Entered as second class matter at the postoffice at Newberg, Oregon.

"The Impossible Boer," which journals have been writing heavy editorials about, continues to convince John Bull that he is entirely possible if not probable.

If so much important work is piling up at Washington upon the Oregon delegation, as correspondence indicates, and measures pending fraught with so great interest to our state, the natural query is, why isn't our full delegation present and attending to business. If it were a certain other member absent, a mighty howl would go up from high places.

A bill introduced in congress this week, having in view the suppression of train robbery, should at least receive very careful attention. It fixes the penalty for holding up a train, at from twenty to forty years in the penitentiary at hard labor, while if the death of any person on the train results from the hold up, capital punishment is prescribed. If such a measure would check in any appreciable degree the frequent operations of the "knights of the road," it should pass. The first provision, a long period at hard labor, is certainly a good one, and while the advisability of capital punishment is always a question, while it is in use, the man who causes death in holding up a train, deserves the extreme penalty, along with the man who murders.

The proposition made by the Oregon Historical Society that a great industrial exposition of the Northwest be held in 1905 to commemorate the Lewis and Clark expedition, should meet with general favor and commendation. The opening up of this vast and resourceful empire of the West is certainly worthy of such commemoration, and of the large monument which it is proposed to build near the mouth of the Columbia. And aside from the historical standpoint, which is sufficient reason in itself, there is also to be considered the material benefits to our country which would certainly accrue from such a national exposition. Oregon has a good opportunity now to get in, rub off some of the moss, and show what she can do in the way of rustling for a great enterprise.

The whole country has been shocked of late over the reports of fiendish hazes of our "higher" institutions of learning. They were considered the regular thing a generation ago, but we had complimented ourselves that this relic of barbarism had been relegated, but it seems that a trace still remains. The latest affair of prominence took place last week at the academy of Northwestern University, and the following comment made in Sunday's Oregonian, is right to the point. "The cultured city of Evanston owes its reputation the prevention of future hazing affairs like the one just reported from Northwestern Academy. To ignore the criminal aspect of the episode, the act of the students, who stripped a young man in the freezing winds of the lake shore, dandled him with ink and soap, buffeted him about until he lost consciousness, and at the door of his lodgings abandoned him to his fate, would be a blot upon the civilization of a backwoods village, to say nothing of a place that prides itself upon its light and learning. Where is the refinement of these creatures, who take pleasure in the sight of a naked boy shivering in the winter wind and trembling with fear? Where is their culture, who find enjoyment in the spectacle of a nude body bedaubed and disfigured with ink and soap? Where their taste, who forget the part of amity toward a homesick youth among strangers and add to the misery of his lot? Where their humanity, who combine hands against one, reverse the code of chivalry, and offer a companion violence and exposure that may easily end in his loss of health, reason or life itself? It would compliment these young hoodlums to call them barbarians—they are savages in the lowest scale of development. The evolution of thousands of years, the uplifting labors of religion and education, are lost upon them. They should be forbidden their school and any school. The net result of education upon such villainous stock is bad, it makes its evil more potent. Any man that knows enough to pursue a collegiate education should know enough to be decent and manly."

Newberg Still to the Front. The mass meeting held in Crater's hall last Friday evening demonstrated conclusively that Newberg's spirit of enterprise is a fixed quantity, and does not consist merely in a spurt now and then for some specially desired object. The meeting was well attended, and a spirit of energy and determination pervaded it, as attested by the answer given to the appeal made to the pocket books. The scope, purpose and results of the meeting may best be understood in the language of the speakers of the evening, and extracts are here given from what was said.

As president of the Newberg Development Company, Jesse Edwards presided. He first told what he knew of conditions relative to our beet sugar factory, to the effect that Dr. Kohn and the Eastern capitalists had disagreed and fallen out, but that other negotiations were on foot, and we can only await their development. He continued, "I am far from discouraged over the prospect, but am rather encouraged. We have the location and natural advantages and capital will be found to take hold of the enterprise. Some people have said that if we did not get the factory we would have a dead town. This is not so. Newberg is better and more favorably known than ever before. We are far from dead. What we want is not to drop the sugar factory project, but to see what else we can do. The purpose of the meeting is to exchange sentiments along this line and arrive at some unanimity of action." Mr. Edwards then spoke in behalf of the creamery, showing what its success will mean to the community. He stated that Newberg is being regarded as a center by adjacent towns, and that Sherwood is contemplating putting in a skimming station and bringing cream to our creamery, and that there was some sentiment at Dayton and La Fayette. He also dwelt upon the necessity of adopting some scheme for locating immigrants here.

W. C. Kruger: "We must not be discouraged because the factory is not here. We may be sure that some effect will come of our advertising. We must keep advertising and keep the town before the people. The question is, can people find a better place for a home than in Yamhill county and in the vicinity of Newberg. More money may be made in other places, but other advantages considered, ours is the ideal place for location, and people must learn the fact."

