FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1902.

It matters not whether the vulgar, low bred Tillman confesses to being in contempt in the United States Senate. What's more, he is in contempt in the eyes of decent people, the country over.

Uncle Sam is now playing the gracious host to his friend Prince Henry of Germany and his attendants. Henry is likely to become something of a bore to unpretentious Americans before he leaves, but on every hand he will find himself royally entertained.

A Philadelphia lady, with wide experience in the schools and with children of this country, advocates the introduction of a new feature in the public school system, nothing more nor less than a "course in manners." Another implied indictment of the American home.

And at last Miss Stone has really been released. If the lady begins to estimate her worth according to the price put up for her ransom, she undoubtedly thinks pretty well of herself. It is to be hoped that this implied valuation of a common every day sort of a woman, won't set a precedent that will give rise to troublesome notions in the heads of young ladies over here at home.

In complimenting its city on the maintenance of a wide-a-wake commercial club, a Salem Exchange remarks very pertinently that people coming west want to locate in a town that has the pluck to maintain a live commercial organization that is ready to welcome the newcomer and encourage him to establish himself in business. Though as a city, Newberg does not make very loud pretensions, the town is large enough to maintain an aggressive push club or some such enterprising organization. It takes organized effort to advertise and build up a place.

One of the leading democratic papers of the South reads a lesson in no uncertain sound to some of the members of its own party in the United States senate. It says, "Democratic support of Filipino hostility and the encouragement of their resistance is as mad a folly as the insistence some years ago that this country should descend to the cheap money basis. How can we expect the people at large to trust the government of the Republic into the hands of men who applaud foreigners when they ambush and kill American soldiers? Some way must be found to stop the mouths of blatant demagogues of the Carmack and Turner stripe." It is gratifying to know that the democratic party is still leavened with old fashioned patriotism.

Representative Wheeler of Kentucky, continues to hear things drop as a result of his wild harangue in congress against what he was pleased to call "dunkyism." Pertinent to the effusion of this "boorish, blustering Kentuckian," the Indianapolis Journal very sensibly says, "The 'splendid isolation' of the United States, which once existed as a matter of necessity, came to an end when the country began to take its place upon the high seas. With our commerce extending to all the countries of the earth friendly relations with the governments of these countries are not only desirable but essential. If we are to have dealings with our neighbors we must be neighborly, and now and then show hospitality. In doing this we do not part with any of our national individuality, nor in any way 'lower our flag,' as the ridiculous advocates of rudeness to visitors affect to believe."

Relative to the Mormon question, interest in which is generally increasing, it is encouraging to note, the Globe-Democrat says it will be harder to hit the polygamists of Utah, if there are any such, now than it was while they were a territory. The state government and state courts are controlled by the Mormons. All Mormons never were polygamists. Those who were polygamists were understood to have given up polygamy before Utah entered statehood in 1896. The renunciation of that practice permanently was made a condition precedent to the erection of Utah into a state. The state-makers pledged themselves to prevent polygamy afterward, and to extirpate it if it should arise in their state. The country took the Mormons at their word. If they have deceived the country—and many persons on the ground say they have—the proposition for a constitutional amendment will find many supporters. Let the polygamists, if there are any, beware.

One of the discouraging things from a political standpoint, which confronts the nation, is the spirit of narrow partisanship, in which national legislation is enacted at Washington. As an instance of this fact the vote on the amendment to the Philippine bill, giving certain tariff concessions, admirably serves to illustrate. Washington correspondence says the amendment was defeated by democratic votes; that they were against it, with few exceptions, because it would have made the bill better. What a spectacle! United States democratic senators, having sworn to strive for the "general welfare" of the people, refusing to vote for a low tariff amendment, in line with their own pet policy, simply because it would have improved a republican measure! Nor is such blind partisanship peculiar to democrats. Some republicans doubtless voted against the same amendment, for fear that they would appear to be not in harmony with party procedure. An occasional shaking up in the senate and a breaking away from strict party lines on questions of national importance would inspire the people with more faith in the patriotism and honesty of purpose of their national representatives.

THE MERCHANTS' PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATION.

The credit system having been so long in vogue, it seems a paramount part of our business systems. Whether it has grown from the custom of running in debt, when the purse is short, and hoping dame fortune will smile our way when pay day arrives, or whether it is an outgrowth of existing economic conditions, we are not just now ready to answer or discuss at any length. That it is upon us, that it is a condition that exists, is patent to all. It certainly serves a purpose, convenient, and many times beneficial to the consumer. Not all of us have incomes, which are planked down in spot cash when the day's work is completed; on the other hand we are exceedingly fortunate to have a salary coming once a month, which is sufficient to meet the exigencies of the following month and tide us over until next pay day. Often sickness and misfortune and other unforseen demands throw us behind, making it absolutely necessary for us to ask our merchants to carry us for a short time. In such cases it seems perfectly legitimate, that the benevolent spirit of the merchant should yield to these reasonable demands, especially if the circumstances are of a nature to warrant a settlement at the time specified. Society seems infested with parasitical beings, ever ready to take advantage of all opportunities, whereby they may draw their sustenance with the least effort. No existing custom offers such opportunity for the worthless human parasite to ply his nefarious, vagabondal and underhanded methods, of existing off the earnings of others, as does the credit system. Every community has its share of those whose aims and purposes in life are to cheat their fellow men wherever and by whatever means offered, thus making it more difficult to maintain those methods or customs calculated to be conducive to the welfare of the honest man.

