

NEWBERG GRAPHIC.

ISSUED EVERY FRIDAY MORNING.

E. H. WOODWARD, EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

FRIDAY, MARCH 10, 1899.

Entered as second-class matter at the postoffice at Newberg, Oregon.

Matt Quay is still hanging on the ragged edge in Pennsylvania.

The road supervisor of Dayton has struck the right gait by opening up a public road to a gravel bar on the river.

"It is not all of life to live nor all of death to die." The latest is that after death we must be subject to the coffin trust.

Man may not have originated from the monkey but the actions of some very well meaning people give a shade of credence to this theory.

The Review and Plaindealer of Roseburg are engaged in a war of naughty words about each other. Naughty boys, both of them no doubt.

California can't throw mud at Oregon any more. They have scarcely had enough rain down there to make a mud pie for the past two seasons.

A few years ago it was "drouth stricken, bleeding Kansas," now it is California's turn. Come to Oregon where reasonable rains are as sure as fate.

Algers staying qualities may not have been the best while in the army but as a cabinet officer his ability for hanging on while under fire is remarkable to say the least.

The Editor of the Graphic has wielded the pencil and scissors for a longer period continuously in Yamhill county than any other newspaper man now in the business in the county.

Newberg has a women's club which has adopted the name of "Village Improvement Club." Study circles are being formed in household economics, literature, child culture and music.

The steambot captain who navigates the Willamette watches for and avoids the gravel bars. The up-to-date road supervisor is now looking out for a gravel bar for utilizing in road making.

The Oregonian in a recent editorial says McKinley will be nominated almost without opposition and elected by an overwhelming majority unless something momentous and unforeseen transpires in the next seventeen months.

The annual meeting of the Oregon Dairyman's Association will be held in Portland on Friday and Saturday of this week. The importance of a meeting of this kind if attended by the dairymen of Oregon, as it should be, is self evident.

It is hinted that Grover Cleveland is willing to undertake to lead the democratic party out of the slough of despond in the next presidential campaign. This shows a remarkable degree of courage on the part of Grover for it will be a big undertaking.

An ingenious Yankee has invented a machine for washing babies, but for removing the dirt and making the kid scream if he has an improvement over the methods of our mothers who applied a rough cloth with soap "well rubbed in" he is a hummer.

Governor Goer has appointed Hon. J. D. Lee to the office of superintendent of the state penitentiary. Mr. Lee is in the prime of life, he has a reputation for honesty and uprightness, his character is above reproach and the Graphic is glad to chronicle the news of his appointment to this position.

At the Minnesota College of Agriculture are fifty young women who are pursuing the study of scientific farming with the intention of following the business. There are a great many successful women farmers in the west, including several conspicuously so in Indiana, and there is no reason why they should not become leaders in scientific farming. If the boys continue to desert the farms the girls will have to take their places. —Indianapolis Journal.

The Atlanta Constitution tells of a happy Billville parent who sent this letter recently to one of his sons in Texas: Dear John:—This is to let you know that Bill's out of the penitentiary, Dick's left the chain gang, George has been declared not guilty by a jury of peers, and Rufus has returned the funds he misplaced, and we're going to have a big family reunion and we want your presence on that glorious occasion.

Cleveland Redivivus. It is quite probable that the flatterers who are left about Grover Cleveland have persuaded him that he has another chance to be President. They made even so cool and practical a man as General Grant think so after he had finished his second term in office. In Grover Cleveland's case they could not have had much trouble in playing their sycophantic arts, as Cleveland's belief in himself as a consecrated Man of Destiny has never wavered, even under the buffeting of fortune which his influence met in the last Democratic National convention. To make him believe that the American people would yet turn to him as to a Moses, pleading to be guided out of the wilderness of "imperialism" was not an arduous task.

The Republican party could ask no greater favor of the Democracy than this nomination, but nothing is more improbable than that the favor will be granted. Whatever popularity Cleveland once had in his party has dwindled to the limits of a small coterie of flatterers and mutual admirers, of whom J. Pierpont Morgan and Carl Schurz are types. The popular strength of these people was fairly listed in 1896 by the vote for the national ticket of the Gold Democrats—a ticket that did not carry a single state, county, city, town, village or voting precinct. The pool would hardly have been larger if Cleveland himself had taken Senator Palmer's place at the head of the movement. The man as a party leader, has become utterly discredited, not more by his financial views than by the career of debt, default and disaster with which he has involved the Government.

It is inconceivable how, with this handicap, Mr. Cleveland could aspire to a third term save on grounds we have given—of overweening personal vanity. The whole plea for the Stuffed Prophet rests upon his supposed fealty to the principles of Washington's farewell address, yet if there was one thing that Washington warned his countrymen against more than another it was the third term. Nor did any warning of the series have more effect. Jackson could not have been re-elected a third time, nor could Lincoln. General Grant failed in the effort. And what has Cleveland ever said or done that could lead him to expect any different treatment for his third term aspirations?

