the waterway will divert a portion of the traffic which now goes by rail is indubitable, but the amount will be small. But little of the traffic that will seek the canal route can now be profitably hauled over the mountains. A few years since, but after the completion of all the Pacific roads, large quantities of traffic originating as far west as the Missouri river were carried to New York City and taken thence around the Horn to San Francisco and other Pacific points; and at the present time commodities sent from places as far west as Chicago are frequently shipped to the Pacific States by this same route. Freight is sometimes taken from New York to Antwerp and thence to California instead of being carried across the country by rail. Under such conditions of trans-continental traffic it is not probable that the Nicaragua Canal will draw much of its tonnage from that which now moves by rail.

The Canal will create most of its traffic and will be of much assistance to the railroads. The collection and distribution of the commodities transported by the ships which use the canal must be done by the railroads. This will enlarge their local freight business, the traffic from which the best profits are obtained. The canal will also benefit the Pacific roads by helping them to build up the industries of the region they serve. The trunk lines connecting the central states with the Atlantic ports have not suffered, but have flourished, with the improvement of the Great Lakes. In promoting the industrial development of the adjacent states, the Great Lakes have helped the railroad serving that section to build up the financially strongest systems in the United States. Similarly the Nicaragua Canal can do more than any other agency to place the Pacific railroads upon a sure financial foundation.—From "The Nicaragua Canal and Our Commercial Interests," by Emory R. Johnson, in American Monthly Review of Reviews for November.

Our Tropical Islands. The flag of the United States is flying over Hawaii and Porto Rico in undisputed possession. No one challenges our sovereignty there for all time. It is an important step in the development of the great republic. Both Hawaii and Porto Rico are geographically American territory. In one we kept out and in the other removed a European flag. The righteousness of both acts will be admitted in history. Assertions were made that the annexation of Hawaii would involve us in serious international troubles and require the aid of a large army and navy. But a few companies of troops and a single cruiser are found to be amply enough. In Porto Rico we have about 12,000 soldiers, sent there while the war was in progress. Within a month the number may be safely reduced one-half. We begin on good terms with the inhabitants, and a just, liberal policy, a decided novelty there, will steadily improve the feeling. Both Hawaii and Porto Rico can be easily governed from the seaports. There is no extensive interior to be looked after. Trade and commerce are in working order. The inhabitants are well disposed and engaged in their accustomed labors.

A different situation to some extent exists in Cuba and the Philippines, where it is practically certain we shall soon exercise full military control. Probably the Philippines will be ceded to us by a treaty adjustment. We are not pledged against assuming full sovereignty as soon as it can be arranged. The insurgent problem in the Philippines should not be difficult. It began in a fight for freedom from Spain, and that is assured. So are the republican institutions. If any of the Filipinos are fighting for power they will be disappointed. The United States has no obligations to set up an independent Filipino state, nor would it be judicious to attempt it. Many of the islands and some of their interior regions are still un subdued and uncivilized. The United States has been dealing with such races throughout its history, and the American Indians were more formidable than any Filipino savage tribes. We are not beginners in the business of opening the wilderness and replacing barbarism with an orderly society.

Cuba's case is more complex. Spain would willingly agree, for certain financial considerations, to cede the island. But we are pledged against the acceptance of sovereignty without the inhabitants yet we are equally pledged to assume full military control for a preliminary period, and during that time we must also accept responsibility for the safety of life and property. When Cuba is pacified we are to leave the government and control of the island to its people." The term of our military government will depend upon our own view of what constitutes pacification. Not that the word will be used for quibbling. Before our army is withdrawn from Cuba and our officials from its custom houses a reputable, stable and competent government must be in sight, one that will meet proper obligations and be free from the danger of misrule and revolution, which are the curse of the half-Spanish sovereign states. By the end of the year the American flag will be supreme in Cuba and the Philippines, as well as in Porto Rico and Hawaii. The year 1898 will go into the record as one of splendid expansion for the United States.—Globe Democrat.

Halloween. Last Monday night was halloween and the following notes may be of interest: Halloween did not, as many suppose, have its origin in the church, or come from any ancient religious ceremony, but is simply an echo from a pagan age. In days gone by the coming of Halloween was awaited as the young people looked forward to the Christmas time, and though it was but for a night the merry making was great and the pranks played were of many kinds. It was considered the most propitious time for love making, and it was confidently asserted by youth and maiden that Cupid's darts at this particular time had sharper points than usual and never missed their mark.

In bonny Scotland and the north of England nut boarding and apple-roasting began many weeks before, for no Halloween would be complete without the nuts and apples which were devoured in great quantities on this occasion. Fortunes were told with them, too. The apple seeds were named and counted.

Walking the Floor.

When a business man gets to the point where he cannot sleep at night, where he is so shattered of nerve that it is torture to even remain in his bed, and he has to get up and pace the floor—it is time for that man to bring himself up with a round turn. If he does not, it means nervous prostration and mental, if not physical, death.

