

Entered as second-class matter at the postoffice at Newberg, Oregon.

Ex-Governor Wm. P. Lord has been named by the President for minister to Persia.

Hon. Thos. H. Tongue has favored this office with a copy of the twelfth annual report of the interstate commerce commission.

A copy of the curfew ordinance will be found in this week's issue. Read it and see if you think there is anything detrimental to parents or children in its requirements.

The price one has to pay for meat now brings up thoughts of a cattle trust. The farmer who sells the cattle, however, says it is simply a streak of McKinley prosperity.

It is announced that speaker Thomas B. Reed has been guaranteed $50,000 a year if he will consent to take a position with a New York law firm and that he will probably retire from Congress and accept it.

Senator Howe has the thanks of the Graphic for a copy of the "Oregon Legislature Album," which contains half-tone engravings and biographical sketches of the ninety members of the twentieth biennial session of the Oregon Legislature Assembly.

A resident tax payer said to the editor of the Graphic one day this week, "I wish you would say in the Graphic that I think that in our town where we have expended $18,000 or $20,000 for water works it is simply an outrage that when a man wants a drink of water he must get down on his knees and suck it through a rubber hose." It does look like two or three public drinking fountains would be appreciated and the Graphic has made such a suggestion several times in the past.

That much advertised function in celebration of the anniversary of Jefferson and simplicity, known as the $10 democratic dinner, came off in New York last Thursday night. It was a show as well as a dinner and it cost something to see the Tammany Tiger feed. Twenty-five boxes were sold and the first one put up brought $240, Mr. Levy being the purchaser. A number of lesser lights paid $100 each for boxes, and one eminent democratic financier got a box for only $50. Three thousand quarts of champagne and 3500 quarts of other and lighter wines were provided for the 3000 diners and everything else was carried out on similar lines of Jeffersonian simplicity befitting the occasion.—Tidings.

Governor Geer is right when he says: "Our people take no stock in the declaration that the conflict in the Philippines is 'waged in opposition to liberty and in the interest of capitalism.' The very men who make this charge now are the ones who, little more than a year ago, were loudly accusing President McKinley of 'cowardice' and delaying the war with Spain in the 'interests of capitalism,' as represented by Spanish bondholders." The governor says there is quite a general wish among the people of Oregon that the volunteer soldiers of the state may soon be returned from Manila, but not for the political reasons that are being advanced in certain quarters. And the governor adds with reason: "It is believed, however, that this wish is confined to those of us who are at home, as the Oregon boys at the front quite generally express a desire to remain there until the difficulty is settled."

The city ordinance which it is proposed to repeal reads as follows: "It shall be unlawful for any minor under the age of 18 years to go abroad upon, or to wander about the streets or alleys of the city of Newberg, after the hour of 7 o'clock at night between the first day of November and the first day of April and after the hour of 8 o'clock at night between the first day of April and the first day of November of each and every year; unless such minor shall have the written permission of his or her parents or guardian, or shall be accompanied by such parent or guardian, or unless such minor shall have necessary business upon such streets or alleys. Any minor who shall violate any of the provisions of this ordinance shall upon conviction thereof before the Recorder be fined not less than five nor more than fifteen dollars, or be imprisoned in the city jail not less than two nor more than twenty days, or by both fine and imprisonment at the discretion of the court."

Ada D. Thompson in writing to the Chicago Record from Manila thus describes the great American Admiral, George Dewey: "We seldom see him in Manila, as he rarely leaves his ship, the Olympia. The same is true of all his captains. On December 9 I was taken aboard the admiral's flag ship and introduced by United States Consul Anboy to the hero of Manila bay. I count it a red-letter day in my life. He showed me all over his ship and into the conning tower. He had the gunners show me the working of the guns. Jack Olson, one of the heroes of Santiago, is now chief gunner for the admiral of the Asiatic Squadron. "In personal appearance Admiral Dewey does not resemble his pictures as much as I expected he would. He is a man of medium height, inclined to be stout. His hair and mustache are white, his eyes hazel and he has the complexion of a seafaring man. His manner is free, frank and cordial, though he can express something very different, I am told, when he wishes.

"Out here Admiral Dewey is regarded almost as a king, and people approach him about as we approach the president at home. If he is regarded in the states with anything like the enthusiasm he is here he will certainly be the next president. He has proved himself here more than a naval commander; he is a diplomat and statesman. The diplomacy that he has shown in the various situations that have arisen has aroused the keenest admiration for him here."

