

NEWBERG GRAPHIC.

ISSUED EVERY FRIDAY MORNING.

E. H. WOODWARD, EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 11, 1898.

Entered as second class matter at the postoffice at Newberg, Oregon.

The result of Tuesday's elections was highly satisfactory to the republicans. The next United States senate will stand 64 republicans, 24 democrats, 9 populists and one silver republican. The house will be republican by a small majority. The republicans carried California and Washington with good majorities which places the Pacific coast states in the sound money column. Indiana is republican, also Kansas, with Stanley for governor by 1300 majority and Chester I. Long defeated Jerry Simpson in the seventh district. Nebraska is very close with the chances in favor of the republicans. Roosevelt carries New York by 30,000 and a republican legislature is elected.

The election of last Tuesday proved to be another Dewey affair.

All the states in the Union held election Tuesday except three, Maine, Vermont and Oregon.

Oregon set a hot republican pace last June which was followed up closely by a large number of states in last Tuesday's election.

Populism may be able to keep up its yowl for some time to come but like the old greenback party its race is run and it will in due time pass in its checks.

Henry Failing, president of the First National Bank, of Portland, and one of the prominent and well known citizens of that city died last Tuesday after an illness of two months.

The Omaha Bee says: And now the popocrats are charging the republicans with being afraid to allow Bryan to come home. A little while ago they accused the republicans with being afraid to let Bryan go to war.

The Louisville Post, a Democratic paper, said just previous to the election, "as long as democratic success means a free-silver victory, democratic success will be indefinitely postponed," and the elections on Tuesday verified the assertion.

A free circulating library for Portland is being agitated. A very good move if the necessary money can be raised to maintain it, but a library open to the public at a very small fee for the use of the books, say one or two cents per volume, would certainly be a long step in the right direction.

President McKinley set a good example for every voter in the United States by going to his home at Canton, Ohio last Tuesday to vote. Some men boast that they don't care enough about politics to go to the polls to vote but they show a weak spot when they do it. The man who does not take enough interest in politics to have a positive opinion on the issues of the day is a weakling and probably he is more entitled to sympathy than censure.

The Oregonian says in speaking of the upsetting of out buildings and the tearing up of property generally on Halloween, that much of the mischief of this character is the result of thoughtlessness in boys. To some extent this is true no doubt, but about as often it is occasioned by the boys standing about the stores and listening to grown up men telling how they carried on when they were boys, and then going out and laying plans to do a little more mischief than their dads did.

The Scientific American is the only journal published in this country which is devoted to a treatment of the general development of the Sciences, Arts and Manufactures. It appeals particularly to the inventor and is full of suggestive articles relating to the mechanical progress of the day, and it contains a complete list of the patents issued each week, together with the name of the patentee and the title of the invention. Each issue is embellished with numerous illustrations, showing great engineering works, the most recent inventions in bicycles and motor carriages, new forms of machinery, photography, the latest additions to the navy, new guns and locomotives.

The editor of the Graphic remembers well that during the war of the rebellion while there were many thousand soldiers stationed at Camp Morton, north of Indianapolis, it was no uncommon thing for a citizen who was on his way out to the camp from the city to be accosted by a soldier and asked if he was going to hell, the soldier pointing in the direction of the camp. The fact is war is the next thing to hell the best that can be made of it, but with a large army of men gathered from all classes and thrown together in large numbers there will always be many who are unreasonable in their demands and who are ever ready to make bitter complaints of bad treatment. To be sure mistakes are made in the selection of sites for camps and many incompetent men get into responsible positions, yet it is apparent that a very large part of the criticism that is being hurled at the war department at the present time is unreasonable and is for effect. Opportunity is offered for the payment of political scores and it is being paid with a vengeance by a number of newspapers.

The Rural New-Yorker says: A western young man is reported to have abandoned his intended bride at the altar before the ceremony was completed, because he detected the smell of cigarettes on her breath. We aren't told whether the young man himself was addicted to the tobacco habit. But why is it any worse for a woman to smoke than for a man? Why shouldn't she have just as much right to fill herself with beer and whiskey, and go staggering through the streets, or wallow in the gutter, as a being who wears trousers? Why should he be thought worse for her to curse and swear in the streets than for a being who has a monopoly of voting, but not of paying taxes? Not long since, a "man" was convicted in Philadelphia of being a common scold, and his lawyer tried to get him off with the plea that the conviction of one of the lords of creation for such an offense was without precedent. The judge decided that his plea was of no avail; that he was guilty just the same as though he were petticoats. We are not defending any of these practices, or anybody who practices them, but we would like to know whether any of these offenses is worse when committed by a woman, and if so, why.

