

NEWBERG GRAPHIC.

ISSUED EVERY FRIDAY MORNING.

E. H. WOODWARD, EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 29, 1900.

Entered as second-class matter at the postoffice at Newberg, Oregon.

Admiral Dewey sailed into New York last Tuesday morning at an hour when he was not expected. The Spaniards say that was the way he entered the harbor at Manila.

The state fair appears to have been lacking in the necessary gate receipts to make it interesting for the management. Too many things at home to claim the attention of the people.

Hon. J. L. Morrow, an ex-member of the Oregon legislature died at his home in Heppner last week. The deceased was identified with the early settlement of Oregon and the new county of Morrow was named in honor of him in 1885 when a division of Umatilla county was made.

Senator Simon seems to have got all he asked for in making that special trip to Washington to interview the war department with reference to the shipment of troops direct from the Portland harbor for Manila. So long ago acquired a habit of going after a thing just like he meant to get it and he is usually successful in his undertakings.

Demange and Zola, the brave and sturdy defenders of Dreyfus, declare that the latter's pardon, will in no way effect the relentless course of justice. They maintain that they will fight the battle on as zealously as ever, and will never rest, till their efforts result in the detection and prosecution of the guilty, the absolute vindication of their persecuted client, and, thereby, the vindication of the French people. Such courageous devotion to the cause of justice, on the part of these moral heroes, is worthy of greater appreciation than their country is capable of giving.

A girl's experience in Boston, a sparkling serial of Boston life, under the title of "Her Boston Experiences," will begin in the next issue of The Ladies' Home Journal. It is written by Margaret Allston, a vivacious, well-bred girl who spent a winter in Boston with relatives living in the Back Bay and was taken everywhere in the most exclusive social, dramatic, literary and musical circles. She saw the best and the worst of Boston life, and she tells both as she saw them, in a bright but audaciously frank manner, until the picture becomes a perfect biography of Boston life and people of day.

We hereby serve notice that Salem must do something handsome for the state fair of 1900. And she will. And the announcement may as well be made now that it will be a great fair, and an invitation is hereby extended to everybody to come—Salem Statesman.

That's right. It's high time a boom was started in the direction of the Salem fair, if it is ever going to be made a real state fair. This is not exactly the first time we have had the announcement of what it is "going to be," but very considerable omission is made as to what it "is" and "has been." But it pays the Salem papers to be optimistic on the subject, and to have plenty of that article—the substance of things hoped for and the evidence of things rather invisible at the present writing.

Despite much that has been said to the contrary, the Catholic church has given evidence of its loyalty to our government in the prosecution of the war in the Philippines. Cardinal Gibbons, in an interview with the president, the other day assured him of the friendly interest of the church, in the effort to establish American sovereignty in the above mentioned islands. He continued, furthermore, that instead of blaming the government for the manner in which the war has been prosecuted, his church is willing to assist in every way, toward bringing the Filipinos into their proper relations with American government. Let those who feel so disposed, if nothing better to do, rail against the traitorous Catholics, but if consistency is a virtue to be cultivated, so is our "anti-America" brethren had better move out of the proverbial glass house.

For reading "interesting as well as instructive" try the account of the Massachusetts state democratic convention held in Boston last week. Riotous confusion, tumultuous uproar, passionate denunciation, and an anarchy of factional strife reigned unchallenged, despite the efforts of one hundred special police. It doesn't seem so strange however when you consider that political aggression as the source of the ridiculous charge, that, "in reiterated demands for more and more troops to subdue the Tagals may be detected the purpose to have ultimately more soldiers to employ at home, making it possible for monopolistic corporations to secure aid of armed forces, both state and federal, to overawe their workmen in time of labor's dissensions." A campaign built on this kind of a platform will be a veritable tower of Babel, only in the modern instance the confusion of tongues came in the beginning of the game.

