FRIDAY, MARCH 16, 1900.

Entered as second-class matter at the postoffice at Newberg, Oregon.

All the law breaker asks is simply to be let alone.

"What's so rare as a day in—March?" begging the poet's pardon.

Senator Simon has taken a courageous stand against the Porto Rican tariff bill. We admire the men who have the courage to declare and defend their own personal convictions, regardless of political affiliations. They are of the stuff which makes a nation great.

Some men who have boys who need careful guarding to keep them from taking the road that leads to ruined lives, are free to excuse and cry "persecution" when mention is made of the illicit sale of liquors in Newberg. "For they have sown the wind, and they shall reap the whirlwind."

As the time for the first district convention draws near Mr. Tongue's chances for renomination grow stronger. There is no united opposition to him whatever. Is all right and proper for the different delegations if they feel so disposed to give complimentary recognition to favorite sons on the first ballot, but after that there will be a grand rush for Tongue and the band wagon.

Set something new every spring and fall—it will benefit some one. Grape vine, berry, or rose bush, fruit tree or shrub. We have tried all and the pleasure of planting and seeing them grow is worth more than the cost. When we have gathered the fruit and beautiful flowers, our only regret is that we have not done more along this line. Celebrate the birthdays with a tree planting, thus having arbor days all through the year.—Pacific Farmer.

Taylor, of Kentucky, now assumes to be a candidate for Vice-President on the Republican ticket. If such an idea were not maddening it would be amusing. —Albany Democrat.

While mostly a product of the Democrat's fertile inventive genius, we can easily understand why "such an idea" would be maddening—to the democrats. Nothing is so unpleasant as a continual reminder of one's own baseness and crime. The very intimation of the name of Taylor is a veritable "Banquo's ghost" to the democrats.

The Oregonian and the Washington county press are having a spirited and slightly acrimonious contention as to Congressman Tongue's record on the money question. It seems scarcely necessary and hardly worth the space it occupies. What's the good of resurrecting the ghosts of bygone years? The question is, how does Mr. Tongue stand now? Whatever he may once have believed in the misty past, he is now out and out for the gold standard as everybody knows, thus presenting himself in refreshing contrast to the proverbial fool who never changes his mind.

The Boers hate the English. Why? Because the English have lavished kindness on them? That is not probable. The arrogance and greed of the Englishmen with whom the Boers have come in contact have bred in them a hatred of England and everything English. England cannot rule the Boers, after she whips them, except with a large standing army. Oil and water will not mix. Courier-Herald.

Whatever the merits of the South African question, the above displays poor logic, poorer insight into human nature and the poorest knowledge of South African history. Suffice it to remark that it is the perversity of human nature to hate those we have ill-used.

Senator McBride has been chosen a member of the republican committee on "order of business" for the upper house of congress, which committee will practically decide what measures shall have priority of consideration in the senate during the present session. The other members of the committee are Senators Allison, Hale, Hanna, Aldrich, Sewall, Walcott, Spooner and Elkins. Wonder if any one is going to get up and say this committee is "composed of the small men of the senate," as has been done in other cases, including that on the Philippines as well as the commerce committee, containing the leaders of the upper house? The Statesman hopes that the "order of business committee" will get the Nicaragua canal measure to the front, and it will no doubt do so if Senator McBride has his way.—Statesman.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Senator Clark's hair is so red that it spreads a golden halo all over the legislative districts of Montana.—Globe-Democrat.

As the germs of smallpox appear to be pretty well scattered all over the Northwest, it is pertinent to remark that an ounce of vaccination is worth a pound of smallpox.—Milton Eagle.

"Harmony whisky" is the name of an article now extensively advertised. That's the kind the democrats, populists and silver republicans will need in the coming campaign.—Statesman.

If Gov. Taylor is ever placed on trial in Kentucky it will be for receiving a plurality of the votes of the state. That offense excites the venomous hatred of the Goebelites.—Globe-Democrat.

Nearly every town in the valley is talking creamery now-a-days. If they all succeed there will be more creameries than cows. Better get the cream first.—Silverton Appeal.

Now it is said that the people of Nicaragua want to be annexed to the United States. As we are about to build the Nicaragua canal, and will invest several million dollars down there, it might be the part of wisdom to annex Nicaragua. The country through which the canal will pass will be Americanized anyway. —Albany Herald.

