FRIDAY, OCTOBER 11, 1901.

It is pointedly suggested that less freedom of speech throughout the United States will be conducive to more freedom of person.

The Yankee yacht having won the whole series of races with Lipton's challenger, Shamrock II, the coveted cup remains in Uncle Sam's cupboard, and the people again take up the refrain, "Columbia, the gem of the ocean."

The football season has again arrived, when the shock-headed and gory line bucker is the idol of the hour, when the parlance of the gridiron takes precedence of all other topics in social circles and when sluggish blood runs riot with enthusiasm at the sight of deeds of dash and daring.

The "regret" dispatches of Lord Kitchener are again going into the British war department with a disheartening frequency, while the prospect of that Pretoria Christmas dinner beats a Kansas mirage in demonstrating the illusions of life. For ways that are dark and peculiar the Boer is getting up next to the heathen Chinese.

If the people of New York city really wish to free themselves from Tammany rule as they aver so loudly, the day of their deliverance is probably at hand. With the reform forces, or independents, and the republicans united on such a man as Seth Low it seems that the grip obtained on the throat of the tiger might prove effective unless shaken loose by indifferent and double dealing voters.

The United States is arranging to ransom Miss Stone, the American missionary who was several days ago captured by bandits, while traveling in the Bulgarian mountains. It looks like there is need of a few Stephen Decatur's to read a lesson to the Turkish outlaws, after the fashion of the one taught the Algerian pirates about one hundred years ago. Uncle Sam didn't stand such nonsense in his youthful days.

The long drawn out contest for the appointment to the receivership of the Oregon City land office has at last been settled in favor of Geo. W. Bibe, who is now postmaster at Sheridan, Hon. Wm. Galloway, the present democratic incumbent has now held the office a year and a half over the time of his appointment, because a republican successor could not be agreed upon by our congressmen. Yamhill seems to have a lien on the receivership.

The following is found in the penal code of New York state, there being similar laws in many other states: "A person concerned in the commission of a crime, whether he directly commits the offense, or aids and abets in its commission, and whether present or absent, and a person who directly or indirectly counsels, commands, induces, or procures another to commit a crime, is a principal." If strict observance of such a law were practiced it would be some time before anarchists went to any particular trouble to celebrate the deed of Czolgosz. As it is now they get the desired notoriety without the penalty.

Of all states, it is well that the anarchist assassin did his work in New York. The law of that state provides that no notice of the time of execution shall be publicly given except to the persons invited or permitted to be present, said persons consisting of not more than two ministers or priests named by the criminal, and seven assistants or deputy sheriffs appointed by the agent and warden. The law further provides that no account of the details, beyond the statement that the convict was on such a day duly executed, according to law, shall be published in any newspaper. By such a laudable measure, the glory and incentive of anarchy is largely suppressed.

Though entitled by the protection of the law she decries, it is a pity some statute can not be discovered or interpreted whereby Emma Goldman may receive just punishment for her infamous deeds. In an issue last week of the Chicago anarchist organ, the first published since the assassination, she praises Czolgosz as "a soul in pain in this cold world of ours" before which she shows in reverence. In the same paper she had the base impudence to advertise to deliver the lecture which Czolgosz said first incited him to commit the assassination. The fact that such a condition can exist in this country of ours is simply maddening. The poor devil Czolgosz will soon pay the penalty for his crime while this female wretch of much more guilt, freely goes about landing the deed for which the assassin dies, and inciting others to similar crimes.

The New York Journal, at whose hands President McKinley suffered such vilification, has lately received some rather severe call downs. When arranging for a symposium on President McKinley after the latter's death, the managing editor wrote to the head of Syracuse University for a contribution and received the following reply from that gentleman: "Will you please never send to this office any matter bearing the imprint of the New York Journal? I loath the New York Journal as I do the unspeakable wretch who shot our great President. I believe your paper more than any other agent in this country, helped to make the conditions which encouraged such assassination. To have our institutions commended by such a paper would be a burning disgrace." A general and liberal dose of such treatment would tend to soften the color of the yellow journals.

While seeking the means of stifling anarchy existing throughout the country, the place where work is needed most and can be made most effective should not be overlooked and that is at Castle Garden, New York, where the sum of Europe flows in upon us unchallenged. The annual report of the Commissioner of Immigration at that place is alarming. Not that it shows conditions to be so very much worse than for several years back, but that it now shows up vividly new dangers, in the light of recent events. For instance it is shown that nearly thirty thousand of the immigration of last year over the year before is from Southern Italy. The report says, "The conclusion unfortunately is unavoidable that our immigration is constantly increasing in illiteracy. Not only are we drawing more and more from the countries where illiteracy is high, but also the immigrants themselves are showing higher percentages of illiteracy. Nearly one-half of our storage immigrants now present an illiteracy of from 40 to over 50 per cent." The question of the restriction of immigration is an old one, but time and the rise of new questions have not lessened its importance. It is more the paramount question at present than it has ever been.

THE MCKINLEY ISLANDS. It is a happy suggestion that the name of the Philippines should be changed to the McKinley islands. The present title commemorates the reign of a powerful Spanish tyrant, one of the most unlovable figures in European history. There are peculiarly strong reasons why the name of McKinley should be applied to the archipelago now that it is a part of the territory of the United States. The late President faithfully represented the honor and genius of the American people when he decided that the treaty with Spain should include the acquisition of the islands by this country. No problem of his administration caused President McKinley more anxious thought than the course to be pursued in regard to the unusually populous islands on the other side of the Pacific. The situation was a new one in national affairs. Circumstances required the President personally to think out the policy, to exercise the initiative. The crisis was the most remarkable one of his term. He was weighed and not found wanting.

For his decision as to the future of the Philippines, President McKinley went as his invariable habit, to the American people. They were not, and never have been, in favor of shirking a just responsibility because it involves great trouble and expense. The Philippines were not in the public mind when the war with Spain began. They quickly fell into our hands through a brilliant feat of arms and upon us thereafter rested the duty of retaining and governing them, or casting them upon the world a chaotic mass of diverse tribes, warring with each other and threatening to be a formidable danger in the Pacific to all civilization. Duty to the people and fidelity to American history dictated President McKinley's course in the Philippines. His profound insight into the American character made them a part of the United States. His name, far above all others, is the one they should bear, and the one of which they will be forever proud.—Globe Democrat.

The McKinley's Little Girl. The National Magazine, of Boston, has the unique magazine feature of the month. This is a portrait of McKinley's little daughter, Katie, who died at the age of three and a half years. The portrait, which has never before been published, adorns the first page of the National Magazine for October.

"It shows," says The National, "a sweet, serene little face, with tender, trustful eyes and rosy lips. Rich, wavy hair, parted at the middle, falls down over the shoulders, clad in some fleecy, white stuff. She is, in all her features, the youthful image of her father, blending with his strength something of the subtly sweet grace and charm of her mother." Persons wishing to obtain a copy of the magazine containing this portrait and 60 pages of other McKinley pictures as well, should send 10 cents in stamps to The National Magazine, 41 West First St., Boston, Mass.