For a man who gets into this condition there is a remedy that will brace him up, put him on his feet and make a man of him again. It is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It goes to the bottom of things. It searches out the first cause. When a man is in this condition you can put your finger on one of two spots and hit that first cause—the stomach or the liver or both. This great medicine acts directly on these spots. It promptly transforms a weak stomach into a healthy one. It facilitates the flow of digestive juices and makes digestion and assimilation perfect. It gives a man an appetite like a boy's. It invigorates the liver. It fills the blood with the life-giving elements of the food, and makes it pure, rich, red and plentiful. The blood is the life current, and when it is filled with these elements that build new and healthy tissues, it does not take long to make a man well and strong. It builds firm muscular flesh tissues and gives a man a manly physique. It puts new life, vigor and vitality into every atom and organ of the body. It cures nervous exhaustion and prostration. Nothing "just as good" can be found at medicine stores.

"I had suffered about eleven years with a pain in the back of my head and neck," writes Mr. Robert Hubbard of Warner, Lincoln Co., Ark. "I suffered for eleven years and spent a great deal of money for doctors and medicine, but did not get relief. Then I tried four bottles of Dr. Pierce's Medical Discovery and improved greatly. I sent for five more and now am glad to tell everyone that I am in good health."

Nuts were placed before the fire and named. If one named for a boy began to pop away from one named for some girl it was an omen of ill fortune for those two lovers, but if they quietly burned side by side the two were sure to wed. The tub of floating apples was another amusing, unerring fortune teller. Into a tub half full of water a dozen apples were placed, each apple being named after some lad or lassie in the neighborhood. The apple which could be brought out of the water with the teeth represented the future husband or wife of the angler, and many a zealous boy or girl has received a sound "ducking" from a sly tip given by a rival whose jealousy was kindled at the thought of seeing his favorite apple taken from the tub by another.

Visiting the kaleyard was another way of looking into the secret places of the future. All blindfolded and filled with hope, the young people would go into the kaleyard and pull up the stalks of kale. Upon returning to the freight all who had straight and comely stalks would marry well while those who had gnarled and crooked ones could expect little from a matrimonial venture.

"Dipping the Loggies" was a sure forecaster of matrimonial prospects. Three saucers, one filled with clean water, one with dirty water and one empty, were placed before the fire. A youth was blindfolded and allowed to dip his finger in any one of the three. If he hit the one containing clean water he was sure to marry a pretty maiden; if the dirty water was chosen he would fall heir to a widow, and if the empty saucer was selected he was doomed to bachelorhood.

The swinging candle bar always brought merriment to those who were a stick in the game. On one end of a string a lighted candle was placed and an apple on the other. The stick would be twisted rapidly around and the company formed in a ring would "bite" at the apple often getting the candle instead.

Lovesick maidens had many secret ways of peeping into the matrimonial market at this particular time. One who would stand before a mirror with lighted candle in her hand eating an apple would surely see the face of her future husband peer over her left shoulder when the candle was half consumed.

This and many other such tests of fortune became the subject of such cruel practical jokes that they were forbidden by most parents. A trial of fortune common to Ireland to this day is to place a pole on two boxes a few feet from the ground and a lighted candle on the floor. The young man who can balance himself across the pole and light another candle held in his mouth from the one on the floor is sure to marry rich, win fame and conquer all his foes.

Many other things have been in vogue on All Halloween some very innocent and amusing, others weird and strange which have passed away and are only remembered by the older ones. In America Halloween means a mirthful evening. In New England the young folks gather, eat fruit and nuts or dance the hours away, waiting for the faeries, which rarely ever come. Upon retiring the young women name the corners of the room or the bed posts and go to sleep to dream of their future husbands.

READERS IN EVERY NATION. A Magazine that Crosses Every Sea and Ocean to Reach its Patrons.

In the November Ladies Home Journal Edward Bok, under the heading, "Fifteen Years of Mistakes," writes most interestingly of the growth of that magazine. Its circulation, he asserts, is $50,000, and it goes to nearly every civilized country in the globe. "The Journal touches every part of the British Isles. Hundreds of copies are sent over the North Sea to Denmark; the Baltic Sea to Russia; the Kara Sea to the islands of Nova Zembla, and the Arctic ocean to a home at the foot of the Wullerstorff Mountains in Franz Joseph Land. Several scores of copies cross the Black Sea to Teheran in Persia; go over the Caspian Sea to Zaisan Lake in eastern Siberia, over the Arabian Sea to Bombay, and across India to Madras on the Bay of Bengal. Other copies cross the Mediterranean Sea to Turkey, the Red Sea to Arabia, and the Arabian Sea to the Laccadive Islands. Copies touch Morocco on one side of Africa, while others cross all Africa and the Great Sahara Desert to the Island of Madagascar. The North Pacific ocean is crossed by quite a respectable circulation in itself, to China, each month, and through the China Sea to the Island of Borneo, and through the South Pacific Ocean around Cape Horn to the Falkland Islands. In a word, it may be said that the Journal crosses every sea and ocean."
