

NEWBERG GRAPHIC.

ISSUED EVERY FRIDAY MORNING.

E. H. WOODWARD, EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

FRIDAY, MARCH 3, 1899.

Entered as second class matter at the postoffice at Newberg, Oregon.

The season for fresh cows is at hand. The Newberg creamery ought to be liberally patronized by the farmers.

At such times the damage done to fruit trees by the unusually cold weather proves to be much less than at first reported.

Oregon boys who can handle a piece of charcoal with sufficient dexterity to get to themselves some local notoriety are getting to be quite numerous but it remains to be seen whether or not Oregon will furnish the world with more than one Davenport.

Dewey shows his good sense again by laying down the word early that he will not be drawn into politics. He says his training has not been such as to fit him for the presidency. A position at the top in the navy is more creditable than one at the bottom in the long line of presidents.

The fellows who are setting up Aguinaldo as a second Washington will find it rather difficult to fix up a cherry tree and hatchet story for him that will hold water. His bargain and sale with the Spaniards don't tally very well with the record made by the immortal Washington.

A member of the Illinois legislature is advocating a measure which is novel if not practical. He proposes that the legislature enact a law for the establishment of an inebriate asylum to be supported by a tax upon the saloons of the state, claiming that as the saloons are the cause of inebriety it is but just and equitable that they be made to care for and support their victims.

It is a common remark that "talk is cheap" but it depends a good deal. When it comes to getting some very good and profitable enterprises on foot it seems that the necessary "talk" is not so cheap, after all. In fact in a good many instances it is about the dearest thing in connection with the enterprise, and unless there is some one to take the lead and keep hammering away at it the whole thing is a failure. Our creamery is put down as a success in every particular by those who are giving it their patronage but there are so many skeptics among our farmers that much "talk" seems to be necessary in order to get them to see that they have a good thing here if they will only open their eyes to the fact and help it along.

The iron ore mines of Minnesota, Michigan and Alabama, the coal mines of Pennsylvania, Ohio and Tennessee, the forests of Michigan, Oregon and Washington, the rolling mills in all parts of the country, the shipyards along the coast, the transportation agencies of the country, and all of the people, wherever located, would be drawn upon to contribute to and would be greatly benefited by, the shipbuilding that would follow the passage of the so-called Hanna-Payne shipping bill through Congress at the present session. The bill has been favorably reported from the proper committees in each branch of Congress, and now hangs upon the calendar awaiting discussion and vote. There is no more important bill before Congress than the pending shipping bill, and for that reason it deserves immediate and favorable consideration.

In all new countries where there is a deep rich soil it takes a good many years to get good wagon roads established but they come finally. First it takes a while to make a number of people up to the fact that it is economy to have good roads, then some years must be spent in experimenting on different methods but finally a marked improvement will be seen, though it takes years to reach the ideal. In the Willamette valley we have paved pretty well through the first stage and have made some progress on the second, so there are good grounds for much encouragement. In some parts of the valley where there is not too much heavy hauling very good roads may be made by grading and affording good drainage, but in most places gravel or crushed rock is required for making a solid road bed. Of the two, gravel is by far the most satisfactory, and in the near future it alone will be universally used when it is at all to be had.

Directly after the cold snap last month the report was quite general that much damage was done to fruit trees and that the fruit crop was almost ruined. The Graphic did not give circulation to these reports for the reason that it was quite evident that the damage done was greatly over estimated and a little time has proven this to be the case. From the best evidence that can be obtained by conversing with fruit growers it seems that the damage done to the trees in this community and about Dundee has been light and the present prospect for a good fruit crop is about all that could be asked. Of course the fruit buds may be injured later on but up to the present time growers have little cause for complaint.