The Merchants' Protective Association of Newberg, was organized to meet the existing abuses of the credit system. Its aims are not to make it difficult for the honest laborers or producers to get credit, but rather to protect them, by separating the sheep from the goats. Also for the protection of the merchant, who is so often, (through lack of knowledge gained only by experience and acquaintance) at the mercy (?) of the prodigal, and professional credit worker. Those who get credit on promises which they know they can never fulfill, or if they could, never intend to, certainly deserve their names stricken from the credit list, and advertised among all reputable business firms. Active competition and very close margins make it necessary for merchants to protect themselves from this class of patrons. If they would meet their bills and keep their stocks from the sheriff's hands, prompt settlement of accounts is absolutely necessary. The association desires to build up and protect the trade of Newberg, and will carefully avoid any action in the collection of accounts and protection of its members, that are not wholly legitimate and beneficial to all parties, but it will not in any way tolerate careless negligence in the settlement of accounts.

"BARTENDER."

FOUNDERS OF NEW CITY.

Dr. Parker and Dr. Littlefield Are Stirring Things Up In Arizona.

Under the above caption, Thursday's Oregonian, February 20, takes from the Arizona Republican an account of how two Oregon doctors have founded a city down in Arizona. However, it credits Portland as the home of both "medicos" while Newberg must enter its plea as the source of one of the enterprising physicians.

In speaking of the formal inauguration of the new city, the Republican says, "This foundation of the great municipality was laid the other day on Crescent Canal, near the Clayson ranch, and a thrilling account of the day's proceedings is furnished by a special correspondent, so that tourists who pass that way may not overlook it. It has not yet been placed on the map. A new villa was launched on the sea of desert cities up on the Crescent Canal Sunday afternoon, when 'Parkerfield,' a composite derivative of the names of the founders, Dr. E. H. Parker and Dr. Littlefield, of Portland, Or., was dedicated with appropriate exercises and raising of the Stars and Stripes to the head of a monumental mast."

The account tells of the program of songs and continues:

"Dr. Parker acted as master of ceremonies and conducted the exercises in a masterful and pleasing manner, which made everyone feel that it was good to be there to witness the founding of what promises to be a model residence city."

The account says that an oration was delivered by George W. Crawford, of Chicago, and several short talks were given. Dr. Littlefield, Jr., gave a recitation, and the exercises closed with three rousing cheers for "Old Glory" and for the prospective city.

Yamhill's Taxes.

The total tax to be collected in Yamhill county this year is $113,547.12. This is about $8,000 above the tax roll of last year. Sheriff Sitton and deputy began collecting taxes on Saturday, and the first two days had received about $800. It is discovered that the new tax law will work an unlooked-for hardship. Cities and school districts, have made their levies upon a basis that would bring in an estimated sum of money. The three per cent rebate granted for taxes paid before March 15th will operate to lessen that sum, and the penalty charge of 10 per cent for failure to pay, does not fall to the school district or city. The interest charge of 12 per cent, however, does, as will be seen from the wording, which is as follows: "Upon all delinquent taxes there shall be collected from the taxpayers of such taxes, for the benefit of the county, ten per centum as a penalty, and for the benefit of the county or other public corporation which shall have an interest in any portion of such taxes, interest at the rate of 12 per cent per annum on such taxes from the date on which they became delinquent till their payment." There has been some doubt in the minds of some, also, as to whether the interest is to be figured on both the penalty and taxes, or on the taxes alone. It should be clear from the preceding quotation that it can only be figured on the amount of the tax.—Reporter.

MCMINNVILLE CORRESPONDENCE.

Mrs. Gustin, state president of the Rebekahs, visited the McMinnville lodge last Friday.

The machinery of the Yamhill Coal & Oil Co., was side tracked in McMinnville a day or two the first of the week, and attracted considerable attention.

McMinnville has a genuine case of small pox which has caused some excitement. The authorities have placed a strict quarantine, however, and but little fear of the spread of the disease.

The try out at the college last Saturday evening to select three persons to represent McMinnville College in the Inter-collegiate Debates, resulted in the selection of Messrs. McKillop, Dike and Dodson.

The boat came up from Dayton Monday returning in the evening. This is the first time it has been able to pass the locks for about two weeks on account of high water, and it will probably be several days before it will be able to reach McMinnville again.

SPRINGBROOK ITEMS.

Rain.

Wm. Manning of Newberg, attended the meetings here this week.

Considerable interest is being taken in the meetings that are being held here.

Mrs. Warren went down to Portland Monday morning, intending to make her home there with her daughter Mrs. J. A. Jones for some time.

Mr. A. L. Watson who has an instrument for measuring rain fall, reports nearly one inch in twenty-four hours, beginning Tuesday morning.

There was a party at Grant Heaters last Saturday evening. All report a pleasant time. SNOWY.

The Famous Shasta Route.

In going over the famous "Shasta Route" of the Southern Pacific Co. the traveler ever finds something new to excite his admiration and interest. Starting at Portland, one traverses the whole length of the Willamette Valley, the gem of the Northwest. Mt. Hood, Mt. Jefferson and the Three Sisters and other snow-capped peaks are kept in sight for hours. The beautiful valleys of the Umpqua and Rogue rivers, with their orchards of prunes, peaches, apples and other fruits are a delight in themselves. The crossing of the great mountain barrier between Oregon and California reveals the grandest mountain scenery in the United States. The wonderful turnings, twistings and doublings of the railroad brings into view a grand array of towering mountains and profound gorges into which we gaze from dizzy heights; forest clad mountain slopes stretching up to the line of perpetual snow, and the foaming mountain streams dashing fiercely down deep canyons, now and then stopping for a short rest in some quiet pool. After a day's enjoyment of old Mt. Shasta, the finest peak on the continent, we drop rapidly down the canyon of the Sacramento to the broad plains of the Sacramento Valley in California, and thence through vineyards and orchards to San Francisco.