The New York Tribune says: The death of Colonel Waring can be truly described as one of the losses of the war with Spain, and one of the heaviest. In the performance of what he considered to be his duty—a duty which at his time of life was not entirely enviable, though strictly in line of his profession and both interesting and honorable—he accepted from the president a commission to investigate the conditions which have made Havana and other Cuban cities the prey of yellow fever and a constant source of danger and loss to the United States, and to suggest measures for their sanitary transformation. After such a preliminary study of the problem as circumstances permitted, he was returning with information and conclusions which he believed to be of large value when, by a melancholy fate, he was stricken with the malady which had been the subject of his inquiry and which he was hoping to exterminate. How far the results of his fatal expedition can be utilized now that he is gone is uncertain, but it may be hoped that in years to come Cuba's immunity from yellow fever will be recognized as one of Colonel Waring's titles to grateful remembrance. He died in the service of his country and in honor.

The Rural Northwest says: From the appearance of stacks of pails in front of grocery stores in Portland it is inferred that the Pacific Northwest has secured its regular winter's supply of jellies and jams from Omaha, Nebraska. As strawberries, raspberries, gooseberries, currants and blackberries are regularly sold at a lower price in Portland than in any other city in the United States, and as Oregon sends every year carloads of strawberries to Omaha, the importation of these jellies and jams seems to suggest a lack of enterprise at home. This suggestion would be well founded if the jellies and jams were what they are represented to be. The Omaha manufacturers have long ago learned that strawberries are wholly superfluous articles in the manufacture of "strawberry jelly, finest quality." With a supply of glucose, dried apple cores and peelings and an assortment of artificial flavors, "pure" fruit jellies of all kinds are easily turned out, and the ingredients in appearance for the seeds of strawberries. The man who has to sell jellies and jams made of pure cane or beet sugar and the real fruit in competition with the fraudulent articles will come to grief financially, even if he gets his berries and other fruits at two cents per pound. The sale of these fraudulent jellies and jams is a direct violation of Oregon's pure food law, but so far as we are aware no effort has even been made to enforce the law against their sale. Every man who sells them is liable to a fine of not less than twenty-five dollars, unless he sells them under the belief that they are pure and unadulterated in which case he is liable only to day for the cost of analysis.

AS OTHERS SEE IT.

It is not generally known that an Atchison mother testified before the commission to investigate the conduct of the war. She told a story most damaging to Secretary Alger, and no questions asked her on the stand could shake it. She related with vividness the suffering her boy endured because he had to wash without soap. She told in a voice choked with emotion of a time when he found a fly in his coffee, and related that often he had to towel to wipe on after bathing. The tears rolled down her face as she read letters from him in which he said he had been compelled to go on long marches, and that he had had no pie since he left home, except those he bought from pie vendors. Friends of Secretary Alger who were on the board tried to head her off and confuse her, but without avail. A mother's heart

"How Do I Look?"

A woman asks this question! How much thought and study she devotes to it! It is natural. A woman hates to think that she is growing day by day less charming and attractive and youthful to her husband's eyes than in the days of courtship.

A woman may always retain her charms and the vivacity and freshness of youth if she will take the proper care of her health. A tremendous percentage of ill-health in women is due to weakness and disease of the distinctly feminine organism. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is an unfailing remedy for all disorders of this nature. It tones inflammation, heals ulceration, stops debilitating drains and soothes and tones the nerves. It preserves in a woman all the charm of healthy youth. Thousands of women have testified to its marvelous merits.

"Favorite Prescription" is sold by all respectable dealers in medicines. Deal only where you are honestly treated. Any store-keeper who tries to give you a substitute for what you demand is not treating you honestly and you should take your trade elsewhere.

"For nine years I have suffered with falling of internal organs," writes Mrs. Mary Williams of Raleigh, Wake Co., N. C. (Box 196). "I was troubled with bearing down pains, had indigestion and female weakness and nervousness. I could not sleep at night. I was constipated and had urinary troubles. I was so weak that no medicine would reach my disease. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, Golden Medical Discovery and Pleasant Pellets have cured me."

