CANCER

Sufferers from this horrible malady nearly always inherit it—not necessarily from the parents, but may be from some remote ancestor. For Cancer often runs through several generations. This deadly poison may lay dormant in the blood for years, or until you reach middle life, then the first little sore or ulcer makes its appearance—or a swollen gland in the breast, or some other part of the body, gives the first warning.

To cure Cancer thoroughly and permanently all the poisonous virus must be eliminated from the blood—every vestige of it driven out. This S. S. S. does, and is the only medicine that can reach the seat, eradicate blood troubles like this. When all the poison has been forced out of the system the Cancer heals, and the disease never returns.

Cancer begins often in a small way, as the following letter from Mrs. Shirer shows:

A small pimple came on my jaw about a inch below the ear on the left side of my face. It gave me no pain or inconvenience, and I should have forgotten about it had it not begun to swell, becoming very painful. The Cancer began to eat and spread, until it was as large as a half dollar when I heard of S. S. S. and determined to give it a fair trial, and it was remarkable what a wonderful effect it had from the very beginning: the sore began to heal and after taking a few bottles disappeared entirely. This was two years ago. I have since had no signs of the Cancer, and my general health continues good.—Mrs. A. Shirer, La Plata, Mo.

S. S. S. is the greatest of all blood purifiers, and the only one guaranteed purely vegetable. Send for our free book on Cancer, containing valuable and interesting information about this disease, and write our physicians about your case. We make no charge for medical advice.

BIT FOR BOOKWORMS

Kipling has written a story of the South African war which he puts into the mouth of a Sikh.

There will be issued in London a volume containing extracts from the late Emperor Frederick's diary relating to the campaign of 1896, his journey to the east in 1899, the war with France in 1870 and 1871, and his journey to Spain in 1883. The work is edited by Mme. Marguerite von Poschinger and translated from the German by Miss Frances A. Welby.

The Menasha (Wis.) Evening Breeze contained the following notice of the death of the original of Mr. Dooley: "Lovers of the humorous and original writings of James McGarry, better known to the world as 'Dooley,' will mourn the loss of a man who, by his own peculiar gift, has ascended from a humble, unknown saloon-keeper to a world's famous author. It is said that many of the most humorous of his writings were produced while bolstered up in bed and in great bodily pain."

The London Athenaeum describes Maurice Hewlett, now that Stevenson is dead, as the prince of literary storytellers. There are two points involved, it says. One is that with Mr. Hewlett the primary interest is that of the story itself, and not, as with the most considerable of contemporary novelists, some issue of psychological analysis or philosophical idea which the story is merely designed to illustrate. His aim and his triumph is to rivet the attention to a succession of events, to launch it upon that swinging voyage among ebbing and flowing emotions which and not, of course, the bare succession of events—is the proper end of narrative art.

Here are a few epigrams taken from Gustave Vapereau, the French author of a Dictionary of Contemporaries: Women have a way of saying all and telling nothing; of saying nothing and telling all.

A woman wishes to find in the man she loves superiority of some kind—even in evil.

Women love us for our talents, and adore us for our faults.

A woman's success is not complete unless she has found some one who makes her suffer.

Nature has declared a prime inequality between man and woman—she is enchained by what she bestows; he is unchained by what he receives.

Wit throws out sparks, genius gives sunshine.

There are little things which are everything; they confer elegance on carriage, originality upon style, perfection upon work.

Nothing makes one doubt immortality more than the frivolity of thought among the majority of mankind.

Life is a river which depends less upon its source than upon its affluents.

Ivory from Bones.

An extensive and increasing industry has recently, according to a French report, become established in France to furnish an artificial substitute for natural ivory in view of the growing insufficiency of the latter to meet the demand of art and industry in the various applications. The greater number of products formerly employed in this line were obtained by injecting white-wash with chloride of lime under very strong pressure. At the Amsterdam exhibition, however, almost all the products which attracted so much attention had been prepared with the bones of sheep and the waste pieces of deer and kid skin. The bones are, for this purpose, macerated and bleached for a period of two weeks in chloride of lime, then heated by steam along with the skin, so as to form a fluid mass, and to this latter are added some quantities of alum. After having been subjected to these processes, the subsequent treatment consists in filtering the mass, drying it in the air and allowing it to harden in a bath of alum, the result being white tough plates, which are more easily worked for various objects than is the natural ivory.

The Driver's Point of View.

The hotel coach was filled with a crowd of happy, jubilant visitors, and the horses trotted splendidly up the hills. As each eminence was reached and at every turn in the road the crowd would burst forth into cries of wonder and delight at the magnificent scenes which burst upon their view. The mountain Jehu alone preserved a dignity and silence which rather awed the others. At length, after a particularly lovely view had been passed, one of the guests at the driver's left hand remarked:

"You don't seem to take much interest in the scenery. No doubt it's an old story to you."

The driver shook his head.

"No, that's not it," he answered. "I just don't care." Then he leaned a little closer and whispered, "But I know just how you folks must feel. You all come from a long distance just to see things, and you're bound to enjoy it anyhow so as to get your money's worth and not feel as though you were cheating yourselves. Oh," said the driver in a superior tone, "I don't mind it when I understand how 'tis."

Military Bicycles.