For several years Woodburn enjoyed the reputation of being a dry town and many good people located there on that account, but later on the plea was put up that it would be better to let the saloon "follies" in and make the business pay something toward the running expenses of the town in the way of licenses. Well, the bars were let down and here is what the Independent said about the situation over there in a recent issue: "There have been numerous complaints about drunkenness and disorder on our streets last Saturday night. Peace-loving citizens were much disturbed by the profanity, obscenity and crowding of drunks, and at one time it was really dangerous for a law-abiding citizen to be on the street. One man, who seemed to own everything in sight, and who was maddened with drink, threatened to burn the town. The drunken visitors found the rumor correct that they would have the freedom of the city. If the saloons knew when they were well off they would pay out of their own pockets the expense of a night policeman to keep order." In the face of the above statement the Graphic would be glad to hear from some of the good people of Woodburn who used their influence to get saloons admitted. If the town has received any benefit in any way from the change the public would be glad to know it.

Big Earthquake in Alaska.

E. W. Weesner, of Douglas, Alaska, sent to this office a copy of The Alaskan Truth of date of September 15 which gives a graphic account of the recent shaking up they had there. The Truth says:

The vibrations were from northeast to southwest and came in three waves. Houses were shaken until it seemed they must leave their foundations, and the people rushed to the streets, some of the more timid being panic stricken. To an individual in the streets it seemed as though he were standing still and the houses moving and swaying. Mount Juneau appeared to move to and fro as though swayed by the wind. Many pendulum clocks were stopped, and everybody awoke stopped to think. Women were frightened, glasses in the bars and pantries chinked and everybody was either excited or manifested an interest in the phenomenon. The topic of the town was earthquakes and speculation as to the causes, until about three o'clock another slight tremor was felt, and later two more, making a pretty good record of seven for one day.

The effect on Taku inlet must have been grand, as persons arriving since the happening report that great bodies of ice broke away from a glacier, and that the bay is now filled with icebergs. Those who missed the Taku shake-up lost one of nature's grandest exhibitions.

But the greatest effect of the earthquake so far as the Truth is now informed occurred at Yakutat. The steamer Dora arrived at 4 a. m. Thursday bringing news and passengers from the westward. On going into Yakutat the steamer found everybody in a high state of excitement. The natives and whites as well were terrorized, and it was impossible to describe their condition, they were in such a state of fright.

After a most tremendous shock, during which the earth moved so people could not stand upon their feet the Indians retired to the hills for fear of being engulfed by the falling of the earth. The ground cracked open in many places and steam and gas were emitted. On Khatank island the greatest disturbance occurred. Everything movable was shaken to and fro, trees striking and intertwining with each other, rocks rolling from the hills, the ground cracking open and a portion of the island including a graveyard, sinking beneath the water. The earthquake happened at low tide and the water rose fifteen feet in a few minutes, taking away everything movable on the beach.

The French Way of Conducting a Trial.