Bryan declines to discuss the desertion of Sewall, his late running mate. It was not so long ago he stated in an interview that he had yet to find a man who supported silver in 1896 who did not support it now. It was really unkind of Mr. Sewall to shatter the colonel's silvery dream in such a rude manner.—Headlight.

True to the traditions of their party—destruction, but not construction—the democratic senators in caucus had nothing more substantial to offer each other or the country, than a continuation of opposition to the republican policy towards the new possessions of the U. S. In other words, they object to the republican policy, but have nothing better to propose.—Clatskanie Chief.

A very prominent gentleman in the shaping of politics in this state, who is personally opposed to Congressman Tongue, admitted to the writer the other day that Mr. Tongue was the ablest and best man in the district, and there was no reason other than personal why he should not be returned. This statement will reflect the sentiment of a majority of the people of the district, too.—Forest Grove Times.

The past winter has been one of the most favorable for the live stock industry that Eastern Oregon has experienced for a number of years. But little feed has been used and stock has come through the winter in prime condition. This condition of affairs together with prevailing prices of stock places the cattle and sheepmen of this section on the shady side of easy street.—Elgin Recorder.

The latter day democratic "statesmen" and press, who are so glibly berating the republican party and offering advice as to just how the republicans are doing everything wrong, might more profitably attend to missionary work in their own household. They have about wrecked their own party with ovecdoses of populistic fallacies, and have made such a dismal failure of late years that the average voter doubts very much their ability to give any kind of sound political advice. Their party, without a name, platform, or principles, needs to reform itself before attempting the wholesale job of reforming the world.—Herald.

THE DAIRY TYPE.

A Paper read before the Chehalem Dairymen's Association.

The dairy cow is a machine for converting food into milk. In order for her to do this successfully she must be almost the opposite from the beef breeds, as beef cattle convert their food into beef. In selecting a dairy cow we first look at her from in front and see that she has a nice horn, small neck of good length, head rather lean, and widens from shoulders back to hips. Next pass around to the side, here we notice her rise on back from shoulders to tail, and descend on belly, making her wedge shape. She should be by all means large barreled with good digestive organs, so that she can work up large quantities of rough feed and convert it into milk. The more she will eat if the right kind of a cow, the more profit there is in keeping her.

It takes a certain amount of feed to keep the animal alive, and all she will eat above that amount should be converted into milk. This explains why a cow should have a large stomach capacity. We are liable in selecting a wedge shaped cow to select one with a weak constitution if we are not careful, as she may be narrow in front and not have good lung capacity. The next point we should notice is the udder, first it should be large, extend well up behind, run forward well, it should be broad and have four well placed teats, set wide apart, of good size and extend straight down. We now approach the cow and place our hand on her. The hair should be short and hide should feel like a glove. We notice a large bright eye in a great many cases. It shows that she is a little nervous about strangers, but after her confidence is gained she is gentle enough. We ought to see large milk veins, and the more crooked the better. If we run our hand along the belly we should find holes or milk wells where the veins enter the body, that we could stick the end of a finger into.

Next is the escutcheon which is of more importance than a great many think for. The escutcheon is the hair running upwards on the back part of the udder, thigh, and also what is called virticle escutcheon. The name was derived from its similarity to a shield or escutcheon. It ought to be somewhat the shape of a shovel on a first class cow. On the escutcheon the hair will be shorter and finer than that bordering it and will resemble fur. The skin should be very soft. If the cow gives rich milk the skin will be a rich golden color. The thigh escutcheon or lower part is the principal part, as lots of good cows don't have the virticle escutcheon. If we find a cow with a good shape in every way and her escutcheon extends wide out and high up on her thighs we will generally have a good one.

Most people have their way of selecting a dairy cow. Some will select one if her tail is the proper length, others if the tail is small and is yellow on the end of the bone. A person, I think, is liable to fail on deciding on any of these points. Study the shape and make up of the whole cow from head to tail and then decide. Don't forget to be sure that her hips are large and rather bony and that her large udder has plenty of room to project between her legs. Then we feel sure that we have a dairy type—rather bony and not too fleshy, the contrary to which we find in a beef producing animal. Here is where the dual purpose, all purpose, no purpose cow fails. The dairy type will be found in the breeds that have been bred that way for hundreds of years. Of course there are exceptions to all rules. We may find a good dairy cow among the beef breeds but from that one, we may have to raise a dozen heifer calves before we get another good cow.