The new Cleveland ship of destiny will, it is said, be launched at a Mugwump dinner on a sparkling sea of champagne. No doubt it will swim gallantly in its frothy course, but when the frail bark reaches the sea of public opinion that will be the time to wave it a last adieu, for it will never be heard of more.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Large Timbers. The largest bill of big timber that was ever turned out in the Cowlitz valley by a sawmill is now being cut at Fidler's mill, Catlin. The timbers are to be used in the steamer Lakme that recently caught fire from her cargo of lime and which is now lying at Astoria for repairs. The largest timber is 18 x 24 inches and 126 feet long, and will be used as a keelson. The log that furnishes this large piece of timber is 126 feet long and 34 inches at the small end, and contains 5810 feet of lumber; the stick alone has 4320 feet. Two other timbers measure 100 feet in length and are 18 x 24. There are quite a number of smaller timbers. The logs are furnished by Taylor & Beck, loggers on the Ostrander, and the woods are full of just such logs, but the expense of getting them to market is considerable greater than common lengths, but when extraordinary lengths are desired Cowlitz county can produce them.

The crew at Fidler's mill have had considerable experience the past year in getting out large timbers, but this last order caps the climax.

Porto Rico's Winter Climate. On reviewing the impressions of a tour nearly all around this island by railroad and carriage and across the island over the great military road, the first and perhaps the last are of the delightfulness of the climate and the beauty of the scenery. The extraordinary equable temperature is due to the prevalence of the trade winds; for Porto Rico lies far out in the ocean, east of Haiti, and 1,000 miles east of Havana. In our midwinter the thermometer stands every day at about 80° in the shade and goes down to about 70° at night, or in the hills to 60°. In the summer a temperature of 90° is reached, but never more than 92°. There is thus no winter. All the year around the army officers attend receptions in their white linen suits, and only the thinnest undergarments can be worn. The constant wind blows directly across the island. In winter the moisture carried from the sea condenses into an occasional little shower, more frequent in the hills, and all day cumulus clouds are scattered about the horizon or afford a few minutes' shade from the bright sun. The air is absolutely clear, with no smoke, haze, or dust. The heavier summer showers and the moisture of the air in winter (about 75 per cent. of saturation) with occasional bits of rain keeps the streams full and the ground moist even in what the people would call a dry season. The winters are most delightful, and the island ought to become, like Bermuda, a favorite winter resort for invalids.—From "The Condition of Porto Rico," by William Hayes Ward, in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for March.

Husbands For All His Girls. "The number of male infants born yearly exceeds that of female by one to four per cent., the proportion varying slightly from year to year," writes Professor D. R. McNally of "The American Girl's Chances of Marriage," in the March Ladies' Home Journal. "The mishaps of boyhood, however, reduce the number of boys to some extent, but not so much as to make the adult females outnumber the males. Forever American woman, therefore, there ought to be a husband in posse if not in esse, and the fact that there is a large percentage of unmarried adult women in the country, and a greater proportionate number in some sections than others, is attributable to causes which have disturbed the balance of population. In all new countries—and compared with Europe the United States is a new country—there is a larger proportion of males than of females. The aggregate population of the United States, so far as the latest official figures show, is 62,622,250 of which 32,067,890 are males and 30,554,370 are females. Thus the preponderance of males over females would seem to make it comparatively easy for the American girl to secure a husband, but in certain sections this is not the case, else the proportion of unmarried women would not be so large. If men would remain in the neighborhood where they were born the proportion of men and women would be nearly equal all over the country, but men find work hard to get in the older and more populous communities and go to the newer states. The young women are left behind, and the young men, after settling in their new homes, forget the companions of their youth and contract alliances among their new friends in the West, hence some of the Eastern States show a surplus of females.

Poultry Notes. Worms may result from feeding raw meat too freely. See that the eggs are clean before peeping sent to market. Leghorns are less tame, usually, than most other breeds. Whitewash the poultry house on the outside before winter. Don't build a fancy poultry house. Put it up plain but warm. An earth floor in the poultry house is not only good, but the best. If an old rooster is not fit for the table, kill him anyhow and bury him. Never mind thrashing the cats for the fowls; they prefer to do it themselves. Remember, you can fool a customer once, but once. Will it pay to fool him at all? It will not pay to inbreed. Make a saving somewhere else rather than adopt this practice. There are drawbacks to the poultry business, and so there are to every other business. The hired man, as a rule, is not a good hand to attend to poultry, though there are exceptions. The sooner you are rid of the old stock except those intended for next season's breeders, the better. Freedom from lice and plenty of range will make the growing chicks "hump" themselves these days. A writer declares that while old fowls can stand corn meal and bran, they never should be fed to chicks. Some hens do not possess the egg laying habit and no system of feeding will make good layers of such hens. Be careful how the new grain is fed. It is liable to produce cases of what you will probably call cholera. Pure bred fowls, first, last and all the time. The breed does not matter so much, provided you are satisfied with it. Give as much of a variety as possible. Young chicks soon tire of the best of feed if confined to it for any length of time. Every little while some one gets up a new theory for telling the sex of the chick from the outside of the egg. All nonsense. Too much young stock is used for breed purposes. The young chicks will be harder and make larger flocks if from two-year-old stock. Make a note of the hen that had the best hatch and raised her chicks in the best shape, and let her repeat it next season. She will do it.