Clarence Butt said that the past and what we have done should not claim our attention so much as the future and what we are going to do. He spoke of the country across the river, which should be tributary to Newberg, and advocated beginning work on some scheme for communication. He spoke too of the needs of a cannery. In his estimation what we need most right now is definite plans and organization.

G. C. Carl made a characteristic, enthusiastic speech which was heartily received. He traced the development of his old home county, Coos, to its system of dairying, emphasizing the great benefits received from its many creameries. The industry there changed business relations from a credit to a cash basis, and it will do it for us. What we want is a spirit of push. A traveling man said in Newberg that "What God and the government gives, Portland gets, and what push and energy will do Seattle does." We can well emulate the spirit of the Sound city in this respect. Mr. Carl dwelt upon the necessity of continual advertising as the only means of growth. We must sow if we reap.

H. A. Grafe strongly endorsed the establishment of a cannery. He thought it would take little capital and would be the means of making a profit on our waste fruits. Other short talks were made, but throughout all the discussion, the advisability of liberal advertising was emphasized. Subscriptions were finally called for, to this end, and twenty-five dollars a month was raised, or one hundred and fifty dollars. A committee was appointed to raise this amount to three hundred dollars. This was a very liberal response, considering that our citizens were drained so heavily during the canvass for sugar beet acreage, and is very encouraging. As Frank Story said, people declared that we couldn't raise the 5000 beet acreage, but we did. People also said if the factory didn't come right away, we would die a natural death, but "Here we are bobbing up and right at it again." It means that Newberg is going to the front.

A Notable Meeting of a Presidential Cabinet. Even the silence of cabinet walls is broken by wholesome and sincere touches of official affection, as well as by imputed designs and intrigue. It was the first meeting of President McKinley's cabinet after the election. There was no unseemly exultation, but an air of increased responsibility and seriousness appeared all pervading. The President arose and greeted the members of his official family in that kindly way which has won their deep respect and confidence. There was only one vacant chair, and his reference to Secretary Root's trip to Cuba in the interests of the great purpose of the administration was a tribute heartily endorsed by the secretary's associates gathered about the table. The President concluded with a notable request, asking each member of the cabinet to remain, and also his secretary, George B. Cortelyou, not-withstanding the fact that it has always been the custom of members of the cabinet to hand in their resignations at the close of each administration, and to reorganize for the next. He said he realized that their service entailed a sacrifice to each one, but he wanted them to know that he deeply appreciated their loyalty to the country's welfare. Secretary Hay was the first to break the brief lull, and each secretary followed in a man-to-man tribute to his chief, speaking right from the heart with a unanimity which has perhaps never been paralleled in a presidential cabinet, after the friction of so long and so important public service. It must indeed have been touching to witness such an expression of confidence and affection between ministers, representing vastly varied interests, sections, and indeed, men of widely different temperaments. Sincerely unselfish, sincere and unselfish to the last degree, President McKinley was given a hand-grasp which was more than an official formality. The session lasted long into the afternoon, and was altogether an unusual and remarkable event, and entirely impromptu and spontaneous. A spirited and informal chat over election matters and experiences and future work continued even after adjournment, and the members departed

Training

Is indispensable to athletic success. In training, much stress is laid upon diet; careful attention to the quantity and quality of the food eaten, with regularity of meals. That is the secret of strength for every man. No man can be stronger than his stomach. The careless and irregular eating, of business men, causes disease of the stomach and its allied organs of digestion and nutrition. There can be no sound health until these diseases are cured. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition, and enables the body to be built up into vigorous health by the assimilation of the nutrition extracted from food. "I was taken with the grippe, which resulted in heart and stomach trouble," writes Mr. T. P. Cavdill of Montland, Alleghany Co., N. C. "I was unable to do anything a good part of the time. I wrote to Dr. Pierce about my condition having full confidence in his medicine. He advised me to take his Golden Medical Discovery, which I did. Before I had finished the second bottle I began to feel better. I have used nearly six bottles. I feel thankful to God for the benefit I have received from Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I highly recommend it to all persons as a good and safe medicine." Dr. Pierce's Pellets cure constipation.

For Malaria, Chills and Fever. THE BEST PRESCRIPTION IS Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic. The formula is plainly printed on every bottle—hence you know just what you are taking when you take Grove's. Imitators do not advertise their formula knowing that you would not buy their medicine if you knew what it contained. Grove's contains Iron and Quinine put up in correct proportions and is in a Tasteless form. The Iron acts as a tonic while the Quinine drives the malaria out of the system. Any reliable druggist will tell you that Grove's is the Original and that all other so-called Tasteless Chill Tonics are imitations. An analysis of other chill tonics shows that Grove's is superior to all others in every respect. You are not experimenting when you take Grove's—its superiority and excellence having long been established. Grove's is the only Chill Cure sold throughout the entire malarial sections of the United States. No Cure, No Pay. Price, 50c.