The Northwest is going to get the benefit of big editorial visit in July, Portland, Oregon having been selected as the next meeting place of the National Editorial Association, which annually meets somewhere, consumes much good provender and paints the country a luminous carmine, says the Pasadena Star. Portland showed great enterprise in securing the prize for 1899, sending able talkers to Denver and presenting the matter in such glowing colors that the brethren surrendered at discretion, though the choice was contested by such able rivals as Milwaukee (with its famous beer), Hot Springs (the home of the Arkansas traveler), Niagara Falls, Put-in-Bay, on the great lakes, and other able-bodied contestants. It was all owing to Pat Donan. Perhaps we should say "Colonel" Donan, for a man who can talk like him would be colonel in any country in the world. He came over with his sonorous voice, and its effect was electric. Other places dropped out of sight as soon as he began to talk, and people were ready to believe that Portland-on-Willamette (no connection with the shop over in Maine) was the biggest town in the world. The result is they are all going, and the land of salmon and red apples will soon become known of all men. The date is fixed at July 5, that being the decision of the executive committee which met at St. Louis February 14, when California was represented by Messrs. Daniels of Alameda and Gardner of Pasadena. The convention will occupy three days, after which a number of fine trips will be taken to the Upper Willamette valley, Astoria, Clatsop Beach, Oregon City etc. The sound will probably be also visited with possibilities for Alaskan trips at reduced rates, and the Yellowstone Park on the way home. Altogether it will be a grand affair, and the eagerness with which it has been sought is a fine tribute to the value of advertising—for of course that is what the invitation is made for. The editors go for fun, their host invite them for policy, and both are well paid. Oregon is wise in her day and generation and we congratulate her upon her far-seeing policy and the good results that are certain to come from it.

FROM THE OUTLOOK.

The New Librarian.

President McKinley's appointment of Mr. Samuel J. Barrows, at present a Massachusetts Congressman, to the office of Librarian of Congress meets the general approval of press and people. It is reported that the President desired to appoint to this important position Mr. Herbert Putnam, of the Boston Library, but as the United States Government cannot pay as good a salary for the responsible supervision of its National Library as can the municipality of Boston for its Public Library, Congress is deprived of the possibility of securing one of the most expert and most thoroughly trained librarians in the world. While Mr. Barrows has not had the same technical training, it is true that there are other qualifications nearly or quite as essential, and with these Mr. Barrows is unquestionably endowed to an exceptional degree. He is a man of scholarly tastes and thorough education; has had a long experience as a journalist and editor; possesses an eminent degree of tact, executive ability, and a practical knowledge of affairs, and has sound ideas on the requisites for public service; while the fact that he has been a member of Congress will make his relations with that body easy and pleasant. There is no fear that Mr. Barrows will consent to make himself the tool of political office-mongers; there is every reason to believe that he will administer his office as to make the Library of Congress of National and educational benefit.

North Dakota's Redemption.

The Legislature of the State of North Dakota has just enacted a law long needed, the passing of which must markedly raise the commonwealth in the estimation of the other States of the Union. This new law provides that, after the first day of July next, it shall be necessary to live in the State twelve months in order to acquire a legal residence. For several years a period of only three months has been necessary, and this provision has invited hundreds of people from other States to live long enough in North Dakota to secure a divorce. The old law brought the better element of the State under disgrace. This element has for several years sought relief, but hitherto in vain. From statements just published it appears that the people seeking a divorce, many of whom have unlimited wealth, have been spending about five hundred thousand dollars per year in the state, mainly in the few larger towns. A newspaper correspondent says that the average business man of one of the larger towns which he mentions will see the divorce colony disappear with regret. The money which this colony brought into the State seems to have been the main obstacle to the repeal of the law.

Food Adulterations and Preservatives.