A Story of Lincoln.

The death of Joseph Medill recalls the story of a picture of Lincoln the one by which he became known to the country. It was soon after the first nomination of Lincoln for the presidency. The story of the picture is given in Mr. Medill's words as nearly as they can be recalled:

"I knew him so well that I called him Abe and he called me Joe. He came to see me in the Tribune office soon after his nomination. I think I sent for him. I said to him after we had talked of more important matters: "Abe, there are not many people in the country who know how you look. You must have your picture taken. Get ready and I will go with you."

"Snapshots were unknown then and so were newspaper artists, as they are called. Lincoln went to his hotel to fix up and I called for him at the appointed time. I think he saw that I was surprised.

"How do I look?" he asked. His coat was buttoned from top to bottom but it was his hair which caused me to look at him. It was brushed to the side and across his temples as smoothly as if it had been ironed. It was so unlike him that he looked unnatural.

"It will never do," I said as soon as I could recover my breath. Abe you could never be elected president if the country thought you wore your hair that way.

"He looked at me as if he were dazed. He had the heart of a child. He had plastered his hair down that way honestly and innocently. It hurt him to think he had done something he should not have done. That was his nature.

He looked in the mirror and then that expression of humor which I never saw in any other face came out. He took both hands and shoved them through his hair until it looked like a brush heap after a hurricane. Then he looked at me, and I told him that was more like him. We walked to the photographers, several blocks, and my recollection is that he scarcely spoke during the time. When he sat before the camera he ran his long fingers through his hair again and then looked like a child that had been whipped. From that picture all copies for campaign purposes were made, and whatever caricatures and cartoons were made of him during the campaign were suggested by that picture.

Evils that Never Come.

At every stage of events in the Philippines prophets of the dismal order present the dark side of the situation. They never seem to be discouraged by the collapse of their predictions. No sooner is one phase of affairs cleared up favorably than a fresh chapter of dismalmism is opened. Three months ago they insisted that it would take an army of 50,000 men to drive Aguinaldo's army out of its works. But 10,000 proved enough. The expenditures in the Philippines were estimated by opponents of the treaty at hundreds of millions a year. The real figures are quite moderate, with some revenue as an offset. Even the annexation of Hawaii drew forth a warning that it would be necessary to maintain there a strong army and fleet. A few soldiers sufficed and the presence even of one cruiser is not required. There has been talk of a spirit of revolt in Cuba and Porto Rico, but all that has happened is distinctly encouraging.

A favorite assertion of the pessimistic class is that the Philippines cannot be quieted for years. But the change for the better within two weeks has been remarkable. The natives will be given all the home rule they can maintain successfully, and many are finding out that they have no reason for further fighting. The calamity prophet will not down, however. If there had been anything retiring in his nature he would have quit after the presidential campaign in 1898. That was truly a culmination of dreadful forebodings of universal ruin if the gold standard prevailed. Yet the decision to stick to the 100c dollar has been followed by one of the greatest eras of national prosperity. Those who are gloomy in regard to the Philippines will draw it mild if they care to be warned by their uniform failure to make a true forecast of American progress.—Globe Dem.

New Cure for Diphtheria.

Dr. Bracelin, of Davenport, Ia., discoverer of the chlorine gas method of curing and preventing diphtheria, has refrained from patenting his formula, and is preparing to give it to the world as soon as he is satisfied that the remedy will not be discredited by improperly prepared gas. He has given the formula into the hands of the New York Board of Health, and a thorough test has reduced the death rate from this disease from 23 to 3 per cent. The father of a child who was cured by this remedy in New York, Hon. J. J. Russell, of 1123 Broadway has become so much interested in it that he has spent much time and money in the spread of information concerning its use. He has arranged with eminent chemists to have it prepared under the direction of the discoverer of the formula, and can supply it from his New York address or from 167 Dearborn street, Chicago. Physicians and others who are interested in saving the lives of children are invited to write to him for full information. Mr. Russell writes to the Lincoln, (Neb.) Journal:

"You can do your readers no greater service than to tell them of this great remedy. I will say to you that it is absolutely impossible for a person to contract this disease who will inhale the corrected chlorine for 5 minutes or 4 times daily during exposure. Children may live in the room with the most malignant cases of diphtheria, may eat from the same plate and drink from the same cup, and even kiss the corpse of one dead from diphtheria, and in no instance has there ever been known a case during the last three years where the disease was contracted even under the most trying ordeal. It is not a patent medicine or a secret, nor a proprietary remedy. By letting your readers know of its existence you will do a great service to humanity and save many lives and prevent much sorrow in your community."