An every day necessity in the home. A good home medical work. Send 21 cent stamps, to cover mailing only, to the World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y., for a paper-covered copy of Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser. Cloth binding 31 stamps.

prompted her to go on with the whole of the damming tale.—Atchison Globe.

Milton Eagle.—The population of Oregon will be greatly increased by immigration during the next few years and no part of it will command the attention of the home seekers more than the Walla Walla valley. The climate is unsurpassed, all kinds of fruits grow prolific and a failure of the cereal crops is never known. This state is practically undeveloped. A million people can find homes here without the fear of the deadly cyclones, blizzards or droughts.

Puerto Rico.

On October 18th the American flag was raised over the public buildings in the city of San Juan and sovereignty over the ancient island of Puerto Rico was transferred from Spain to the United States.

The event is a noteworthy one in many respects. The acquisition does not have the distinction of being the first our government has made by conquest. California was acquired in the same way fifty years ago, but Puerto Rico is both the smallest in area of all additions to our national territory, and the largest in the number of people whose allegiance has been transferred from another country to our own.

The change was made without the consent of the Puerto Ricans, but there is reason to believe that it was not against their wish. Indeed, there are stronger reasons for supposing that the people of other islands of the West Indies envy the good fortune of our new possession than the Puerto Ricans are dissatisfied. Neither is there any ground for fear that the acquisition of the island will lead to foreign complications. The island lies so near the American continent as to be almost a part of it; and no nation except Spain objects to its annexation to the United States.

Nevertheless, the annexation raises for solution a new and very important question. How is this new territory to be governed? The authority given our government is absolute.

"The Congress shall have power to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory or other property belonging to the United States."

That is the clause of the Constitution under which our territorial governments are organized. The system used for Oklahoma or any other may be adopted, even to the total denial of self-government, as in the District of Columbia.

It must not be supposed, however, that the government of eight hundred thousand people—including nearly a half million of mixed Spanish and Indian blood, and three hundred thousand negroes, hardly one of them who can speak the English language—is to be accomplished without political complications and civil disturbances. Perplexity will probably follow perplexity. Only wise, patient, far-seeing statesmanship will bring into harmonious relations with our system of government this unpromising interjection into our national life.

It will be a lamentable mistake if the chief end sought in dealing with these people should be the greedy acquisition of the ever-obstructive dollar. They should be given a helpful welcome, and a way found to establish our government in their hearts, and to develop in them the principles of an enlightened, self-respecting citizenship.—Youth's Companion.

The Companion For the Rest of 1898.

The principal attractions offered by the Youth's Companion for the remaining weeks of 1898 provide a foretaste of the good things to follow in the new volume of 1899. To the first issue in November Frank R. Stockton will contribute a humorous sketch, "entitled Some of My Dogs," and in the issue for the week of November 10th will appear Rudyard Kipling's thrilling story of the heroism of soldiers in the ranks, "The Burning of the Sarah Sands." In the seven issues to follow there will be contributions by Lord Dufferin, Wm. Howells, J. E. Chamberlin, the American war correspondent Mary E. Wilkins, Hon. Thos. B.

The evangelistic superintendent opened the meeting last Wednesday by reading the 25th chapter of Matthew and commented on the same. The executive committee reported vacancies filled as follows: Corresponding secretary, Mrs. Scott; vice pres. from Baptist church, Mrs. Lawelling; vice pres. from Friends church, Mrs. Blair.

Quarterly reports were read some of them showing considerable work done. The superintendents of literature have distributed 2600 pages of literature. Some flowers have been sent out and the treasurer reports a balance in the treasury of $34.36.

REPORTER.

An Industry for Children.

Last Saturday was pay day at the Pacific pine needle factory for the needles the children picked and delivered during the week, says the Grant's Pass Courier. The scene was an attractive one, there being at least 125 children of all sizes on the platform at one time awaiting their turn to be paid off. Mr. and Mrs. Cords have adopted the plan of giving the children a check book which will contain the amounts delivered during the week that each one may keep account for which he will expect pay on Saturday. The children may deliver in small quantities each day and have them weighed at 5 o'clock or later. Mr. and Mrs. Cords are very kind to the children and they are very anxious that the little fellows may make a few dimes, otherwise it would be much less trouble to have them delivered by the wagon load. Several tons were weighed and paid for last Saturday, and the children went home happy.