The New York State Department of Agriculture has for some time been conducting investigations of the food supplies sold and manufactured in the State. As a result of these investigations a bill is before the Legislature to prevent the sale of milk or other dairy products in which preservatives have been used, or adulterations that cheapen the cost of production. The investigations of the Department give conclusive evidence that borax, wood alcohol and salicylic acid are used as preservatives in dairy products. At the hearing an interesting exhibit was shown by the Department. It included tea dust worth ten cents per pound but sold for forty; ground plaster that had been extracted from flour; dough taken from coffee beans; ground pea-hulls from ground coffee; catnip made of pumpkin and acid; paraffine extracted from butter; and indigestible evidence of preservatives found in milk and butter. The bill is opposed by chemists and the manufacturers of preservatives. The present dispute as to army supplies focuses public attention on the question of dairy and manufactured foods, and makes this question of protecting foods from deleterious adulterations command from citizens the attention that it deserves. This bill also provides for further investigations to be reported to the next Legislature. A further bill to create a commission to investigate the condition of the live stock of the State has been presented, but it is said that the Governor has expressed himself as opposed to a commission, believing that the Agricultural Department and the State Board of Health are protecting the people.

And where, good men, is the harm if the Kissers and Kisses be healthy, and true love stands sponsor. It is only when ill-health has blighted the sweet cleanliness of youth that death lurks upon its lips. The deadly germs of dread consumption are as harmless as June-time butterflies to the young man or woman who is thoroughly clean, sweet and healthy in every fiber and tissue. The germs of disease only attack that which is already partly decayed. There is a great medicine that is a sure and certain protection against all germs and a speedy cure for all germ diseases. It is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It gives powerful rest to the appetite. It corrects all faults of the digestion. It aids assimilation. It fills the blood with the vital, life-giving elements of the food. It builds sweet, clean, healthy tissues in every part of the body. It drives out all disease germs. It cures 99 per cent. of all cases of bronchitis, throat and lung affections if taken in time. All good medicine dealers sell it, and have nothing "just as good."

The dream of the Pullman industrial town will soon become a thing of the past as the model town of Pullman, Ill., will soon lose its peculiar identity and will become a free community, and the anomaly of a city within a city is now at an end. The Pullman Palace Car Company has accepted the decision of the Supreme Court of Illinois, sustaining the contention of the Attorney General, and the terms of the decree are now being prepared. This decree will divorce the great corporation from everything save the business of building cars. The churches, schools, hotels, arcade, market house, public library, and some 2,000 brick residences will have to be sold to the highest bidder, and the brick works will pass from the control of the company and the streets themselves will now be controlled by the authorities of the city of Chicago. Preference will be given to employees in purchasing the homes which they now occupy.—Scientific American.

Testing Children's Strength.

A scientific investigation of the physical strength of the Chicago school children is to be undertaken by the Board of Education of that city, and the results which they obtain will be used as a standard for the treatment of pupils as to their capacity for mental endurance and physical exercise. It is thought that the results will be very important and serve to revolutionize the methods which are now in vogue. The theory of the test is to determine what is known as the "fatigue period" of a child, or that period of its life at which its energies are at the lowest ebb and, therefore, the time when its school work should not be pressed. The scheme will be put in operation at one of the largest elementary schools, in which at least one thousand children are taught. The pupils will be weighed and measured and will be examined for the purpose of determining their physical condition. A test will be made of the strength and endurance powers of the muscles of the child. This will be done by the special-physiological instrument called the "ergograph" adapted for the purpose.—Scientific American.

About People And Things.

Andrew Carnegie's gifts for public libraries aggregate $5,000,000 and he has $2,000,000 more pledged to the same uses.

One question which a woman desiring to become a trained nurse must answer is: "What are your physical disabilities?" In reply to this a girl recently wrote: "I have a cowlick and a corn."

Robert Barr, the novelist says that he will wage he can step off a train at any village in England, and at two out of every three houses receive an affirmative to the question, "Have you any relatives in America?"

General Gomez stands about five feet seven inches in his shoes, weighs about 150 pounds, and though about 70 years of age, has been from 1895 to 1898 often in the saddle for thirty-six hours without sleep. Indeed, he found his health better in a tent than in a house.

Mrs. Fish, mother of Hamilton Fish, who was killed in the charge of the Rough Riders at Santiago, has had manufactured a large number of beautiful pearl-handled penknives, one of which she has sent to each member of her son's regiment as a little token of remembrance.