Both the bicycle and automobile are meeting with favor from the army authorities in Europe. The bicycle has ceased to be considered purely as a means of locomotion for pleasure, and is now regarded as an efficient mount for soldiers. For scouting and the conveyance of dispatches, the bicycle is without a rival, being noiseless, occupying small space and affording a very insignificant target to the rifle fire of the foe. It is reliable, and a bicycle company or division is very mobile. The wheel also affords the enormous advantage over the horse in that it requires no forage supplies.

Sweet-Potato Flour.

A company with a capital of $1,000,000 has been organized in Vineland, N. J., for the making of flour from sweet potatoes.

THERE'S A LOT IN A NAME.

Especially When It's Applied to a Drama—Case of Shore Acres.

"When Shakespeare asked the question 'What's in a name?' he little knew that in after years theatrical managers almost without exception would discover by experience that there's a great deal in a theatrical entertainment."

"Take, for instance, the most successful of the late James A. Herne's plays, 'Shore Acres.' Why, the name of that play was changed twice before it became a success.

"When Mr. Herne presented a piece called 'The Hawthorne' at the Grand Opera House in Chicago in 1895 it was not an instantaneous success. As a matter of fact Herne had not produced a real substantial success in some years previous to that time, although 'The Minute Men,' 'Margaret Fleming' and 'Drifting Apart' had met with favorable attention in many cities.

"There didn't seem to be any drawing power in the name 'The Hawthorne,' and the title of the piece was changed to 'Shore Acres Subdivision.' The change didn't seem to have any effect upon the attendance while the piece remained on view in Chicago, at any rate, and it was decided to make another shift in title before the play was presented in Boston. In that city, under the name of 'Shore Acres,' Mr. Herne's play made the greatest hit of the year. It came back to Chicago and was accepted at the value placed on the play in Boston and New York.

"Hearts of Oak," which has always been credited to jointly to James A. Herne and David Belasco, was originally presented under the title of 'The Mariner's Compass.' 'Hearts of Oak' was not presented in this country until 1878, at Hamilton's Theater in Chicago, but the play called 'The Mariner's Compass,' which was tried in England several years before without attracting any great amount of attention, had all of the scenes and incidents which made 'Hearts of Oak' one of the greatest drawing cards among the ten-compelling dramas of the past two decades.

"Hearts of Oak" is really a felicitous title. It suggests a whole lot. But what does 'The Mariner's Compass' suggest? A storm at sea or something of the sort, and we have many storms at sea.

"The World," one of the most successful of the typical English melodramas," says a writer in the Denver Times, "about the first of the kind to be presented at the Adelphi Theater in London to reach this country, was originally called 'A Wreck at Sea.' It was J. Z. Little who suggested the change in title. Known as 'The World' the play that failed to impress itself upon theatergoers when presented under the title 'A Wreck at Sea' found great favor."

RECENT JUDICIAL DECISIONS.

A promise to deliver coal in the future is held, in Tradesmen's National Bank vs. Curtis (N. Y.), 52 L. R. A. 430, to be a sufficient consideration to support an acceptance of a draft for the purchase price.

The right of a wife to maintain an action for the alienation of her husband's affections is sustained in Metzer vs. Betser (Ill.), 52 L. R. A. 639, under a statute giving married women the right to sue as if sole.

A clause in an insurance policy making it void in case of its assignment is held, in Whiting vs. Burkhardt (Mass.), 52 L. R. A. 788, not to apply to an assignment of his interest by a mortgagee who is entitled to receive the proceeds to the extent of his interest.

A person who has contracted to build a house and furnish the materials for a fixed sum has an insurable interest in the value thereof, though he has received nearly payment of the price in full, holds the Supreme court of South Carolina in the case of Ulmer vs. Phoenix Fire Insurance Company (39 S. E. Rep. 712).

A street railway company is held, in Groves vs. Louisville Railroad Company (Ky.), 52 L. R. A. 448, to be liable for a defect in a street caused by the projection of the rails, although they were originally properly laid, where the surface of the street had fallen away from them. The authorities on the question of the liability of a street railway company for defect in track or street are collated in a note to this case.

The inability of students to acquire a residence for voting purposes merely by attending an institution of learning is held, in re Barry (N. Y.), 52 L. R. A. 531, to extend to students in a Roman Catholic seminary studying for the priesthood, although each of them has renounced all other residence or home and on admission to the priesthood will continue in the seminary until assigned elsewhere by his ecclesiastical superiors.

What She Wanted.

A woman rushed into a Harlem drug store the other day. In one hand she carried an empty quart bottle and in the other she tightly grasped a five-cent piece.

"Let me have five cents' worth of ozone at once," she said to the druggist.

"What did you say, madam?" the druggist asked.

"Why, madam, there's ozone in your bottle now."

"Sir, I do not want to be insulted," replied the woman indignantly. "I know what the doctor told me to get, and if you don't keep it let me know. Have you got any ozone or not?"

"Well," said the druggist very deliberately, "ozone" is an element in the air we breathe, and unless the air in your bottle has become contaminated it has about as high a percentage of it as any I have in the store. I would suggest that possibly your physician meant that you should get some benzoin."

"Oh, yes," hastily replied the woman, "that's it. I knew it was something like ozone."

She took the five cents' worth of benzoin, which was almost lost sight of on account of the ozone which still remained in the quart bottle.
