Tom L. Johnson of Cleveland of democratic presidential aspirations can content himself with the sage observation that the candidate is not without honor save in his own country.

The Kansas City Platform proved to be a veritable Banquo's ghost to the Ohio state democratic convention held this week. While the real desire of the convention seemed to be to give it a quiet interment, it persisted in looming up ominously in the background.

Perry Belmont advises the democracy in favor of a removal from the party of Bryan and Croker. This timely advice has called up the story of the surgeon who told a patient suffering from gangrene that it would be necessary to remove him from his diseased foot.

An Illinois editor remarks that since Mark Hanna has been made a colonel there is no evident reason why Bryan should again refuse to meet Mark in debate on the ground that the Ohioan is not in his class; both are colonels, and one has seen as much service as the other.

It seems to be something of a fad with so called historical students, to tear down the good names of some of our illustrious heroes from the pedestals long ago erected in the hearts of admiring countrymen. The man who can diminish the luster of Whitman for his famous rids for Oregon, or can ascribe ulterior motives to some self-sacrificing patriot, thinks he has done a service to posterity. If so, it is of doubtful worth at best. Not that we should be afraid of historical truth, but let not truth be entrusted to the care of carping critics. Human nature is prone enough to see the evil side, without having it continually emphasized, and the man who can do nothing better than help instill a suspicion that the day of virtue and heroism is gone, if in fact it ever existed, had best bury his doubtful talent in a napkin. General O. O. Howard spoke to the point in a public address the other day when he said he distrusted all fierce triumph which some men manifest when they show or think they show that Washington was not a good man; that Shakespeare did not write the books attributed to him and that Moses was not the composer of the Pentateuch.

The death at LaFayette last Saturday of Dr. J. W. Watts, calls up one of the dramatic incidents of American political history, a leading part of which was played by Dr. Watts. The presidential campaign of 1876 was sensationally close, the result of the election not being declared until the day before the inauguration; when the electoral commission declared Rutherford B. Hayes elected over Samuel J. Tilden. From the election in November until March 4, the spirit of sectional partisanship had run rampant through the country and it seemed for a time that a recourse to arms would be made. In that memorable contest Oregon was the pivot upon which the result hinged. The vote in the electoral college was so close that whichever way Oregon's electors voted, it voted the electoral college. In the November election, the Oregon republicans and won by a small margin, but a democratic governor, Grover, refused to give Dr. Watts a certificate of election as elector on the ground that being postmaster at LaFayette, he was ineligible, being a federal office holder. Dr. Watts had already resigned as postmaster however and stoutly maintained his right to serve. Gov. Grover, however, gave credentials to E. A. Cronin, the democratic candidate polling the highest vote, as the third member of this state's electors. The two republican electors refused to act with him, whereupon he declared their seats vacant and called two democrats present to serve in their places. They then voted, Cronin for Tilden the other two for Hayes. Meanwhile the three republican electors had organized and cast their vote for Hayes. This put the votes of two sets of electors before the National Electoral College, with a difference between them of one vote, and that one vote whichever way cast, would select the new President of the United States. The possession of that vote became a fiercely fought national issue, the decision being declared by the electoral commission March 3, in favor of the republican electors. Dr. J. W. Watts will thus go down in history as the man, who with one vote elected a President of the United States.

THE FRIENDS COLLEGE. Portland Evening Telegram. Among the useful and praiseworthy educational institutions of Oregon is the Newberg College, founded and maintained by the Society of Friends, or Quakers. This school celebrated its annual commencement recently, and was able to make a better showing than at any former occasion. The college, like most of those organized and maintained chiefly or partly by a church, is not sectarian sufficiently to interfere with its educational usefulness. It gives youth a good, fair and sufficient education, and at the same time looks carefully after their moral and religious welfare. The Friends are a strictly moral people, practicing in their daily life what they preach and profess. They make no great noise in the world, but they live useful, upright lives, and almost invariably set a moral example in the community that is worthy of emulation and admiration. The influence of such a society and of such a college as that at Newberg, is greater than is apt to be understood or estimated. It makes for better, cleaner, purer living, not only in this generation, but for all time to come. Young men and women who get these clean, straight, steady ideas of living, feeling a deep sense of responsibility to the country, the community, the home and to themselves, become "the salt of the earth." It is such men and women that the Newberg College turns out, clean, upright, worthy young people, fitted to act a manly, womanly part, to lead useful, intelligent lives. The Newberg College is, therefore, worthy of public commendation and approbation, and of liberal support.

Profits in Dairying.

No branch of agriculture in the Willamette valley has made greater progress in the last few years than dairying. No other, in the years to come, will be of greater benefit to the farmer to return the fertility of the soil that has been shipped down the Willamette river in the form of wheat, and also bring a double profit of hay, corn and grain, one for growing the crop, the other for feeding it.

Dairying is going to become a specialty of districts, and no district in the valley is better adapted to the business than Chehalis and the surrounding country.

We can produce an abundance of clover, vetches, corn, and with proper rotation of crops, wheat and oats for the dairy cow. We are also located near the principal markets and shipping points. Our butter during the last year was shipped to the hungry miner of the north and the soldier of the Philippines. The demand has continued greater than the supply; our wholesale man has written the creamery a number of times, to increase the output if possible, as there was no butter on the market that was better than Newberg creamery.

Our creamery is making a slow progress, but there is an improvement. In January 1900, there was a difference of 5 cents per pound between the wholesale price of butter and the price the patrons received for butter fat. In January 1901, the difference was only 2 1/2 cents. With double the output at the present time, and careful management, we can manufacture butter at still less cost per pound. I want to say here to those that are going into the dairy business, don't wait until next year or some other time, but commence as soon as you can. It can be readily seen the more butter made the more profit to patrons.