An Event in Social Life. On Thursday evening of last week the ladies of the W.C.T.U. held a parlor meeting at the home of Moses Votaw. At the usual hour guests began to arrive and continued until the rooms were well filled. The subject for discussion was the department of the press. The program was furnished by Mrs. F. A. Morris, who is superintendent of press work for the Newberg Union, and it goes without saying that in her hands it was ably prepared and skillfully carried out. Papers worthy of consideration were read on the following subjects: The temperance question and the press by Mrs. F. A. Morris. The press as an evangelist, Mrs. J. Blair. The People and the Cast-iron, the Press the Caterer, Mr. F. A. Morris. How our Forefathers got the News, Mr. Luther Votaw. A bulletin of many newsy items was read by Miss Chamberlain. This, interspersed with music and followed by short, terse speeches from Revs. Waltz and Lewis, Mr. Stanley and Mrs. Dunlap, completed a very interesting program, after which the company were most delightfully regaled with refreshments consisting of "newspaper cake and pressed lemons."

The newspaper was in evidence on every hand. The ladies in charge wore newspaper sashes and the rooms were most tastefully decorated with footstools of the Oregonian and other periodicals. Much might be said of the valuable contents of each of the papers read, but to do them justice is even a sketch from each, would not fairly represent their merits. Suffice it to say, could the suggestions offered, and the thoughts advanced by them be made available by the press, the public would have much more wholesome reading than we now have. M.E.A.

LAFAYETTE ITEMS Mrs. Alice Milloy who has been in poor health for two or three years died at Dr. Watts last Thursday and was buried on

Marking needs a herald, like the heralds of old to proclaim so that all may hear, the vital importance of health. The average man of to-day thinks it beneath his dignity to bother about his health until it is gone. Even then he only takes measures to restore it in an indifferent, contemptuous sort of way. Men cannot learn too soon that health is the most important thing in life—it is life. Without it the most brilliant man will be a failure, and the most robust man will rapidly become a physical wreck. The man who neglects the little headaches, the loss of appetite and sleep, nervousness, hot flushings, cold chills, heavy head, lax muscles, and the multitude of bad feelings that are the heralds of approaching sickness and disease, must pay a tremendous penalty. For men who suffer in this way there is no medicine equal to Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It sharpens the appetite, corrects all disorders of the digestion, invigorates the liver, makes the blood and enriches it with the life-giving elements that build new, healthy flesh. It is the great blood-maker and flesh-builder. It cures 98 per cent. of all cases of consumption and is the best of all known remedies for nervous troubles. Thousands have told over their own signatures, the stories of the wonders it has performed. Honest dealers will not urge a substitute for the sake of a little extra profit. Thomas Fletcher, of Clifton Station, Fairfax Co., Va., writes: "I suffered terrible tortures for ten years with 'gastritis' (pain in the stomach). I then took six bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which completely cured me." When the bowels are regular the body will feel good and the mind will be active. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. One little "Pellet" is a gentle laxative, and two a mild cathartic. They never gripe. All good dealers sell them, and have nothing else "just as good."

Saturday. Joe Millots babe died on Thursday also. Charley Burt of the Oregon Pacific bridge gang is at home on a visit. E.R. Poppleton has sold his place on the north part of town to an eastern man for about $68 per acre. Fred Hawkins of Columbia county was in town Saturday, looking after his property here. Our school meeting Monday resulted in the election of Samuel Ewing as director for three years and Miss Maggie Boone as clerk for one year. Clifford W. Kantner has a large class and is giving the satisfaction as a teacher of music in the seminary. D.C. Herrin of the A.O.U.W. is billed for an address here on Thursday night the 9th, A. Leroy of the I.O.O.F. on Friday night the 10th and C.H. Wheeler of the Woodmen on Monday night the 13th. So you see the fraternal and beneficiary causes are not being neglected in our city. Byron Milloy, of Albany, and Robert Shaw, a merchant of Mill City, were here to attend the funeral of their mother-in-law, Mrs. Milloy. Elmer Johnson and wife are visiting in Forest Grove this week. Dr. Watts has gone on a business trip to Albany. Several bicycles have made their appearance on the streets this week but the roads are in rather poor condition for wheeling yet. The directors have added another month to this term of the public school, making a nine instead of an eight months school. The Olds Bros. and Henry Bros. are cleaning up their hop yards and setting poles. They say their hops have not been injured by the freezing weather. POSEY.

4. Discovered by a Woman. Another great discovery has been made, and that too, by a lady in this county. "Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly, and could not sleep. She finally discovered a way to recovery, by purchasing of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and was so much relieved on taking the first dose, that she slept all night; and with two bottles, has been absolutely cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz. Thus writes W. C. Hanneck & Co., of Shelby M. C. Trial bottle free at C. E. Smith's drug store. Regular size 50c. and $1.00. Every bottle guaranteed.