The U. S. Signal Corps.

Editor Graphic: Perhaps no branch of the military service is as little understood or is so much under estimated as the Signal Corps, which now embraces the telegraph department. It being a staff department, like the engineers, it would be supposed that the corps were always in a safe place in an army when in battle.

On the contrary, at times they are called to occupy the most dangerous positions to be found at the front, and at the tops of hills and mountains, where they can be seen for miles as they carry on their work, frequently with but a small guard to protect them, even in close proximity to the enemy. The advance posts must always be in sight of the enemy, and must report by motion of flags in the daytime and torches at night, which must call immediate attention from the antagonist. They thus become the targets of sharpshooters of every sort from a rifle to a field piece. Their business can scarcely be hidden for any length of time.

It must be fun to climb a telegraph pole or a tree and adjust a wire or spy out an enemy when accompanying an advancing army, with the neighboring woods full of sharpshooters and bushwhackers. Or take a position with an advancing army in the line of skirmishers and perhaps before you know it become the target of every long range gun in the enemies ranks. The organized signal service is of modern date. It was never thoroughly organized in our armies until the last year of the civil war. Gen. Sheridan detailed a regular officer, Capt. Owen Howard, to put it in operation in the Shenandoah Valley in 1864. Capt. Howard soon had the few already detailed collected, and, detaching a number of the brightest young officers to be found in that famous army soon had the whole under the best of discipline and rendered invaluable service.

In a very short time the whole valley was under their observation, communicating with each other often from ten to twenty miles, keeping Sheridan posted as to every move of the foe during the day and reporting every information of scouts at night.

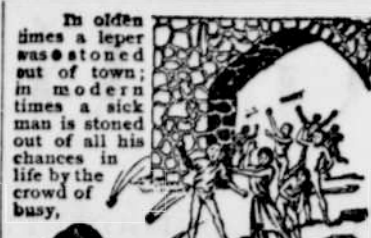

There were many prominent points of observation that have gone into history with that campaign. Maryland Heights, Loudoun Heights, Bolivar Heights, Sugar Loaf, Round Top, Massanutten and Three Top Mountains. It was by information from the signal corps that the day was finally won at Cedar Creek, by discovering and studying out the Confederate signal code, as follows: "Retortion, Va., Oct. 15, 1864.—Lieut. Gen. Early: Be ready to advance on Sheridan as soon as my forces get up, and we can crush him before he finds out I have joined you."

Gen. Wright took immediate action to strengthen the right of his line, where you expected an attack; but his left was turned by Gordon and driven back upon the right, which was able to withstand the shock until the order of the three corps were almost completely reversed and re-formed far to the rear of the original line by Gen. Wright, and ready, under the inspiration of Sheridan when he appeared, to advance and sweep the field.

From that time to the present the necessity for such a corps has been recognized and today is acknowledged to be of the utmost importance to the armies in the field. CHARLES RITTSCHOW, Fort Stevens, Ore. Battery M., 3rd Artillery.

It often times a leper was a stone set out of town in modern times a sick man is stoned out of all his chances in life. He develops in a half-nourished, bile-poisoned constitution. If a man as soon as he feels that he is not getting the forceful strength and energy out of his food that he ought to, will begin taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, he will soon put himself in the position where he can do a man's work easily and cheerfully.

His appetite will be sharpened; his liver invigorated; his digestion strengthened; an edge put on his whole nutritive organism. Those subtle poisons which debilitate the entire organism and invite consumption and a host of other diseases, will be driven out of the system; and he will gain plenty of pure nourishing red blood, muscle, power and nerve-force. In short he will be a man among men.

There are hundreds of delusive temporary stimulants, "malt extracts," "arsenicals" and compounds, which are more or less "boomed" by merely profit seeking druggists, but an honest druggist will give you the "Golden Medical Discovery" when you ask for it. If well-informed, he knows that its sales have steadily increased for thirty years and that it is the invention of an educated, authorized physician who has devoted a life-time of active practice and profound study to chronic diseases.