One county in Minnesota received about two million dollars for butter alone in one year. Oregon, with her mild climate and unlimited supply of moisture to produce forage crops and pasture the year round, contains counties such as Yamhill and many others, I have no doubt that are just as well adapted to dairying as any county in Minnesota. All they lack is development.

Wheat farmers, the trouble is in harvest, where waded during years gone by the golden grain, now French pink, dog fennel and bugs appear. Dairying and stock is our only hope. The time came in other states when there had to be a change, and now the time has come in Oregon.

To show the profits in dairying, I will give a short statement of our cows for the year ending January 1, 1901. Part of them were helpers. If the income is not so large as others report, age must be taken into consideration. Our cows are most all high grades and thoroughbred Jerseys. We received $51.65 for butter fat, $6.70 value of skimmed milk at 15 cents per 100. Our calves are worth more than $10 per head, but we will figure them at $5. Total income of each cow for one year was $63.35. We also made a good profit in feeding the skimmed milk to calves and pigs.

The young calves and skimmed milk will more than pay for the labor of taking care of the cows, and also the pasture. Then we only have the feed, which amounts to $21.55, to deduct from the $51.65, leaving a profit of $27.10 on each cow for the year.

Our feed consisted of bran, cost $12 per ton; clover hay, valued at $5; corn silage, valued at $1.50 per ton. Of the $24.55 only $14.75 was paid out for feed, as the corn, clover and vetches were grown on the farm. Our plan is to grow clover for hay, vetches, clover and corn for green feed, and exchange our wheat for bran, as bran fed in connection with the above feed is worth nearly as much pound for pound, as wheat, while its market value is only about three fourths that of wheat.

In January, February and March we fed 8 pounds of bran, 30 pounds corn silage and clover hay. April, May and June, just enough bran to make the cows good natured, so they will go into the barn to be milked.

They run on good pasture during both day and night. July, August and September the feed consisted of 8 pounds bran, vetches during the first six weeks, then green corn the remainder of the time, with pasture. October, November and December, 8 pounds bran, 30 pounds corn silage, clover hay and pasture. The above is an average amount fed to the herd. Some cows ate more and some less.

We try to have most of our cows fresh in the fall, so they will give a good flow of milk during the winter months, while butter is a good price. When grass grows in the spring they will not go dry until we want to dry them off, which is about a month or six weeks before they freshen. When cows come fresh in the spring they will not give as much milk during the year as fall cows will, and during the time the spring cows are fresh butter is cheap.

Here is where a great many just commencing the dairy business fail. They buy cows fresh in the spring. Some of them will be good cows, while others will want to go dry as soon as the dry season comes on. The beginner will have a lot of strippers on hand to feed during the winter, get disgusted with the business and declares dairying does not pay; while it is not the fault of the business, but the cows and the management that are to blame.

Dairying is a business and should be conducted on business principles. Milk regularly, feed regularly, be acquainted with the cows, take good care of the calves. Don't be afraid to invest a few dollars to improve the herd.

I have talked with a few people who are a little skeptical in regard to the future price of dairy products. Dairymen in other states were afraid there would be an over production, and they found markets, though not so high as in former years, but with our improved methods of the twentieth century, the dairy cow herself, upon which the whole business rests, is a different creature from a few years ago. The dairyman that has attended an agricultural college or reads dairy papers, who knows the value of the different kinds of feed, and what it takes to make a balanced ration is far ahead of the man that does everything by guess. The cream separator is one of the greatest improvements of the age. The time is coming when the milk pans will be no longer seen around the farm house, as the hand separator is fast taking their place. With the silo and the siloing crops to furnish green feed the year around, dairying has been changed from the drudgery of the past to a pleasant and profitable business of the present. With all these improvements we can produce butter much cheaper than our forefathers did.

All that is lacking today is the milking machine, so that we can touch the button and it will do the rest. J. M. ATKINSON.

Young Girls

Are often engaged in doing the work of a home under the most trying conditions. Nature cries out against the stooping and lifting, the running up and down stairs at times when labor should be as light as possible.

It is owing to overstrain or self-neglect under these conditions that the foundation is laid for serious womanly disease. Irregularity is the first step to impaired womanly health. Perfect regularity may be established by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It will heal inflammation and ulceration and cure female weakness. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

"It gives me much pleasure," writes Miss Ella Sepp of Jamestown, Gullford County, N. C., "to thank Dr. Pierce for the great good received from the use of his 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery'."

I had suffered for three years or more at monthly periods. It seemed as though I would die with pain in my back and stomach. I could not stand at all without fainting. Had given up all hope of ever being cured, when one of my friends insisted upon my trying Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. With but little faith I tried it, and before I had taken half a bottle I felt better. Now I have taken two bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and one of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and I am entirely cured, and in two months' time when all other medicines had failed."

For Malaria, Chills and Fever. THE BEST PRESCRIPTION IS Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic. The formula is plainly printed on every bottle—hence you know just what you are taking when you take Grove's. Imitators do not advertise their formula knowing that you would not buy their medicine if you knew what it contained. Grove's contains Iron and Quinine put up in correct proportions and is in a Tasteless form. The Iron acts as a tonic while the Quinine drives the malaria out of the system. Any reliable druggist will tell you that Grove's is the Original and that all other so-called Tasteless Chill Tonics are imitations. An analysis of other chill tonics shows that Grove's is superior to all others in every respect.