A writer in the current Cosmopolitan who is familiar with life in the Philippines says that "Filipino" means a person of pure Spanish extraction born in the Philippine Islands. The people of mixed blood are Mexicans, while the Spaniards call the aborigines "Indians." The same writer says that the Indians of Luzon hate those of Panay, while both are cordially hated by the Mahometans of Mindanao.

Lyman Abbott says: "I have tried to interpret my own conviction that religion consists not in believing something about God or thinking about God, but in trying to live the divine life. Religion is simply the art of living, not even the art of right living, for living that is not right living is the beginning of death. Religion means for the merchant honesty, for the journalist truthfulness, for the soldier heroism, for the minister sincerity and candor."

The only negro in Congress is named "White." He is representative for the Second congressional district of North Carolina, and is described as modest, unassuming and unobtrusive, a leader of his race in his section of the State and a man of considerable learning. He is a graduate of Howard University Washington, and a lawyer by profession. His skin is a tan color, but he is without the kinky hair so common to the colored race. It is recalled that General Miles is not the only commander of the army who has been called a liar by a subordinate. Ninety years ago General Winfield Scott, who was then a captain in the army, was tried by court-martial for having said at a public table that he

Moralists may praise, and doctors praise, and science shout from the housetops, but just so long as the birds sing and the flowers bloom, and a maiden's lips are cherry-red, and a young man's eyes look love, just so long the fads and lassies will kiss—and kiss again.

And where, good men, is the harm if the Kissers and Kisses be healthy, and true love stands sponsor. It is only when ill-health has blighted the sweet cleanliness of youth that death lurks upon its lips. The deadly germs of dread consumption are as harmless as June-time butterflies to the young man or woman who is thoroughly clean, sweet and healthy in every fiber and tissue. A man or woman who neglects constipation suffers from slow poisoning. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. One little "Pellet" is a gentle laxative, and two a mild cathartic. All medicine dealers sell them. No other pills are "just as good."

never saw but two traitors—Generals Wilkinson and Burr—and that General Wilkinson was a liar and a scoundrel. He was found guilty and was suspended for a year, notwithstanding the fact that his utterance turned out to be true.

Wives of great men oft remind us That the man we think sublime May, when he's at home, be made to Tend the furnace all the time.

When Phyllis sings, her joyous notes are heard for miles around; They shiver up the mountain solitude.

The wild beasts stand and wonder at the strange unearthly sound, And e'en the echoes seem in frightened mood.

When Phyllis sings, the birdies fly away in sore affright, And even I am thrilled from head to toe—

That voice would put a German band to wild, impetuous flight. For Phyllis is a burro, don't you know.

Dignity in the Presidency.

Americans ought to blush when they bring to mind the sort of personal abuse which the very best and wisest of their presidents have to bear. To recall the fact that Washington was denounced as an embezzler, and that the most infamous names were applied to Jefferson; to remember that Jackson was styled "a barroom brawler," and that Van Buren was charged with stealing spoons; that Lincoln was widely spoken of as a "haboon," Johnson as "a drunken boor" and Grant as "a stool-pigeon of the rings"—this is not exactly gratifying to any person of any party whatsoever at the present time. It is a most discreditable fact in our political history that such things should have been said and written and taken, no doubt, by many persons to be true. Would it not be well if a tacit understanding should now be entered into by those who strike the note of political discussion that in the future some regard shall be had for the dignity of the presidential office? This would seem to be far more desirable even than it has been in the past; for our country is now entering the field of international politics and diplomacy, and what passes here at home will no longer remain unnoticed and unheeded abroad. If we show by our utterances and by the things we write that we have no respect for those to whom we give our interests in charge how can we think that foreign statesmen will respect them, or, for that matter, how can we suppose that they will view us as a people if, our chosen representatives seem only targets for the journalistic mud-slinger and the jeering mob.