Even though the all purpose cow is a good dairy animal, it costs more to keep a thirteen hundred pound critter than one that weighs eight hundred and fifty pounds. If it requires feed according to weight it will cost two thirds as much to keep the eight hundred and fifty pound cow as it does the thirteen hundred pound cow. So if the dual purpose cow is equal to the dairy cow in making butter it costs one third more to keep the critter alive. We will say the cost is one and one-fourth cents per day more, or $4.50 per year, for eight years or the average time the cows would be in their prime, $36.48. You may say the calves are worth more from the all purpose cow and she is worth more for beef. The heifer calves from the dairy cow will most all make good dairy animals while from the all purpose cow they will not. The bull calves from the larger breeds will be worth one third more for veal, or about $3 each, and in eight years there will be about four of them which equals $12 more than for bull calves of the dairy breed. The dairy cow is still $24.48 ahead. You may get $24.48 more for the beef from your dual purpose breed but your heifer calves are not as good as the heifer calves from the dairy breed. So where is the benefit of keeping the all purpose cow if we could get one equally as good as the dairy animal? We may raise or buy a dozen in order to get one good one.

In conclusion I will say, in building up our dairy herd we should select the dairy type, give her the right kind of care and feed, prove her by the Scales and Babcock test, then stay with her and we will succeed.

3 Brave Men Fall.

Victims to stomach, liver and kidney trouble as well as women, and all feel the results in loss of appetite, poisons in the blood, backache and nervousness, headache and tired, listless, run-down feeling. But there's no need to feel like that. Listen to J.W. Gardner, Idaville, Ind. He says: "Electric Bitters are just the thing for a man when he is all run down, and don't care whether he lives or dies. It did more to give me new strength and good appetite than anything I could take. I can now eat anything and have a new lease on life. Only 50c. at C.E. Smith's drug store. Every bottle guaranteed.

The Loyal Mountaineers in the War of the Union.

The loyalty of this region in the Civil War was a surprise to both Northern and Southern statesmen. The mountain people owned land, but did not own slaves, and the national feeling of the Revolutionary period had not spent its force among them. Their services in West Virginia and east Tennessee are perhaps generally known. But very few know or remember that the whole mountain region was loyal. Gen. Carl Schurz had soldiers enlisted in the mountains of Alabama, and the writer has recently seen a letter written by the Confederate governor of South Carolina in which he relates to General Hardee the troubles caused by Union sentiment in the mountain counties.

It is pathetic to know how these mountain regiments disbanded with no poet or historian or monument to perpetuate the memory of their valor. The very flag that was first on Lookout Mountain and "waved above the clouds" was lost to fame in an obscure mountain home when Berea discovered it and rescued it from oblivion and destruction. —From "The Southern Mountaineer," in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for March.

3 Their Business Booming.

Probably no one thing has caused such a general reviving of trade at C. E. Smith's drug store as his giving away to his many customers of so many free trial bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. Their trade is simply enormous in this very valuable remedy, from the fact that it always cures and never disappoints. Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Croup, and all throat and lung diseases are quickly cured. You can test it before buying by getting a trial bottle free, large size 50c. and $1.00 Every bottle warranted.

A little social life is good for one. As time goes on, and the old friends have gone to their promotion, it is well to keep up one's interest in the world of to-day by cultivating friendly relations with those about us.—March Ladies' Home Journal.

Republican Central Committee.

March 10, 1900.

Republican county central committee met and was called to order by J. E. Magers, chairman, at 1.30 p. m. In the absence of secretary, Clarence Butt was chosen secretary.

The roll was called and sixteen responded to their names.

On motion it was decided to hold two conventions, and that the first one be held to elect delegates to the district and congressional convention.

On motion it was decided to hold primaries on the 31st of March and the county convention be held April 5.

On motion the apportionment was placed at 1 for every 10 or fraction of 5 or over cast for T.T. Geer for governor in 1898. This will give 165 delegates apportioned as follows in the various precincts:

After discussing various topics of interest, the meeting adjourned.—Transcript.

It is very hard to stand idly by and see our dear ones suffer while awaiting the arrival of the doctor. An Albany (N. Y.) dairyman called at a drug store there for a doctor to come and see his child, then very sick with croup. Not finding the doctor in, he left word for him to come at once on his return. He also bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which he hoped would give some relief until the doctor should arrive. In a few hours he returned, saying the doctor need not come, as the child was much better. The druggist Mr. Otto Sholz, says the family has since recommended Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to their neighbors and friends until he has a constant demand for it from that part of the country.