The daily incidents in the courtroom at Rennes last month were interesting enough, to be sure; but they were comparatively speaking, of transient importance. France is a civilized nation with noble codes of law and a highly trained body of lawyers. French trials are, however, conducted in such a way that many aspects of them seem worse than ridiculous to those accustomed to the methods of the United States and England. Thus the witnesses at the Dreyfus trial were in the main given freedom to tell what they knew in their own way, and were allowed to assert their opinions, beliefs, prejudices, dislikes and emotional points of view as if these were really matters of evidence. Under our rulings such digressions would be severely repressed as irrelevant. And yet it does not follow that our method is so superior to the French in all respects. Our rules of evidence are so technical that it often happens that the ends of substantial justice are wholly defeated because a really significant thing, which a witness would be glad to state and which would clear up the case, is ruled out. In an American trial the lawyers seem to be playing a certain kind of game, with the judge as umpire, under elaborate and extremely technical rules which nobody can hope altogether to understand except the professionals. The witness must under no circumstances tell in his own way what he really knows, thinks or feels about the case, but must answer the lawyer's questions in ways which do not violate the technical rules of evidence. In France, however, it is the judge, not the opposing counsel, who conducts the trial, and what the judge wants of each witness is the revelation of whatever may be in that witness' mind respecting the subject under investigation. It then becomes the subsequent business of the magistrate to get at such grains of legal evidence as may be found in the chaff of the witness' rambling discourse. It would be a rather bold proposition to assert that under our American method substantial justice is rendered in a larger percentage of cases than under the French method. In the Dreyfus case liberty allowed to witnesses on the one side was allowed in about the same measure to those on the other.—From Newberg is rightly known as the little city of churches, and the new Methodist Episcopal church, of which the above is an engraving, has certainly added to her worthy reputation in this direction. The Methodists comprise the second largest congregation in town, ranking next to the Friends, and are a class of earnest, zealous and enthusiastic workers. They have with great labor and self-sacrifice, been able to erect their handsome new church, at a cost of $2000, which in itself is a standing testimonial to their church loyalty. The pastor, Rev. W. J. Waltz, the able leader in the efforts toward the possession of the new building, has endeared himself not only to his own people, but to the citizens of Newberg, and it is with deep feelings of regret on the part of all that he will not remain to enjoy the result of his labors.

The erection of such church edifices means much to Newberg. The very fact of their erection is highly significant. It shows in what our people are interested and what they are willing to support. On the other hand, it signifies some things that they will not support. In short, it means that ours is a city of churches as opposed to that of saloons.

The river was turned through the locks on the Yamhill last Tuesday, and now the work on the permanent dam, which is well under way at one end, will be pushed to completion. The gates have been properly adjusted, and the valves put in place, miter sills fitted and the finishing touches put on the lock itself. Piles for the shore end of the permanent dam and for the revetment to protect the shore above and below the dam are already driven and everything is now in shape for prosecuting the work of completing the locks and dam with dispatch.—Reporter.

Once or twice a year the good housewife has a thorough house cleaning. The house has been swept and dusted every day in the year, but the housewife knows that in spite of vigilance dust accumulates in cracks and corners, and is only to be removed by special effort.

It's the same way with the body. You look after it every day. You take all the ordinary precautions of cleanliness and health. Yet the body needs its special cleaning to rid it of the accumulations of waste and poisonous matter which invite disease. Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, taken regularly once or twice a year, would save many a sickness. It purifies the blood, strengthens the stomach, and cleanses the body of poisonous accumulations.

"Last spring I had a severe attack of pneumonia, which left me with a bad cough, and also left my lungs in a very bad condition," writes John M. Russell, Esq., of Brent, Cherokee Nat. Ind. Ter. "I had no appetite and was so weak I could scarcely walk. My breast was all sore with running sores. I got two bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which I believe saved my life. I cannot express my gratitude to you. I am able now to do very good work."

NEARLY FIFTY-EIGHT YEARS OLD ! !

It's a long life, but devotion to the true interests and prosperity of the American People has won for it new friends as the years rolled by and the original members of its family passed to their reward, and these admirers are loyal and steadfast today, with faith in its teachings, and confidence in the information which it brings to their homes and firesides.

As a natural consequence it enjoys in its old age all the vitality and vigor of youth, strengthened and ripened by the experiences of over half a century.

It is "The New-York Weekly Tribune," acknowledged the country over as the leading National Family Newspaper.

Recognizing its value to those who desire all the news of the State and Nation, the publisher of "The Graphic" (your own favorite home paper) has entered into an alliance with "The New-York Weekly Tribune" which enables him to furnish both papers at the trifling cost of $1.50 per year.

Every farmer and every villager owes to himself, to his family, and to the community in which he lives a cordial support of his local newspaper, as it works constantly and untiringly for his interests in every way, brings to his home all the news and happenings of his neighborhood, the doings of his friends, the condition and prospects for different crops, the prices in home markets, and, in fact, is a weekly visitor which should be found in every wide awake, progressive family.

Just think of it! Both these papers for $1.50 a year.
